CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP

What a glorious thing it is to have a holiday, a little allotment of time all your own, upon which you need not pay duty to any man living, and within the compass of the catch if you be a scholar, no one can plague you about the date of the Hegira, or "exact political significance" of the Lidianan rogations, nor any shock fall upon you if you be a man of business, from alarming telegrams respecting the fall of Utopian comets, or the "unhealthy depression" of the Cleveland Atlantic Grand Central railway. Surely there is no one living who does not appreciate such a furlough, from the fourth form boy who oversteers himself at Warwick or Kenilworth, on the half-yearly holiday, damped only by the horrid recollection that work befalls again next day, up to the wearied merchant prince who follows out his doctor's prescription of "complete change of scene," by making Rome or Switzerland as like London as possible for two months every year.

Somewhat after the fashion (had I felt inclined) I might have solicited, as I sat looking down upon the good town of Heidelberg from the terrace of the "Mölkens-Kloster," a little Utopian submerge perched upon a projecting bluff, in which a few so-called invalids play at curing themselves by sailing the greatest possible amount of curds and whey. And, certainly the scene before me deserved more than a passing glance. Above rose the great sloping crest of the mountain, with its waving woods, upon which the fading sunshine lingered lovingly; all around lay the leafy hillsides, between which, like a thread of gold, glittered the winding stream of Neckar; immediately below me lay the narrow streets and tall grim houses of the quaint little town, above which the vast red towers of the castle stood out in the glow of sunset like pillars of fire; and far out on the plain beyond, breaking with its shining curves the monotony of the vast green level, I could just decry the board, smooth flow of the parent Rhine.

But at this moment my attention was broken in a sufficiently unromantic way by the concussion of a huge steered-crowned hat, which, driven by the wind, ricochets off my shoulder, and is just rolling over the brow of the hill when I sprang forward and clutch it. Turning to look for the owner, I did myself face to face with a quiet, pleasant looking old gentleman, with a frilled shirt and black silk stockings, the very image of the glass dwarf in Wilhelm Hauff's "Halbes Herz," evidently a man of some note by the respect with which the habitués made way for him.

"Many thanks, mein Herr," says the old man, as I returned his errand headgear. "I am not quite so supple now as I was when I took the prize at the Freiburg Volkfest, forty-three years ago, before I ever thought of becoming a professor. It is only you English who can keep up with your training forever."

"How did you guess that I was an Englishman?" asked I, somewhat surprised; for, indeed, with a beard like a Pasha's and a face bronzed by the sun of Egypt and Syria, my appearance is anything but Anglo-Saxon.

"No one but an Englishman would have caught that hat as you did," answered the Professor, with a little chuckling laugh; "it is just in their nature to jump up and run after anything that passes. Ah, if you English would only employ your irrepressible energies in the cause of science, what might you not achieve! But no; you do not care to learn."

"Do us the justice to believe, Herr Professor, that the nation which produced Bacon and Newton has still some reverence for science."

"They were mighty men," replied the old gentleman, with a reverent bow of his gray head; "but I am speaking of the nation at large, not of a few exceptional celebrities. Ah, Himmeln! what a set they are, those English! A fine life they led me when I first began to practice medicine down yonder in Saxony. The first thing in the morning, kiling! kiling! at my door. What is it? 'An Englishman who has broken his leg in trying to climb the Teufelsdröck, which no one ever ascended yet.'"

I set the Herr Engländer's leg, and leave him pretty comfortable. Not half an hour after kiling! kiling! again.

"What now?" "A Englishman who has been half drowned in swimming across the Elbe against the current for a wager. I roll the Herr Engländer in warm blankets and bring him round. Before I have well settled in my chair again, kiling! kiling! once more. 'Mein Gott! what's the matter?' 'An Englishman who has tried to run twelve miles within the hour, because some one said he couldn't.' Mein Herr, 'I am sorry to have to say it, but your countrymen are equally devoid of fear and reason. There is but one man in England whom I can tolerate, reverence, and his name is Herr Carlyle.'"

"Mr. Carlyle, why he's an old friend of mine! I saw him the last time I was in England. I'm glad you admire him!"

"Did you, Mein Herr? did you really?" says the old man, with unmistakable interest. "Tell me all about him. I loved him; he is a great man, worthy to have been born a German!"
