EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

BREVITIES.

A baby who kisses his mother and fights his father, may be said to be partial to his ma and martial to his pa.

A young man who keeps a collection of locks of hair of his lady friends calls them hairbreadth escapes.

An Indianian poured nitric acid into his lady love's ear to prevent her marrying anybody but himself. His efforts were eminently successful.

An Omaha paper advises the people not to make such a fuss about the shooting of one constable, as there are over forty candidates for the position."

Henpeck, which is the name of a new village in Illinois, is said to be a bad name for a postoffice. Males avoid it.

Why does a coat get larger when taken out of a carpet bag? Because, when you take it out you'll find it in creases.

Sixty-eight colleges for females in the United States—and yet they continually crave admittance into male colleges.

The girl of the period is accused of being too practical. And yet a glance at her chignon shows how fond she is of building castles in the air.

"Don't you take rather too much spirits for a single man?" asked a kind man of one who was indulging rather freely. "I beg pardon, sir; I have been married these ten years," was the answer.

An oil speculator at Titusville, Pa., who is worth quite a number of million dollars, received a letter from a young woman who was going to be married to a poor young man, and wanted him to give her $15,000, as he would never miss it. The speculator said he would ask his wife about it.

"Mother," said a little girl who was engaged in making her doll an apron, "I believe I will be a Duchess when I grow up." "How do you ever expect to become a Duchess, my daughter?" her mother asked. "Why, by marrying a Dutchman, to be sure," replied the girl.

A farmer cured a balky horse in the town of Eden, Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin. He hitched a pair of cattle to a log-chain around the horse's neck, and prevailed on 'em to lean a few tons weight on the yoke. The horse did'nt start, but his head came out by the roots. The hide, a set of shoes, and a lunch for the crows are all that is left of the indocile steed.

There is a fable among the Hindoos that a thief, having been detected and condemned to die, happily hit upon an expedient which gave him hope of life. He sent for his jailor and told him he had a secret of great importance which he desired to impart to the king, and when that was done he would be prepared to die. Upon receiving this piece of intelligence the king at once ordered the culprit to be conducted to his presence, and demanded of him to know his secret. The thief replied that he knew the secret of causing trees to grow that would bear fruit of pure gold. The experiment might be easily tried, and His Majesty should not lose the opportunity; so, accompanied by his prime minister, his courtiers and his high priest, he went with the thief to a spot selected near the city wall, where the latter performed a series of solemn incantations. This done, the condemned man produced a piece of gold which he declared should be planted and every branch of it would bear gold.

"But," he added, "this must be put into the ground by a hand that has never been stained by a dishonest act. My hand has, therefore I pass it to your Majesty."

The king reached out his hand for the gold, but he hesitated. Finally he said:

"I remember in my younger days that I often filched money from my father's treasury, which was not mine. I have repented of my sin, but yet I hardly dare say my hand is clear. I pass it, therefore, to my Prime Minister."

The latter, after consideration, answered:

"It were a pity to break the charm by a possible blunder. I receive taxes from the people, and, as I am exposed to many temptations, how can I be sure that I have remained perfectly honest? I must give it to the governor of our citadel."

"No, no," cried the governor, drawing back. "Remember that I have the serving out of pay and provisions to the soldiers. Let the high priest plant it."

And the priest said:

"You forget I have the collecting of tithes, and the disbursements for sacrifice."

At length the thief exclaimed:

"Your Majesty, I think it were better for society that all five of us should be hanged, since it appears that not an honest man can be found among us."

In spite of the lamentable exposure, the king laughed, and so pleased was he with the thief's cunning expedient that he granted him a pardon.
