The Philadelphia Abduction Case—Speech by Castelar.

NEW YORK, 6.—The Philadelphia Press has the following, as the latest special report in the boy abduction case, which shows how little progress has been made toward the solution of the mystery: "From news gained in police circles and from private sources, it may be set down for a certainty that Charlie Ross is in Philadelphia to-day, and if not, he is not very far from here. If the child had been moved from this city it is just possible that one of the men took him away in his charge, while the other remained here and endeavored to enter into negotiations with the bereaved father to return the child for a sum that seemed fabulous. It would thus seem that the idea in kidnapping the boy was to secure money, and finding that they could not accomplish their ends as easily as expected, public indignation running high, the miscreants resolved to take things quietly and wait until the storm against them died out, when no doubt further bargains will be attempted. The men who did the work are undoubtedly professional thieves, as large pecuniary rewards would long ago have induced a novice in one or the other parties to give the detectives a clue on his pal and turn state's evidence himself and escape punishment. As the case now stands, there is every reason to believe that in a short time, probably less than a week, something will turn up which will give the case an entirely new phase, and show that some one has had a hand in the matter who professes entire ignorance of the scheme, and who loudly cries innocence."

The London Times reports that Senor Castelar has delivered a speech, in which he says the programme of his party demands the establishment of liberty and democracy with a conservative republic. Those nations would never be free where liberty was a torment and democracy unbridled demagoguism, and that order was an essential, in all republics. The loss of order involved the loss of liberty of the press, the right of public meeting, the liberty of conscience, universal suffrage and social stability. When he was in power he defended the authority confided to him by the Cortes, and maintained public order and peace. He hoped that a conservative republic would prove to be that in which society would find safety. If the republicans secured peace and stability the people would not seek to restore the monarchy."

Insuring their Ships.

The Pacific Mail Company have ordered the managing director to insure seventeen of their best wooden ships at one-third their value; the iron vessels are all insured except the City of Pekin and the City of Tokio, now preparing for sea, which are to be insured for $750,000 each, Captain R. W. Shufeldt. Commander A. P. Cooke, and Lieut. commander I. W. Phillip, of the U. S. Navy, have been tendered the position of Captain in the Pacific Mail Service.

Beecher-Tilton.

Judge Morris, counsel for Tilton, said to-day that he had never seen a case so strongly fortified at all points as his client's. He exhibited, to reporters, a variety of letters which had passed between Beecher and Tilton, to show that down to May 10, 1870, there was no vindictiveness on the part of Tilton toward Beecher. Morris also showed a receipt of Wm. Page, dated Feb. 25, 1869, for a portrait of Beecher, purchased by Tilton, and now hanging in Moulton's house, saying that, in the following year, 1870, after Mrs. Tilton had informed her mother of her guilty relations with Beecher, her mother threatened to cut the canvass into slits, and Tilton, unwilling to see a work of art destroyed, removed it to Moulton's house, where it still remains. Morris also said that Mrs. Tilton's statements concerning her husband's cruelty, his locking her in her room like a prisoner, and his freezing and starving, her will be shown to be fictitious, and if there be any insanity in the family at all the charge will be not at the door of Tilton but of his wife.

It is reported that Moulton's statement is already prepared with the help of General Butler. The services of the latter gentleman are said to have been offered to Beecher and not declined, but replied to with thanks.

Moulton said to-day that he had not said anything, by tongue or pen, to justify anyone in assuming that he was in the least degree unfriendly to Beecher. His statement to the committee would characterize no actions and interpolate no inferences of his own. There were some papers in his possession that the committee desired to obtain, and he should gratify their desire, recording the order in which they came to him, leaving the committee and public to make their own inferences. He had thus far endeavored to maintain peace between Beecher and Tilton, and should continue to do so, and by the removal of misunderstandings, and the intelligent realization of self interest, he should never despair of maintaining or renewing peace.

Mr. J. I. Steadwell, fruit importer, and former publisher of the Revolution, said to-day, that Moulton told him at the St. James Hotel, Jacksonville, Fla., almost directly after the Woodhull convention at Washington, that there was no truth in the rumors about Mr. Beecher.
