

MURDERER'S GUN OWNED BY MILLET

Weapon With Which Officer Ford Was Killed Is Claimed.

WAS PART OF RICH LOOT.

Owens and Garcia Secured It When Robbing Home of Jeweler—Recovered by Police in Denver.

The revolver with which Police Officer Charles S. Ford was fatally murdered on Dec. 14 belonged to Col. R. D. Millet of 559 east South Temple street, and was stolen from Col. Millet's residence by Garcia and Owens, with other property, on the evening of Nov. 1 last. This was stated by Col. Millet this morning while in the office of Chief of Police Pitt. Col. Millet called to receive some of the property that was stolen from his residence and later recovered in Denver by Detective "Dick" Shannon. After the property was returned, he was told by Garcia, the Mexican-Chinese hybrid, the stolen articles, with the exception of the revolver, were shipped by the Belcher's to Denver. In that city the revolver was located and recovered by Detective Shannon and brought back to this city. A portion of the articles were introduced in evidence during the trial of Joe Sullivan, the desperado now serving a life term for the murder of Policeman Ford.

THE PROPERTY RETURNED.

This morning the jewelry was turned over to Col. Millet and he signed a receipt for the same. The following articles were recovered: One lady's gold watch, one pearl breast pin and pair of pearl earrings, 200 years old and of great value; two old gold wire bracelets, one gold locket and chain, several gold medals and pins. Col. Millet said that the intrinsic value of the property is about $500, but that no single piece could be purchased for twice that amount because of the antiquity and the association attached to the jewels. After receiving the property Col. Millet handed the chief of police a check for $500, which was accepted by him. In speaking of the robbery, Col. Millet said:

"We were at the dinner table when the men got into the house upstairs. While one man did the work in the house the other stood guard outside. This man was Owens. I saw him walk across the lawn and when I saw him again in court I recognized him immediately as the man who was on watch outside. Of course at that time I did not suspect that my house was being robbed. Some of the property had not been recovered but the gun that killed poor Officer Ford was mine."

OGDEN GOES "DRY."

Break in Water Mains Places the City in Awkward Predicament.

(Special to the "News.") Ogden, April 15.—Work on the big break in the water pipes on the Ogden Water company in Ogden canyon is being rushed. Until it is completed this city will be "dry" as there is no water in the supply pipes whatever. The break occurred two days ago, and for that length of time the only water obtainable has been that in an occasional well or the Weber. No end of difficulty has been encountered, as is needless to state. It is believed repairs will be completed within a short time now.

Scholars at the Weber academy turned out to observe Arbor day this morning. While the boys planted trees and shrubbery and trimmed lawns, girls of the domestic science classes prepared a luncheon and the other girls "cleaned house."

BIG BABY SHOW TODAY.

Future Presidents and Clubwomen Assemble Chaperoned by Their Doing Fathers and Mothers.

This afternoon there is a really truly baby show in progress, and five newspaper writers who good naturedly volunteered their services as judges, are already wearing that hunted look which has the automobile and bicycle face, to quote the sporting editor, "backed off the board."

A local furniture firm is responsible for the trouble by offering an English baby buggy beautiful for the most baby beautiful at the store beautiful—in fact everything is beautiful save the judges. There is plenty of humor attached to this afternoon. During the past week the dry goods stores have been ravished for the most part by the baby show, while the boom in curling irons is said to be unprecedented. Some of the wives of doing fathers and proud mothers are noteworthy. In some instances the names of the judges have leaked out, and in consequence they have been posted on the fine points of future presidents and clubwomen until they are compelled to admit that Utah has an aggregation of comers which 20 years hence will dazzle the universe. Under the rules of the contest the entries must be under 12 months old, otherwise no race or sex is barred.

"Our baby is a sure winner," volunteered an anxious mother yesterday, "she is just two days over a year old and I think that you ought to let her enter. If you do I will promise to buy a big lot of furniture, too." Such is just a sample.

The babies began to arrive early and by 2 o'clock there was quite a respectable showing with every indication that by the time the judging commenced there would be an overflow meeting out in the street. There were blondes and brunettes and relays of fat babies arriving on every car, each and every one—the babies, not the cars—neatly groomed, curled, fussed and generally clean in best bib and tucker.

While some of the infants clamored for lunch, most of them were quiet and well behaved, and the only really nervous individuals present were apparently the judges.

BULLET STOPS BURGLAR.

Shot Fired by Nightwatchman Lodges in Leg of Greek Thief.

A young Greek, giving the name of Gost Mavrocles, is lying on a cot in the city jail today, suffering from a bullet wound inflicted this morning while he was trying to escape from officers after committing a burglary. The shot that wounded the Greek was fired by Nightwatchman G. K. Smith at 12:45 this morning, on west Second South street.

Mavrocles had broken into a candy store at 450 west Second South street and was leaving when he was observed by Smith and Officer Griffiths. When he saw the officers, he ran down the street and was closely pursued. The Greek picked up a shoulder and hurled it at the head of Officer Griffiths. The latter "ducked" behind a tree and fired a shot in the air. This did not have the desired effect, and the Greek continued to run, followed by the officers. He picked up another rock and was about to throw it when Watchman Smith fired. The bullet struck the robber in the right leg just below the knee, but the fellow continued to run and was finally captured at the rear of Henderson's warehouse. He could not talk English, and no attempt was made by him. He was taken to the emergency hospital where his injury was attended to. The Greek had broken the place by smashing a rear window. He stole a large quantity of tobacco.

UNIQUE REPORTS.

Police Officers Due for Niche in Literary Hall of Fame.

The individual reports of police officers filed with Chief Pitt last night did not show that a great deal was stirring in criminal circles aside from the two holdups. Officer Pierce reported as follows: "Chased all over the city looking for holdups but did not run across them." Another officer said that he was called by Mr. McDonald to 235 south State street to investigate a family row, and that he was informed that a woman at the place was running a dive and selling beer and that she had a three-year-old child that had been badly neglected. When the officer arrived, he found the place to be serene and no arrests were made.

JOKE WAS ON DARKE

Story of Amateur Gardner Who Undertook to Purchase Astor Seeds.

R. F. Neslen of the Burlington is planting a garden. Yes, this is a story—and a good one. So he sent William Darke, t. f. a., to an uptown seed store to buy some astor seeds, giving him a—well, it will develop what he gave him to buy the flowers with, later on in the story. William went in, bowed to the young girl behind the counter, and asked her to wrap up a pound or so of astor seeds. She looked at him with a queer expression, but William's head was full of wool, that is to say, he was thinking of wool orders, etc., etc., and he did not notice. She passed the big package over to William—it was big because astor seeds are very light. "How much?" asked William, carelessly.

"Forty-eight dollars," she said quietly. William clutched the edge of the counter and managed to keep "stood up." He repeated his question weakly, and she said "Forty-eight dollars," without looking up from the bill of sale she was making out. Mr. Darke fingered the piece of money Mr. Neslen had given him, for a moment, then turned several corners, which would have looked lovely on an astor, but not at all good in a big man, and finally blurted out: "Take 'em back; I want a quarter's worth!" William says he will ask the price of things per pound before ordering a pound hereafter.

WOOL SELLS AT 10 CENTS

Marcus B. Harris Breaks the Ice of Utah Market With Five Carload Purchase.

Marcus B. Harris has closed a deal which throws new light upon the wool situation. He has purchased five cars of Utah county wool at prices ranging from 10 to 12 cents per pound. The purchase is the first brought to notice, aside from the movement of seven cars to Denver securing milk. Harris has announced on repeated occasions their determination to hold out for 18 cents but the purchase just made by Mr. Harris indicates that the market is not so tight as has been believed. "Mark" Harris as he is known throughout the west is always one of the first buyers in the field and usually manages to get the ball rolling soon after his arrival. From years of dealing he is known to every wool grower of import in the west. "Whatever the market is, that is the market," is his somewhat poetical prescription of the wool game.

By this he explains he means that demand rules the wool market as it does every thing else, and that all there is to it is that demand is brisk prices will be high; if demand is weak prices will correspond. I don't believe the wool growers of Utah and the west are in appreciation of the work done by the firemen in their fight with the flames.

AGGIES PREPARING.

Are Ready to Show University Track Team a Hard Contest Saturday.

That the Logan Aggies have a group of men preparing for the track meets this spring, who will do more than appear in the also ran class, is the promise of Coach Walker, backed up by the fact that the University has allowed enough points to be lost from its own team to show the others that they are not to be taken for granted. All Maddock has to do is prepare now that is up to the usual form, and on the hope of being stronger than usual Coach Walker's aspirations to harness the good rearing of points this spring.

Conquer the Aggie hurdler; Swenson, a jumper, and Alden, a new man, are working out in the best form. Hansen and Nelson for the weights, promise to make Conville, Young and Russell exert themselves to hold the weight events in university circles. For the University, Hunt is back at the hurdling game, and promises well. Brinton is sprinting in form that recalls the work of Whitney and Fuzzy Moore in their prime, while Hedges is doing up the leg just below the knee, but the fellow continued to run and was finally captured at the rear of Henderson's warehouse. He could not talk English, and no attempt was made by him. He was taken to the emergency hospital where his injury was attended to. The Greek had broken the place by smashing a rear window. As there are two sides to every question, Mr. Groschell's side is here reproduced without comment. The "News" in your paper last night, I read the above items of interest. As I read I smiled and thought of what the ticket broker always claimed would happen when he was legislated out of business. But I hardly thought that it would happen so quickly. I didn't figure on reading in one column of your paper the news of the abolition of the ticket broker and on the next page read of a sweeping raise in rates.

OSCAR GROSHELL THE RAILROADS

Former Ticket Broker Bitterly Arraigns Existing Policy of Transportation Companies.

UNFULFILLED PROMISES.

Scalpers Painted in Glowing Colors And Some Very Odious Comparisons Drawn by Correspondent.

Oscar Groschell erstwhile ticket broker, whose occupation has been declared illegal, sends to the "News" a long communication at the top of which are pasted two clippings from the Deseret News, one relating to the proposed abolition of second class fares, and the other the perpetual injunction issued by Judge Morse, restraining scalpers from buying or selling railroad tickets.

As there are two sides to every question, Mr. Groschell's side is here reproduced without comment. The "News" in your paper last night, I read the above items of interest. As I read I smiled and thought of what the ticket broker always claimed would happen when he was legislated out of business. But I hardly thought that it would happen so quickly. I didn't figure on reading in one column of your paper the news of the abolition of the ticket broker and on the next page read of a sweeping raise in rates.

Every railroad man who read last night's "News" and noticed the above item must have smiled too. Only his smile was a trifle broader than mine and as he smiled, he said: "The public be damned!"

The ticket brokers of this country have always claimed that when they were abolished, the rates would be raised as the broker always stood between the capacity of the company and the public. Read any railroad attorney's arguments in favor of abolishing the broker, and he has always claimed that as soon as this "commercial pirate" was abolished, just as soon would the railroad raise its rates to a level that would make the fare of the traveler a round trip ticket.

And to the everlasting discredit of the American people, there were plenty of fools who really believed it. And there were plenty of editors who also believed it or at least they wrote as though they believed it.

The railroad rates have been reduced—some years ago, we had a $25 rate to the coast. Plenty of you "News" readers remember that. Plenty big enough rate to pay for the privilege of riding in the "cars" the road furnished.

The brokers had a crimp put in them on westbound business, which virtually took them out of the field.

Then the roads promptly "reduced" the rate to $20, from the various rates of $25, $30, $40, $50, $60, $70, $80, $90, $100, $110, $120, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $180, $190,
