SUPPOSED ROBBER ELUDES ARREST

Claimant for Newspaper Money Package Calls for Same But No Policeman Near.

CLERK'S CLEVER WORK.

Money Belongs Probably to Portland
 Bank, Robbed on Dec. 7.—Other
 Junction City Notes.

Ogden, Dec. 14.—There now seems to be no doubt but what the $2,410 received in a package by Charles Price of Five Points, to whom the package of white was addressed, was stolen from a bank in Portland, Or., on Dec. 7, and mailed to this city by one of the men implicated in the robbery and who intended to call for it himself. A telegram was received late Sunday afternoon by the Ogden police department from the chief of the Oregonian city asking for a description of the bills. The description of the two $500 bills tallied exactly with bills of that denomination stolen from the Portland bank. The telegram also stated that there were three men implicated in the robbery, full particulars of which, together with a description of the men, would be sent by letter.

As was expected, the man who was to call for the package of paper containing the bills put in his appearance at the Ogden postoffice Saturday afternoon and inquired for the mail. In some

Of those corpuscles in your blood that have been called "Little Soldiers," is to fight for you against the disease germs that constantly endanger your health. These corpuscles are made healthy and strong by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla but because it combines the utmost remedial values of more than 20 different ingredients, each greatly strengthened and enriched by this peculiar combination. There is no real substitute for it. If urged to buy any preparation said to be "just as good" you may be sure it is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit.

unaccountable way the man made a clever getaway while officers were not on the ground. If the officers had been as shrewd and alert as Mrs. Daisy McGaw, the clerk at the general delivery window in the postoffice, the much-wanted man would be in custody now. As soon as the stranger appeared at the window and asked whether there was any mail for "Charles Price," Mrs. McGaw stepped to one side of the window as though looking through some papers and told a clerk to notify the assistant postmaster or the police that "Price" was there. Meanwhile Mrs. McGaw spent a little time looking through the mail and the man became suspicious and left. Mrs. McGaw not seeing an officer, put an assistant in charge of the window and, hastily putting on her hat and coat, followed the man.

The stranger went down Twenty-fifth street to the depot followed by the lady from the postoffice. At the depot he boarded an eastbound Twenty-fifth street car. So did Mrs. McGaw. The man paid his fare and asked for a transfer. Mrs. McGaw did not pay her fare at the time because she had failed to bring her pocketbook with her. She explained the circumstances to the conductor and he gave her a transfer also. The stranger boarded the south Washington car and so did Mrs. McGaw, who was on the lookout for an officer all the time.

When Mrs. McGaw saw that there was no hope of getting an officer at Twenty-fifth street and Washington avenue, she requested a passenger on the street car who was to get off several blocks from the Bamberger depot to telephone to the police station that "Price" was going to take the Bamberger train. Somehow all the plans of the woman were upset and the man left the city on the train after she had followed him for almost half an hour.

The police of Salt Lake were notified and two officers were dispatched from that city to meet the incoming Bamberger train, but before reaching the depot the mysterious stranger disappeared completely as though he had been swallowed up by the earth. It was stated that he left the train at Woods Cross, a subsequent search at that place did not reveal the whereabouts of the man.

The successful getaway of "Price" was the subject of much comment on the street yesterday. In the language of one citizen yesterday it was as though "Price" had sent engraved invitations to the police department and postal authorities to meet him at the postoffice and that they had completely ignored the "bid." In the minds of some of the older officers there seems to be little hope of catching "Price."

The money which Mr. Price of Five Points received in such a peculiar manner is still on deposit in the local bank where he took it immediately after receiving it. As to what disposition will be made of the money is not known and depends upon what part the government will take in the affair and whether or not the money is positively identified by the Portland bank or the other loser.

As the paper used to wrap the money in was a newspaper of December 8, and it was received in Ogden on the 13th and the robbery occurred in Portland on the 7th, there seems to be no doubt but that the paper was mailed at Pocatello or some other nearby Idaho town.
