

WOULD CONTROL THE SOCIAL EVIL

Chief of Police Pitt Makes Recommendations for Drastic Steps in Matter.

PLAN IS TO ISOLATE WOMEN.

Police to Have Absolute Control—Chief Also Suggests Means for Abatement of Nuisances.

The need of a detention home for girls and boys is emphasized in the annual report of Chief of Police Tom D. Pitt, presented to Mayor Bransford last night. A startling recommendation regarding the control of fallen women by the city is also made as a part of the report. He also asks for a better vagrancy ordinance.

Regarding the chief's recommendations for the better control of the underworld and its attendant evils, Chief Pitt says:

"Let the city set aside a piece of ground of sufficient size to accommodate several hundred of the red light district women. Enclose same carefully with a high board fence, build cottages or houses to accommodate these inmates; charge them rent; license them and place them under control of the police department as to their safety and confinement, and to the board of health as to their cleanliness and sanitary conditions. In this way every person caught soliciting and working on the streets could be handled by the police court and run out of town or sent to the place where she belonged. In this way the department would be in complete control of this element, and could also control the drug element and men who make a practice of living with the class of women."

Chief Pitt says that the women are being confined to Commercial street and Victoria alley, but that it is difficult to handle the class of women who walk the streets soliciting patronage.

Chief Pitt declares that there are enough saloons in Salt Lake. In almost every instance crimes are plotted in saloons, he says. He recommends that all saloons be compelled to close at midnight or 1 o'clock.

LIQUOR IN RESTAURANTS.

Chief Pitt would like the council to pass an ordinance requiring cafes and restaurants to tear out partitions and make them open to the street throughout in this connection, he says:

"One of the greatest evils in this city is restaurants where intoxicating liquors are sold. This class of restaurants are nothing more than places to debauch young girls. I advise that an ordinance be passed regulating these places, and that it be enforced quickly."

He asks for an ordinance giving greater scope and fewer entanglements in the vagrancy ordinance that the police may deal to better advantage with this class.

ADMITTS GAMBLING.

He confesses lameness of the department in the matter of gambling. He says that to arrest the owners of buildings rented for gambling is the only remedy. To secure convictions under the present law he says is almost impossible. He declares there is no roulette or faro in the city, but admits poker rooms are being operated.

To do away with "fences" he declares that the pawn shop license should be increased to $1,400 per annum and thus do away with smaller establishments which are really places where criminals may dispose of property.

He strongly urges that the city and county co-operate on some plan to provide a detention home for boys and girls whose home surroundings led them into delinquent ways.

Chief Pitt wants a civil service plan adopted in the matter of selecting policemen, the examinations to be for mental and physical capacity.

He cites the cost of the police department for the year to have been $46,750.68. There were 5,128 arrests made during the year.

MAY SELECT STUDIES.

New Regulations to Go Into Effect at L. D. S. University.

Another important step has been taken by the Latter-day Saints' university toward its courses of study. Hereafter this institution, like most others of similar grade, has had certain prescribed studies, such as, for example, as the sciences and the classical, which are required for graduation not only a definite number of hours' credit, but also certain definite subjects. Hereafter, however, a student on entering the school may select his studies according to his own peculiar bent of mind, and at the completion of a given number of hours' work, obtain a certificate of graduation regardless of whether or not he has taken this, that, or the other study. Of course, this choice will be made with the advice of parent and teacher and with respect always to the calling of the pupil. Thus, it is hoped, the student will be able to choose his studies in accordance with his own bent of mind, and thus avoid the monotony of the present system, in which the student is required to take a prescribed course of study, and thus avoid the monotony of the present system, in which the student is required to take a prescribed course of study.

quartet, a duet, "The Isle of Somewhere," by Olive Daniels and Elmer Young, a solo, "O Love Divine," by the last named, and "Sometime Somewhere," by Elder George D. Pyper.

Elder David James spoke of the boyhood days of Mr. Williams, of his conversion to Mormonism and of his early life in Utah. Elder Joshua Midgley told of his associations with the deceased from 1893 to 1906, in the Twelfth ward.

From 1899 to 1898, Mr. Williams was connected with Z. C. M. L. in clerical and managerial capacities, and his life as covered by that period was briefly recounted by Bishop George Romney. Elder John M. Knight paid a tribute to the deceased as an efficient and faithful Sunday school worker for more than a quarter of a century.

President John R. Winder and Elder Heber J. Grant had been personally acquainted with Mr. Williams for many years, and both referred to him in the highest terms, speaking also words of encouragement and consolation to all present.

President Richard W. Young, of English stake, offered the invocation, and Bishop Robert Morris, of the Eleventh ward, pronounced the benediction.

The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. The deceased was buried at the city cemetery in the family lot by the side of his wife, who died 12 years ago, and the grave was dedicated by his son, Bishop T. A. Williams.

UTAH PRODUCTS IN LOS ANGELES

They Undersell the Same Goods in the Salt Lake Market.

POVERTY AND HIGH LIVING.

Big Prices Mean Few New People, Declares John H. Bailey in a Letter Home.

That Utah produce, shipped to Los Angeles, sells cheaper there than here, and that until Salt Lake learns the lesson of offering cheaper living conditions, it can never hope to become a greater city, is the burden of a letter received by Fisher Harris from John H. Bailey, a Salt Lake commission merchant, now in Los Angeles on a visit.

Mr. Bailey writes frankly of local conditions, pleading for a change on account of the harm done to the general welfare by continuing as at present. In the letter, dated a week ago, he says:

LOS ANGELES LEARNS.

"As you are aware, I, with lots of others in Salt Lake, am greatly interested in the welfare of our beautiful mountain home. So when we leave it for a short time we generally look around to see if people in other cities are living and doing about the same as we are."

"And I assure you that there is a great change in Los Angeles in the last few years. The high prices for living that prevailed a few years ago do not exist now. Nearly all the people out here realize the fact that in order to get lots of people here they must give cheap living. The cost of living here is only about two-thirds as high as it is in Salt Lake."

UTAH'S OPPORTUNITY.

"The conditions should be reversed in this respect. Salt Lake can well afford to make better and cheaper living than any other part of this country. Much Utah produce is shipped out here and sold at lower prices than it is in Salt Lake."

"I will just give you a few retail prices marked out at the stores here: 'Green hams, 12 1/2 cents a pound. 'Breakfast bacon, 12 1/2 to 13 cents. 'Beef, rib roast, 12 1/2 to 13 cents. 'Eastern eggs, 20 to 25 cents. 'Potatoes by the sack, coming from Utah, 75 cents a bushel. 'Now, Mr. Harris, meats that cost 12 1/2 cents a pound here cannot be bought for less than from 17 1/2 to 20 cents over the counter at our local shops in Salt Lake. And a great deal of the meat sold here comes from Utah. 'Something must be done to make cheap living in our city, so that we may keep the people there. Our hotel man said to me today: 'We have just begun to learn that to keep up our population out here we must not rob them, but must give them good goods at the lowest possible prices.'"

CHAPLAIN AXTON.

Former Salt Laker on His Way to Join Regiment in Philippines.

Chaplain John T. Axton of the Eighteenth United States Infantry, and formerly general secretary of the Salt Lake Y. M. C. A., has brought his family from Port Leavenworth to this city, to reside, while he is in the Philippines with his regiment. The Eighteenth went to the islands some weeks ago, but the chaplain remained behind at the post to formally open the new Y. M. C. A. building recently erected there. He will be in town over next Sunday, when he is expected to speak at the State Prison, and before the local Christian Endeavor society in the morning, at the Phillips Congregational church in the evening, and at half a dozen other places during the day. Chaplain Axton sails February 5, next on the government transport, Buford, for Manila, whence he will leave for the island of Mindanao, the most southern of the Philippine group, and the largest next to Luzon, where the Eighteenth infantry is to be stationed. The inhabitants are Mohammedan Moors, but are more tractable than they were, and the bello is not flying around so "promiscuous like," as Artemus Ward would say.

When in the islands before, Chaplain Axton was laid up most of the time with rheumatism, but Mindanao is considered better for rheumatic belts, so he is not apprehensive of recurrence of the former trouble. He is going to the post recently before the military authorities, and for the last year or so been detailed for duty as a line officer, as brigade commissary and quartermaster at Fort Leavenworth, a position of trust not known to have ever been given to a chaplain before, and he has been commended for efficiency in orders by Gen. Wint, commanding the post. Many friends are giving Chaplain Axton a warm welcome.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater—Not of overwhelming brilliancy, but a most pleasant evening's entertainment withal, is "The Man On The Box," as interpreted by Mr. Max Figman and his company. The big audience which saw it at the theater last night, most of which had long been admirers of Mr. Figman's comedy methods, especially remembering his work with Florence Roberts and in "The Marriage of Kitty," applauded and laughed over the humorous episodes of the story, but rather declined to be swept off their feet by the play. While it is excellently rendered and beautifully staged, it is rather talky, and it is too palpably evident from the beginning what the end will be to possess a decided chain of interest, besides which the episode of the parent's treachery and the tremendous consequences it should have on the heroine are rather lightly disposed of. But the company did capable work throughout, and Mr. Figman added another bunch of laurels to those he was already winning, though we think that he possessed the art of articulating most distinctly in his rapid moments. He was applauded again and again at the close of each act.

The support was capable throughout, Miss Martinoff making a sprightly Betty, and Mr. Brownell contributing a neat piece of character work as the diplomat. The library set was most attractive for scenic work, and it was awarded a burst of applause.

The same bill runs tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Orpheum—After the performance last night everybody was explaining just how it was done, at the same time Anna Eva Fay puzzled the most knowing. Throughout her musical entertainment, or rather entertainments, for she appears twice on this week's bill, she diffused a spirit of optimism. Everybody who asked her questions regarding mining stocks was advised to hold on to them. It was also comforting to know that copper is going up. Miss Fay works fast and her turns go with snap and vim. It is the same old act which Oscar Ellason so successfully duplicated here a dozen years ago, and it is a relief to note on the program that Miss Fay lays no claim to the miraculous or supernatural. Even so her act will undoubtedly pack the Orpheum this week. The rest of the show is good. Valazzi, who opens the bill, furnishes one of the best athletic, acrobatic and lunging acts seen at the Orpheum, and his foot work with a cannon ball has to be seen to be appreciated. Howard and North get away from huckstering and vaudeville in an act entitled "Those Were Happy Days," which is a pot pourri of slapstick, pathos and rough house. Willie Zimmerman impersonates great musical directors starting out with Verdi and concluding with Oscar Hammerstein. Zimmerman is versatile as an impersonator, but why mar an otherwise satisfactory act with an antiquated ruse of "ragging" the orchestra? Dumond's Minstrels are musicians of the recognized French musical hall type, and comprise a tenor, a good violinist and a little comedienne who handles the guitar like an artist. A blood curdling bullfight tragedy and a couple of other series comprise the kinodrome offerings. It is a good show.

Grand—That "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is old and worn out, cannot be truthfully said of the Stetson production, which is filling a new generation with the Grand. The central figures, Uncle Tom, Eva, Legree, Eliza and others remain unchanged, of course, otherwise it would not be the old time anti-slavery drama that has won so many laurels. The new production, however, is a piece almost a new fabric. Topsy has a twin sister, of the same name as herself, and the one is a clown, the other is a sprightly. The romp and frolic of the pair are very funny. What the between-act vaudeville features lack in the way of good singing, is amply made up in the dancing and calender walks of a male and female quartet and octet. The sight of diminutive ponies on the stage pleased the young folks, and the scene of Eliza and her child escaping across the ice, pursued by massive bloodhounds, was very realistic. The main characters of the play are in good hands, Mable Hill as Little Eva, being exceptionally pleasing. As stated, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" runs the week.

Lyric—"East Lynne" seems to be one of those plays which will never grow old. Down at the Lyric last evening men and women watched its progress with moist eyes, though there were a few who used their handkerchiefs openly. The Utah Stock company is "making good," as the saying goes, and "East Lynne" is one of the best things it has done yet. Commencing tomorrow, "My Friend from Arkansas" will be the attraction for the rest of the week.

Tom Show—Tonight those local amateurs who will represent the Salt Lake Press club in a big revival of the "Tom Show," will occupy boxes at the Grand to witness the presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as offered by a traveling company of professionals. The big event comes Feb. 3, when the "Tom Show" holds the boards at the Salt Lake theater.

COLORED WOMEN ARRESTED.

Two colored women, giving the names of Mabel Todd and Jimma Oakley, were arrested by the police last night on suspicion of being the female holdups who held up and robbed Ralph Wagner last Saturday night. ## Vaccine Inoculation May Cure Consumption.

The experiments with vaccine inoculation as a remedy and cure for tuberculosis, which have been made by the pathological department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, have reached a stage that warrant hope on that part of consumptives.

The investigations have been conducted with a view to obtaining a vaccine that will so strengthen the disease resisting properties of the human blood that death from tuberculosis in any form shall be occasional, instead of common.

It is so much easier to prevent consumption than to cure it, however, that no precaution to guard against the destroying germ should be neglected. It often happens that the disease has its start in an apparently trivial cold or cough that has been allowed to run unchecked.

To break up a cold quickly there is nothing so effective as a mixture of eight ounces of whisky with two ounces of glycerine and a 1/2 ounce of the Virgin oil of Pine. Shake well and use in teaspoon doses every four hours. It is claimed this will cure any cough that is curable. Five ounces of tincture Cinchona compound can be used in place of whisky with the same effect.

The ingredients are inexpensive and can be purchased without trouble at any good drug store. To avoid substitution of some inferior pine products for the Virgin Oil of Pine, it is better to purchase each separately and mix them at home.

The genuine Virgin Oil of Pine is put up for dispensing, only in 1/2-ounce vials, each vial securely sealed in a round wooden case with an engraved wrapper showing plainly the name—Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure, guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act of June 29, 1906, Serial No. 461, prepared only by the Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. Be sure to get the genuine, as the oil sold in bulk and cheap imitations put out to resemble Virgin Oil of Pine in name and style of package are ineffective, being largely composed of a distillation of pine needles, or leaves, instead of from the pine tree proper.

These pine needle oils are not intended for internal use, and when taken internally usually cause nausea. Their use is mainly confined to the manufacture of soap and similar purposes.
