NEWS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Maxwell, aged 35 years, was found yesterday beaten to death at her residence in Brooklyn, N.Y.

A statement recently published by an eastern paper that assistant surgeon Powell, U. S. A., formerly of Omaha, had deserted his post at Red Cloud, married a squaw and joined the Indians, is denied, and is said to have done Powell great injustice.

Captain Pollock left Ft. Laramie this morning to take command of the military post in the Black Hills.

Another official plunder has been discovered, this time an ex-U. S. marshal in Colorado, it is alleged, nabbed "Uncle Sam," of a large amount of means, while in the old gentleman's service.

The situation at Memphis and vicinity so far as floods are concerned, is considered critical; two thousand acres of cotton are covered with water.

Mr. G. W. Fishback rescued two persons—a lady and a boy—from drowning at Southampton, Ia., on Saturday last.

Theold struggle between labor and capital is now being waged at Fall River, Mass., between the mill owners and their workmen. The former say they have been controlled too long by the men, and that henceforth they will conduct their own business in their own way. Fifteen thousand working people are threatening disapproval of the administration of capital, by striking against a reduction of ten per cent.

Civil war is considered imminent in the United States of Columbia.

The City of New York has brought another suit against ex-Boss Tweed.

Further details of the late horrible Umatilla riot and massacre, San Miguel, Salvador, will be found in this afternoon's dispatches.

President Jewett, of Erie, broke his leg last night.

ROBBING UNCLE SAM.

A WASHINGTON special to the Chicago press is responsible for the assertion that Attorney General Pierrepont has found dishonesty in connection with the offices of U. S. marshals elsewhere besides the South. The latest discovery of the kind is in Colorado, in the executive affairs of ex-U. S. Marshal Shaffenburg, formerly tender of a large bear season, but who, it is said, after having been six or seven years in office as U. S. marshal, became one of the most opulent citizens of Denver, rivaling an ex-delegate to Congress in the splendor and magnificence of his entertainments.

It appears that Shaffenburg was allowed by the Department of Justice one dollar and a quarter per day for the maintenance of all prisoners from the time of their arrest by him until their liberation. This presented a tolerably fair chance to make money slowly, but then the tenure of office-holders in this republic is always uncertain, and so Shaffenburg, having an eye to business, determined to make the most of his day of opportunities, and it is alleged that he not only charged and obtained the dollars and a quarter per day for prisoners while they were in his custody, but also before he had arrested them, and also for numbers who never were so arrested at all, and that by these and kindred means he had fleeced "Uncle Sam" of thousands.

Now the master has come to light—that's what's the matter; Shaffenburg has been found out, and his arrest has been ordered; but the report received by telegraph this afternoon says that he is missing, that he can't be found, and it is not at all likely that Denver will be honored again with his presence, or that her citizens will share his generosity and magnificence hopefully.

But after all, Shaffenburg is a bungler at the stealing business and it serves him right to be found out, and it will serve him still better to be caught and punished. If he hadn't been a bungler he might have kept his stealing concealed, and in that case he would have deserved a niche among the "self-made" men of the country, and without doubt would have regarded as a model office-holder in this great republic.

The course of Shaffenburg while U. S. Marshal will not have a tendency to raise the class of officials to which he belongs in the estimation of the people of Colorado, or anywhere else. In fact U. S. marshals and their deputies seem to be somewhat notorious, on account of alleged dishonesty and rascality of various kinds, in many sections of the country. In Arkansas, Alabama, Louisiana, and elsewhere they have a reputation not at all enviable; and even in Utah we have heard their names of perfidy, and one of the class has been mentioned as having been on a charge of that kind; others may have shown themselves unworthy the confidence and respect of their fellow citizens in various ways, such as instance as drunkenness, profanity, lewdness, and other ungentlemanly and indecorous conduct. But we do not remember hearing much to their prejudice so far as pecuniary matters are concerned. This, however, may have been the case at Denver before the investigation of Attorney-General Pierrepont. Who can tell?

THE JENNINGS' CLAIM.—The Charleston (S. C.) News has the following concerning the history of the famous Jennings' property claim:—

"How to prove the Jennings' claim arose: Humphrey Jennings died about the close of the last century, leaving an immense estate and several children, one of whom, William, fell heir to a large amount of personal property and a magnificent real estate mansion near Boston. He was a member of the most opulent citizens of Denver, rivaling ex-Delaware Castle in the magnificence of his mansion and the splendor of his entertainments. These fraudulent acts, as passed upon by the accounting officer of the Treasury were approved by the chief justice of the Territorial court of Colorado, who has since been turned over to the Attorney-General, who has demanded that he be arrested, charged that he has never arrested, charged that he has been released, and the result has been that from a leader of a large bear stand, Shaffenburg's occupation before he was appointed, he has become one of the most opulent citizens of Denver, rivaling ex-Delaware Castle in the magnificence of his mansion and the splendor of his entertainments."

These statements have been made on the part of the claimants.

WORMY FRUIT.—The worms or grubs are in the apples, not in all, but in many, in some orchards, in most of the apples, in others, perhaps there are no worms or grubs to be found. It has been stated that the wormy fruit is unhealthy, unfit for human food, actually poisonous. We do not know upon what facts these statements have been made, or whether they are mere assertions, based only on the imagination of those who have originated them. But this we do know, we have eaten every year of this wormy fruit, raw and cooked, every year it has been wormy, and we do not collect a single instance wherein it injuriously affected us. We have been careful to avoid the worms, and therefore, but the portion of the apple untouched or uncorrupted by them we have eaten, and we eat such every day, without any manifest injury. Therefore we have reason to say that experience shows that wormy fruit is not poisonous, is not unhealthy, is not injurious to us.

But we are careful not to eat any fruit, except it is ripe, or very nearly ripe, and we also eschew decayed fruit. Wormy fruit ripens earlier than that which is perfectly sound, the worminess hastening the process of ripening.

We therefore are of the opinion, based on personal and family experience, that wormy apples, when ripe, may be safely used for food, either raw, cooked fresh, dried, or made into cider or vinegar. But in each and every way and case, the worms and their holes and debris should be carefully cut out and thrown away, this being imperatively required by common cleanliness, to say nothing of the question of unhealthiness.

When the wormy apples are thus utilized there is not so much loss with the Summer and Fall varieties, as they can be used either fresh or dried, and either way are safe and good. But with the Winter apples there is great loss, as few are left on the trees to mature, and those which fall early are not fit to eat fresh, nor are they so good as the earlier varieties to dry for Winter, as, apart from their state of unripeness, some of them will not cook tender.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The most potent local circumstance is the fierce heat. Every day last week the thermometer showed above 90 deg. for several hours, and nearly, if not every day that height of temperature was maintained for as much as eight hours, or from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The hottest part of the day usually is the shade higher than 90 deg. A number of times we have noticed it as high as 95 deg. Much, however, depends upon the situation of the thermometer, what kind of a shade it is in, etc. A cold breeze, sudden and brief, may reduce the temperature several degrees in a short time, though mere cloudiness does not always affect the thermometer so markedly. There may be the shade of a tree, light and heavy shades, the shade of a canvas awning or a tent, the shade of a lath and plaster house, the shade of a one story house, the shade of a great, thick-walled, several-story building, north shade, south shade, east shade, and west shade. Each of these differs in density and strength, and a thermometer in each is affected accordingly. A thermometer in the shade of a canvas awning on the east side of East Temple Street, well on in the afternoon, might indicate several degrees greater heat than a thermometer in the shade of a like porch on the north side of a similar building.

Our thermometer is hung on the first story above the ground floor, on the lower story of a wide two story lumber porch, on the south side of the News' office, and while the thermometer there will not indicate as high a temperature as one would under a less potent shade and in a situation more favorable to solar heat, still it will indicate a higher temperature than a thermometer would in the shade of a like porch on the north side of a similar building.

Thus a thermometer indicates not the sun's heat in the shade absolutely, but, relatively, that is, the sun's heat in the particular shade and situation in which the particular thermometer is placed at the particular time. Hence the variations in the statements of the degree of heat in the shade as indicated by various thermometers in various places in the same city or town. Quarrels concerning these variations are something similar, as to their base, to the old quarrel concerning the characteristics of the shield when viewed from different sides of the same. There is the further cause of different indications of the height of the temperature in different thermometers in the element of accuracy or inaccuracy with which the degrees are marked on each of them. Every thermometer may be supposed to be accurately marked, but the facts may not bear out that assumption.

We do not know upon what facts these statements have been made, or whether they are mere assertions, based only on the imagination of them were the Irish Jennings, the northern Jennings, and the Virginian Jennings. The two first failed. The last was interrupted by the war. Through the instrumentality of Judge Bacon, the opinion of eminent English counsel has been obtained, and it is interesting. Some of the most important of the above facts appear in that opinion."

AN INVESTIGATION.—
WASHINGTON, 10.—Commodore Ammen, acting secretary of the Navy, to-day, received, from the acting secretary of State, a dispatch from Mr. Vidal, the American consul, and his wife, had been impelled by Tripolitan pirates, and nothing by any of our vessels of war could conveniently reach that port. Orders were issued, that as the steamer "Hartford," Captain Harmony, now at that port, should be en route home from the Atlantic, proceed to inquire into the situation, and that the captors of the insult be arrested and punished. Rear Admiral Winslow, commanding the European station, was also instructed to keep himself advised of the circumstances, and, if necessary, to send another vessel to Tripoli, to act with the "Har-

BOSTON IN NEW YORK—Wife Murder.

NEW YORK, 10.—Secretary Bigelow came to this city from Washington yesterday, and had a conference of about four hours with the members of the House; the object of his visit was secret, and was kept secret, and politicians calling were as ignorant as the clerks.

The lifeless body of Catherine Maxwell, age 35, was found yesterday on the floor of her apartment in a tenement house, 29 Nevins St., in the Bronx, New York, where she lived with her husband, James B. Maxwell, age 36, and two children, one month and twenty-one months respectively, the eyes were blackened, the face bruised and swollen, and one of the arms was severely bruised and was bandaged. The husband has been arrested, but denies that he murdered his wife.

Another Suit Against Tweed.

In another suit brought by the city against Wm. M. Tweed, etc., Judge Lawrence, of the supreme court, ordered that the defendant be given a day or two of parties, and have ten days to answer after the receipt thereof.

Resigned From Both "A Fall River" and Mill Operatives.

Mr. George E. Bailey, bathing at Southhampton, L. I., on Saturday, was carried beyond her depth, a boy went to her assistance, but she screamed and held him so tightly that he could do nothing. George W. Fishback, formerly proprietor of the "St. Louis Democrat," who was riding along the beach, plunged in and saved both the lady and the boy.

A letter from Fall River, where fifteen thousand mill operatives voted themselves thirty days vacation rather than submit to ten per cent. reduction in wages, states that the action of the grocery and provision dealers, in refusing to allow actual starvation, charity will be dispersed very sparingly, and that the feeling of the community is so decidedly against the employers that relief and all measures for relief and assistance called for in the light of humanity. In the meanwhile the mill owners say they are determined to maintain their position, and settle for ever the principle that their business is not to be at the mercy of help, that they have been governed by the same principle, and that they now propose to manage their own business in their own way.

Broke His Leg.

President Jewett, of the Erie Railway, while driving to his house on Staten Island, last evening, had his leg broken by the upsetting of his carriage.

Another Official Trial.

CHICAGO, 10.—A Washington special says that in the investigation conducted by Attorney General Pierrepont into the working of the United States Marshals, he has found other places than the south where the hand stamp of a former is needed, and it will be some time before Pierrepont will have cleared away the monumental corruption accumulated under the reign of Williams.

The latest case occurs in Colorado. Ex-marshal Shaffenburg, who was recently removed to make way for Marshal Tammick, had, it appears, during the six or seven years of his reign, continually manufactured fraudulent accounts.

While the expenditures of the Surveyor of the Territory, a radio man, was allowed $1.25 per day for keeping prisoners from the time he arrested them until they were disposed of by the courts of the Territory. When the Department of Justice was created, and the expenditures of the court and federal officers were put under the control of the Attorney General, the allowance to the radio man was allowed $1.25 per day for keeping prisoners from the time he arrested them until they were disposed of by the courts of the Territory.

They will make their first appearance on Thursday Eve., Aug. 12th,
