

WARNING SENT TO THE CHINESE.

Mongolian Government Has Its Memory Jogged on an Existing Agreement With U. S.

MUST NOT VIOLATE TREATY.

America Will Insist Upon Full Observance of the Tien Tsin Compact of 1858

Shanghai, Aug. 11.—The alarm regarding the impending commercial crisis in consequence of the anti-American boycott is increasing now that the information has got abroad that President Roosevelt has instructed Minister Rockhill to warn the Chinese government that America will insist upon the full observance by China of article 15 of the Tien Tsin treaty of 1858.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Article 15 of the Tien Tsin treaty provides that "at each of the ports open to commerce, citizens of the United States shall be permitted to import from abroad and sell, purchase and export all merchandise of which the importation or exportation is not prohibited by the laws of the empire."

The state department some days ago directed the attention of Minister Rockhill to this particular article in view of the published article that it was the intention of those managing the boycott against American goods to interfere with the landing of American goods from vessels in Chinese ports. It is the opinion of the state department that any such action would be in violation of article 15, and Minister Rockhill was instructed to call the attention of the Chinese government to these representations and the treaty with a view of preventing any interference in the landing of American goods in China.

It is supposed at the department that the Chinese government has already taken action on Minister Rockhill's communication and officials at definite ports have been instructed to see that the provisions of the treaty are not violated. No complaints have been received at the state department indicating that the threats of interference with American commerce have been carried out, but it was to forestall anything of this kind that the instructions were sent to Minister Rockhill.

CALLED ON ALICE

Manila Rough Riders Pay Homage to President's Daughter.

Manila, Aug. 11.—The rough riders now residing here, headed by Col. Alexander Brodie, ex-governor of Arizona, and now attached to the military secretary's department, and Gov. George Curry of the island of Samar, called upon Miss Roosevelt today and discussed the days they served under her distinguished father. They presented her with a photograph of Manila's polo launch, named the Bucky O'Neil. Rear-Admiral Train and Representative Foss, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, who is naturally interested in naval matters, paid a visit to the Obispo, and the United States club held a reception. An executive session of the commission was held all day, the business being devoted to the cost of the insular government. Representative Grosvenor has issued a call for data regarding the shipping question, which will be taken up next. On the night of Thursday, July 10, the Philippine ladies of the city entertained Miss Roosevelt at a prominent native residence, where a brilliant reception was held.

PREACHER'S SON NOW.

Member of Clergymen's Family
Mixed Up in Taggart Case.

Wooner, O., Aug. 11.—At the opening of court today in the Taggart divorce case Judge Thawon, chief justice of the Ohio supreme court, ruled out the testimony of Detective Mabo and Morris, by whom the plaintiff expected to show collusion between Mrs. Taggart and the defendant. The ground was that the young man in question, son of a Wooner clergyman, had not been named in the pleadings. On resuming his testimony the captain referred to the Matanzas champagne supper. The next morning he told his wife it would be better to send one of her visiting women friends home to her husband if that was the kind of parties they expected to have. This was the left neck Mrs. Taggart had not commented on the episode, though witness had told her it was most disgusting and expressed the hope that no one would find it out. Capt. Taggart then testified as to various improper actions of his wife, naming various co-respondents and his inability to keep her away from them.

Navy Wireless Record.

Washington, Aug. 11.—According to a report received at the navy department ships of the North American Atlantic fleet have communicated with each other by wireless telegraph at a distance of about 262 miles. This is announced by the navy department at which wireless messages have been sent from ship to ship in the navy.

Lost in Lolo Mountains.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Harry Thompson, wife of ex-Sheriff Thompson, Mrs. William Wallace of New York, Mrs. Samuel Walters of Missoula, a girl cook and a little boy are lost in the Lolo mountains, 45 miles south of Missoula, and parties are now searching the hills in an endeavor to locate them. The party left Lolo Springs Thursday morning to pick huckleberries and enjoy an outing. They had not returned by 10 o'clock this afternoon and searchers were sent out after them. Some fears are expressed as to the safety of the party as forest fires are raging along the divide.

End of Noted Murder Case.

Turin, Italy, Aug. 11.—The jury today found five persons accused of the murder of Count Ron Martini guilty, with extenuating circumstances. Fullosteri, the victim's brother-in-law, and Dr. Naldi, an accomplice, were each sentenced to 30 years' solitary confinement. Countess Theo II. Linda Ron

We are friends to you and your grocer: faithful to both.

Shilling's Food is a good food to measure by.

OLD PAINT SHOPS GO UP IN SMOKE.

Wrong Address Given When Alarm
Was Sent Into the Fire
Department.

Fourteen pounds pressure in the available water supply and a fierce blaze in an oil-painted paint shop combined to give the fire ladders a hard fight last night at the Oregon Short Line yards. To make things a little worse, there was a mistake in sending the alarm, the fire department first lined up on First West and Fourth North instead of Fourth West and First North. This gave the fire the start that made the work hard.

So low was the pressure that the engines took in more wind than water and the resulting stream would hardly suffice for a good sized garden. With their conditions confronting them, the firemen were of necessity forced to turn their attention to the buildings near by and protect them, leaving the main blaze to work its own plans. The principal cause of the disaster was the fact that the fire was started in the paint shop nearest to the warehouse in the vicinity.

After about an hour, the water department having been notified, the pressure was increased, and the firemen were then able to do more effective work. The actual loss being about $100. The paint shops were burned to a pile of ashes.

The fire presented many spectacular features that Lincoln J. Carter would have gone into raptures over. A tremendous crowd gathered at the yards, and the firemen were temporarily stalled. Just as the San Pedro limited for Los Angeles pulled out the fire was at its height. In order to protect the paint shops and the warehouse, the firemen used the hose to play over the entire train. The glare in the burning water on the train as it steamed by was as pretty a sight as one could want to see. A large electric light pole on the grounds burned in two near the base and came falling with a crash into the embers, sending fire high into the air. The burning buildings scattered the crowd in an instant, and children and parents were scattered long, adding to the general excitement at the fire.

Excursion to Canada
August 14th.

Via Oregon Short Line. Following rates will prevail from Salt Lake: Stirling $30.95
Raymond $31.35
McGrath $31.35
Cardston $33.30
Proportionate rates from other stations.

Trains leave 11:45 p. m.
Tickets good for return until September 15th. See O. S. L. Agents. City Ticket Office, 201 Main Street.

Vocal and Instrumental Concert
Saturday, Aug. 13, 4:30 p. m.

RESPECTFULLY DECLINED.

Our Manuscript Expert Takes Us Into
His Confidence.

I don't like articles written in blue ink paper, yet get on all right, as I have occasionally had them. I have ruled in pencil is also inadvisable for writing contributions on. But it isn't exactly barred. Nothing is. If something brilliant enough came up chalked on a blackboard I dare say we would have it.

The trouble is these old things are never brilliant. These senders are always amateurs who have read of the odds and ends on which great writers wrote in the past, and see that they can do it.

But the emulation never extends beyond the writing materials employed.

To get an article printed it is up to it in type to go to an extreme. It is to be printed in a large, bold, and not necessary. An article is written and not rolled up as well as anything.

Another piece of advice telegraphed up, as they have been sometimes. There is seldom anything in them, and they take their chance with the usual rejection.

Once I got a post card with a single word on it. I didn't know what to make of it. The next day I received another, and the day after that yet another. I beg to profess. After we'd had a postal card daily for over a year, the sender wrote me a short story. The writer thought it was a joke, and he rolled up, didn't see the joke, nor anything in the story, which went back.

Another piece of advice written in an article written in what he declared to be his "life blood." I was impressed till I had the article analyzed, and it turned out to be red paint. I didn't accept that article either.

I was sorely tempted when I got a letter saying: "You beggar! I'll make you do it." I made a story written on a 6-point note. If I didn't like it I should have sent it back. I'm proud to say my virtue and my fear of the office rules prevailed, and I sent the story back with the usual rejection form.

It was a mean thing of that alleged man who had "broken" with his girl, sent up a bundle of letters to him. In the bundle was a picture of a girl, and an amusement from them. "I've told her that I've done—well, there he some 'bears'!" the writer arrogantly added.

The idea was ridiculous, of course, but by the same post came a pretty scented note, imploring us not to use any of the letters. I took the liberty of sending the bundle of letters back to the girl not the man.

I don't like articles written crosswise on one side, or often to be sent in. I would prefer them well penciled across old newspapers, as I've had them more than once in the past.

Once it nearly broke my heart to reject an article, which, though accompanied by no appeal, was a picture of a girl. It was written across the back of unpaid bills.

Articles we don't want and won't have are those abusing the leaders of any political party, or a picture of a girl. We require any articles abusing anybody or anything.

Nor do we like anything technical. Doctors, lawyers, engineers, and any other professional men whom we can get contributions which, no doubt, are models in their way, and would be jumped at by a layman. We don't want them. We often are after we reject them, judging from the number of them I afterwards find in print in those journals. But they are not in ours.

Big words, majestic sentences, classical allusions, and the like, are not wanted. We want a plain, simple, and direct style. When a small boy had an idea that all editors were profound grammarians, but his letters were rejected, he was told to write in plain language.

OLD PAINT SHOPS GO UP IN SMOKE.

Wrong Address Given When Alarm
Was Sent Into the Fire
Department.

Fourteen pounds pressure in the available water supply and a fierce blaze in an oil-painted paint shop combined to give the fire ladders a hard fight last night at the Oregon Short Line yards. To make things a little worse, there was a mistake in sending the alarm, the fire department first lined up on First West and Fourth North instead of Fourth West and First North. This gave the fire the start that made the work hard.

So low was the pressure that the engines took in more wind than water and the resulting stream would hardly suffice for a good sized garden. With their conditions confronting them, the firemen were of necessity forced to turn their attention to the buildings near by and protect them, leaving the main blaze to work its own plans. The principal cause of the disaster was the fact that the fire was started in the paint shop nearest to the warehouse in the vicinity.

After about an hour, the water department having been notified, the pressure was increased, and the firemen were then able to do more effective work. The actual loss being about $100. The paint shops were burned to a pile of ashes.

The fire presented many spectacular features that Lincoln J. Carter would have gone into raptures over. A tremendous crowd gathered at the yards, and the firemen were temporarily stalled. Just as the San Pedro limited for Los Angeles pulled out the fire was at its height. In order to protect the paint shops and the warehouse, the firemen used the hose to play over the entire train. The glare in the burning water on the train as it steamed by was as pretty a sight as one could want to see. A large electric light pole on the grounds burned in two near the base and came falling with a crash into the embers, sending fire high into the air. The burning buildings scattered the crowd in an instant, and children and parents were scattered long, adding to the general excitement at the fire.

Excursion to Canada
August 14th.

Via Oregon Short Line. Following rates will prevail from Salt Lake: Stirling $30.95
Raymond $31.35
McGrath $31.35
Cardston $33.30
Proportionate rates from other stations.

Trains leave 11:45 p. m.
Tickets good for return until September 15th. See O. S. L. Agents. City Ticket Office, 201 Main Street.

Vocal and Instrumental Concert
Saturday, Aug. 13, 4:30 p. m.

RESPECTFULLY DECLINED.

Our Manuscript Expert Takes Us Into
His Confidence.

I don't like articles written in blue ink paper, yet get on all right, as I have occasionally had them. I have ruled in pencil is also inadvisable for writing contributions on. But it isn't exactly barred. Nothing is. If something brilliant enough came up chalked on a blackboard I dare say we would have it.

The trouble is these old things are never brilliant. These senders are always amateurs who have read of the odds and ends on which great writers wrote in the past, and see that they can do it.

But the emulation never extends beyond the writing materials employed.

To get an article printed it is up to it in type to go to an extreme. It is to be printed in a large, bold, and not necessary. An article is written and not rolled up as well as anything.

Another piece of advice telegraphed up, as they have been sometimes. There is seldom anything in them, and they take their chance with the usual rejection.

Once I got a post card with a single word on it. I didn't know what to make of it. The next day I received another, and the day after that yet another. I beg to profess. After we'd had a postal card daily for over a year, the sender wrote me a short story. The writer thought it was a joke, and he rolled up, didn't see the joke, nor anything in the story, which went back.

Another piece of advice written in an article written in what he declared to be his "life blood." I was impressed till I had the article analyzed, and it turned out to be red paint. I didn't accept that article either.

I was sorely tempted when I got a letter saying: "You beggar! I'll make you do it." I made a story written on a 6-point note. If I didn't like it I should have sent it back. I'm proud to say my virtue and my fear of the office rules prevailed, and I sent the story back with the usual rejection form.

It was a mean thing of that alleged man who had "broken" with his girl, sent up a bundle of letters to him. In the bundle was a picture of a girl, and an amusement from them. "I've told her that I've done—well, there he some 'bears'!" the writer arrogantly added.

The idea was ridiculous, of course, but by the same post came a pretty scented note, imploring us not to use any of the letters. I took the liberty of sending the bundle of letters back to the girl not the man.

I don't like articles written crosswise on one side, or often to be sent in. I would prefer them well penciled across old newspapers, as I've had them more than once in the past.

Once it nearly broke my heart to reject an article, which, though accompanied by no appeal, was a picture of a girl. It was written across the back of unpaid bills.

Articles we don't want and won't have are those abusing the leaders of any political party, or a picture of a girl. We require any articles abusing anybody or anything.

Nor do we like anything technical. Doctors, lawyers, engineers, and any other professional men whom we can get contributions which, no doubt, are models in their way, and would be jumped at by a layman. We don't want them. We often are after we reject them, judging from the number of them I afterwards find in print in those journals. But they are not in ours.

Big words, majestic sentences, classical allusions, and the like, are not wanted. We want a plain, simple, and direct style. When a small boy had an idea that all editors were profound grammarians, but his letters were rejected, he was told to write in plain language.

OLD PAINT SHOPS GO UP IN SMOKE.

Wrong Address Given When Alarm
Was Sent Into the Fire
Department.

Fourteen pounds pressure in the available water supply and a fierce blaze in an oil-painted paint shop combined to give the fire ladders a hard fight last night at the Oregon Short Line yards. To make things a little worse, there was a mistake in sending the alarm, the fire department first lined up on First West and Fourth North instead of Fourth West and First North. This gave the fire the start that made the work hard.

So low was the pressure that the engines took in more wind than water and the resulting stream would hardly suffice for a good sized garden. With their conditions confronting them, the firemen were of necessity forced to turn their attention to the buildings near by and protect them, leaving the main blaze to work its own plans. The principal cause of the disaster was the fact that the fire was started in the paint shop nearest to the warehouse in the vicinity.

After about an hour, the water department having been notified, the pressure was increased, and the firemen were then able to do more effective work. The actual loss being about $100. The paint shops were burned to a pile of ashes.

The fire presented many spectacular features that Lincoln J. Carter would have gone into raptures over. A tremendous crowd gathered at the yards, and the firemen were temporarily stalled. Just as the San Pedro limited for Los Angeles pulled out the fire was at its height. In order to protect the paint shops and the warehouse, the firemen used the hose to play over the entire train. The glare in the burning water on the train as it steamed by was as pretty a sight as one could want to see. A large electric light pole on the grounds burned in two near the base and came falling with a crash into the embers, sending fire high into the air. The burning buildings scattered the crowd in an instant, and children and parents were scattered long, adding to the general excitement at the fire.

Excursion to Canada
August 14th.

Via Oregon Short Line. Following rates will prevail from Salt Lake: Stirling $30.95
Raymond $31.35
McGrath $31.35
Cardston $33.30
Proportionate rates from other stations.

Trains leave 11:45 p. m.
Tickets good for return until September 15th. See O. S. L. Agents. City Ticket Office, 201 Main Street.

Vocal and Instrumental Concert
Saturday, Aug. 13, 4:30 p. m.

RESPECTFULLY DECLINED.

Our Manuscript Expert Takes Us Into
His Confidence.

I don't like articles written in blue ink paper, yet get on all right, as I have occasionally had them. I have ruled in pencil is also inadvisable for writing contributions on. But it isn't exactly barred. Nothing is. If something brilliant enough came up chalked on a blackboard I dare say we would have it.

The trouble is these old things are never brilliant. These senders are always amateurs who have read of the odds and ends on which great writers wrote in the past, and see that they can do it.

But the emulation never extends beyond the writing materials employed.

To get an article printed it is up to it in type to go to an extreme. It is to be printed in a large, bold, and not necessary. An article is written and not rolled up as well as anything.

Another piece of advice telegraphed up, as they have been sometimes. There is seldom anything in them, and they take their chance with the usual rejection.

Once I got a post card with a single word on it. I didn't know what to make of it. The next day I received another, and the day after that yet another. I beg to profess. After we'd had a postal card daily for over a year, the sender wrote me a short story. The writer thought it was a joke, and he rolled up, didn't see the joke, nor anything in the story, which went back.

Another piece of advice written in an article written in what he declared to be his "life blood." I was impressed till I had the article analyzed, and it turned out to be red paint. I didn't accept that article either.

I was sorely tempted when I got a letter saying: "You beggar! I'll make you do it." I made a story written on a 6-point note. If I didn't like it I should have sent it back. I'm proud to say my virtue and my fear of the office rules prevailed, and I sent the story back with the usual rejection form.

It was a mean thing of that alleged man who had "broken" with his girl, sent up a bundle of letters to him. In the bundle was a picture of a girl, and an amusement from them. "I've told her that I've done—well, there he some 'bears'!" the writer arrogantly added.

The idea was ridiculous, of course, but by the same post came a pretty scented note, imploring us not to use any of the letters. I took the liberty of sending the bundle of letters back to the girl not the man.

I don't like articles written crosswise on one side, or often to be sent in. I would prefer them well penciled across old newspapers, as I've had them more than once in the past.

Once it nearly broke my heart to reject an article, which, though accompanied by no appeal, was a picture of a girl. It was written across the back of unpaid bills.

Articles we don't want and won't have are those abusing the leaders of any political party, or a picture of a girl. We require any articles abusing anybody or anything.

Nor do we like anything technical. Doctors, lawyers, engineers, and any other professional men whom we can get contributions which, no doubt, are models in their way, and would be jumped at by a layman. We don't want them. We often are after we reject them, judging from the number of them I afterwards find in print in those journals. But they are not in ours.

Big words, majestic sentences, classical allusions, and the like, are not wanted. We want a plain, simple, and direct style. When a small boy had an idea that all editors were profound grammarians, but his letters were rejected, he was told to write in plain language.

OLD PAINT SHOPS GO UP IN SMOKE.

Wrong Address Given When Alarm
Was Sent Into the Fire
Department.

Fourteen pounds pressure in the available water supply and a fierce blaze in an oil-painted paint shop combined to give the fire ladders a hard fight last night at the Oregon Short Line yards. To make things a little worse, there was a mistake in sending the alarm, the fire department first lined up on First West and Fourth North instead of Fourth West and First North. This gave the fire the start that made the work hard.

So low was the pressure that the engines took in more wind than water and the resulting stream would hardly suffice for a good sized garden. With their conditions confronting them, the firemen were of necessity forced to turn their attention to the buildings near by and protect them, leaving the main blaze to work its own plans. The principal cause of the disaster was the fact that the fire was started in the paint shop nearest to the warehouse in the vicinity.

After about an hour, the water department having been notified, the pressure was increased, and the firemen were then able to do more effective work. The actual loss being about $100. The paint shops were burned to a pile of ashes.

The fire presented many spectacular features that Lincoln J. Carter would have gone into raptures over. A tremendous crowd gathered at the yards, and the firemen were temporarily stalled. Just as the San Pedro limited for Los Angeles pulled out the fire was at its height. In order to protect the paint shops and the warehouse, the firemen used the hose to play over the entire train. The glare in the burning water on the train as it steamed by was as pretty a sight as one could want to see. A large electric light pole on the grounds burned in two near the base and came falling with a crash into the embers, sending fire high into the air. The burning buildings scattered the crowd in an instant, and children and parents were scattered long, adding to the general excitement at the fire.

Excursion to Canada
August 14th.

Via Oregon Short Line. Following rates will prevail from Salt Lake: Stirling $30.95
Raymond $31.35
McGrath $31.35
Cardston $33.30
Proportionate rates from other stations.

Trains leave 11:45 p. m.
Tickets good for return until September 15th. See O. S. L. Agents. City Ticket Office, 201 Main Street.

Vocal and Instrumental Concert
Saturday, Aug. 13, 4:30 p. m.

RESPECTFULLY DECLINED.

Our Manuscript Expert Takes Us Into
His Confidence.

I don't like articles written in blue ink paper, yet get on all right, as I have occasionally had them. I have ruled in pencil is also inadvisable for writing contributions on. But it isn't exactly barred. Nothing is. If something brilliant enough came up chalked on a blackboard I dare say we would have it.

The trouble is these old things are never brilliant. These senders are always amateurs who have read of the odds and ends on which great writers wrote in the past, and see that they can do it.

But the emulation never extends beyond the writing materials employed.

To get an article printed it is up to it in type to go to an extreme. It is to be printed in a large, bold, and not necessary. An article is written and not rolled up as well as anything.

Another piece of advice telegraphed up, as they have been sometimes. There is seldom anything in them, and they take their chance with the usual rejection.

Once I got a post card with a single word on it. I didn't know what to make of it. The next day I received another, and the day after that yet another. I beg to profess. After we'd had a postal card daily for over a year, the sender wrote me a short story. The writer thought it was a joke, and he rolled up, didn't see the joke, nor anything in the story, which went back.

Another piece of advice written in an article written in what he declared to be his "life blood." I was impressed till I had the article analyzed, and it turned out to be red paint. I didn't accept that article either.

I was sorely tempted when I got a letter saying: "You beggar! I'll make you do it." I made a story written on a 6-point note. If I didn't like it I should have sent it back. I'm proud to say my virtue and my fear of the office rules prevailed, and I sent the story back with the usual rejection form.

It was a mean thing of that alleged man who had "broken" with his girl, sent up a bundle of letters to him. In the bundle was a picture of a girl, and an amusement from them. "I've told her that I've done—well, there he some 'bears'!" the writer arrogantly added.

The idea was ridiculous, of course, but by the same post came a pretty scented note, imploring us not to use any of the letters. I took the liberty of sending the bundle of letters back to the girl not the man.

I don't like articles written crosswise on one side, or often to be sent in. I would prefer them well penciled across old newspapers, as I've had them more than once in the past.

Once it nearly broke my heart to reject an article, which, though accompanied by no appeal, was a picture of a girl. It was written across the back of unpaid bills.

Articles we don't want and won't have are those abusing the leaders of any political party, or a picture of a girl. We require any articles abusing anybody or anything.

Nor do we like anything technical. Doctors, lawyers, engineers, and any other professional men whom we can get contributions which, no doubt, are models in their way, and would be jumped at by a layman. We don't want them. We often are after we reject them, judging from the number of them I afterwards find in print in those journals. But they are not in ours.

Big words, majestic sentences, classical allusions, and the like, are not wanted. We want a plain, simple, and direct style. When a small boy had an idea that all editors were profound grammarians, but his letters were rejected, he was told to write in plain language.

OLD PAINT SHOPS GO UP IN SMOKE.

Wrong Address Given When Alarm
Was Sent Into the Fire
Department.

Fourteen pounds pressure in the available water supply and a fierce blaze in an oil-painted paint shop combined to give the fire ladders a hard fight last night at the Oregon Short Line yards. To make things a little worse, there was a mistake in sending the alarm, the fire department first lined up on First West and Fourth North instead of Fourth West and First North. This gave the fire the start that made the work hard.

So low was the pressure that the engines took in more wind than water and the resulting stream would hardly suffice for a good sized garden. With their conditions confronting them, the firemen were of necessity forced to turn their attention to the buildings near by and protect them, leaving the main blaze to work its own plans. The principal cause of the disaster was the fact that the fire was started in the paint shop nearest to the warehouse in the vicinity.

After about an hour, the water department having been notified, the pressure was increased, and the firemen were then able to do more effective work. The actual loss being about $100. The paint shops were burned to a pile of ashes.

The fire presented many spectacular features that Lincoln J. Carter would have gone into raptures over. A tremendous crowd gathered at the yards, and the firemen were temporarily stalled. Just as the San Pedro limited for Los Angeles pulled out the fire was at its height. In order to protect the paint shops and the warehouse, the firemen used the hose to play over the entire train. The glare in the burning water on the train as it steamed by was as pretty a sight as one could want to see. A large electric light pole on the grounds burned in two near the base and came falling with a crash into the embers, sending fire high into the air. The burning buildings scattered the crowd in an instant, and children and parents were scattered long, adding to the general excitement at the fire.

Excursion to Canada
August 14th.

Via Oregon Short Line. Following rates will prevail from Salt Lake: Stirling $30.95
Raymond $31.35
McGrath $31.35
Cardston $33.30
Proportionate rates from other stations.

Trains leave 11:45 p. m.
Tickets good for return until September 15th. See O. S. L. Agents. City Ticket Office, 201 Main Street.

Vocal and Instrumental Concert
Saturday, Aug. 13, 4: