TERRITORIAL ELECTION, NOV. 6, 1888.

FOR DELEGATE TO CONGRESS.

DON'T RAISE FALSE ISSUES!

THE advocates of the sewer system proposed for District No. One very much damage their cause every time they attempt to reply to objections offered to that system. This is especially true because they are not on the question of sewerage, but on the question of a general tax.

The latest attempt at reply starts out with the assumption that the sewerage system is a general tax. This is a very serious error, and one which the advocates of the sewerage system are not prepared to meet.

Now the whole of this is outside of the subject and an entire mis-statement of the position and views of the objectors. First, the sewerage system is not a general tax, but a local one.

They have offered no arguments on the question of whether it is necessary to health in closely populated places, or in the more thickly built portion of this city. They have not offered a single argument in support of their position.

Next, there is nobody associated with the sewerage system who is not a taxpayer. The sewerage system is a general tax, and it is a general tax on all the property in the city.

Thus the attempt to answer objections to a sewerage system by saying that it is a general tax is a very serious error.

The discussion of the question has developed these facts: That a majority of the property owners in the business part of the city are in favor of the sewerage system.

That the sewerage system is a general tax, and it is a general tax on all the property in the city. That the sewerage system is a general tax, and it is a general tax on all the property in the city.

These facts being determined, it seems only reasonable and just that the matter should be referred further consideration. That the sewerage system is a general tax, and it is a general tax on all the property in the city.

We do not believe there would be any great opposition to these suggestions. Let the close business blocks have what they want. Don't force people outside of the city to pay for a sewerage system which they do not want.

The king of the Belgians has been visiting in Scotland. He is a very quiet man and he went about in knickerbockers and hobnailed boots so that no one suspected his rank, and as he did not look in the least like a king he was allowed to enjoy himself in peace.

Professor Pickering, of the Harvard College Observatory, regards the so-called "canals" of Mars as areas of vegetation—possibly immense cultivated tracts. The canals are usually some 30 to 100 miles broad, and of 2,000 or 3,000 miles long, and most of them appear in parallel pairs.

SHOULD THE CANAL DROP?

There appears in this issue a communication regarding a proposition to drop the Parley's Creek Canal about a hundred feet below its surveyed elevation. We received the correspondence several days ago, but preferred not to publish it until the status of the question was more or less fully ascertained. As far as can be learned there is a division of opinion among the members of the Council concerning it.

From what can be gleaned it appears that the origin of the proposition is peculiar. After the canal had been brought along on the even tenor of its way to a point west of the upper part of the cemetery, one or two real estate men, who own lots in that section, made a demand for a drop in the canal for the right of way for the canal over their land. When it is considered that the advent of the canal would greatly enhance the value of their property, the unreasonable nature of this demand is apparent.

This brought those who had made the demand for a drop in the canal to the attention of the Council. They were referred to by our correspondent from Eleventh to Ninth Street.

Those brought those who had made the demand for a drop in the canal to the attention of the Council. They were referred to by our correspondent from Eleventh to Ninth Street.

That petition, together with a communication from John Garbner, who has resided in the dry upper region for fifteen years, was presented to the Council at its last session. Alderman Webster moved that the prayer be granted. Alderman Sharp supported the motion. Councilor Dooley took the same ground, holding that the proposed drop would not only destroy the contour of the canal but would make it more difficult to manage.

The subject was referred to the committee on Jordan and Salt Lake Canal, of which Alderman Sharp is chairman, the other members being Councilors Sowles, Smith, Roberts and Teasdale. If the demand of a couple of more of real estate men was the original barrier to the conducting of the canal along its legitimate route of four feet fall to the mile, that obstacle has been swept away by the same means.

But the reason offered now by those who favor the drop is that there will not be water enough. If this is the case there has been some talk of misrepresentation. Our correspondent asserts what has been frequently claimed—that the water obtained from Parley's Creek has irrigated nearly 2,000 acres of farmland, while he holds, and he ought to be well informed, that the amount it will have to cover in this city will not exceed 300 acres. If this comes anything near an approximate estimate, the misrepresentation falls to the ground.

This is very conspicuous when the fact is taken into account that the tract that will be missed if the drop be made from Eleventh to Ninth Street, consists of twelve small blocks, one fourth of which are vacant city blocks. Their aggregate extent amounts to but 20 acres, an area equal to but three regular blocks of the city, the latter being forty by forty rods square, while the bench blocks are twenty by twenty rods.

That small tract would nullify the usefulness of Parley's Creek, it certainly must be an insignificant scheme. And if the body of water is so small, the size of the canal—six feet wide by four deep—is altogether too large.

The proposed drop has two peculiar phases. First, it is a direct proposition for the expansion of the city, being markedly in line with the policy of contraction, besides perpetuating the demand for water for the dry bench. It is time that a city was drowned out. "I would indeed be an anomaly in these days of 'No Salt Lake,'" "Terrible Heights," "Buena Vista," and other suburban divisions, if a most desirable portion of the city, with a comparatively short distance, were to be left out of the pale of the city.

Some members of the Council have, in expressing themselves privately, suggested a very sensible plan which would appear to amend the proposition to drop the canal. They say, and very sensibly, that a rate could be levied on the property which would be filled where the canal crosses it to reach a higher level. Thus all under Seventh Street could be supplied in that way. If the ditch had not sufficient capacity, it could be enlarged at small expense, and let the canal go into a way of its own.

There is a point that should never be lost sight of by an important public body like the City Council—the maintenance of public confidence in its judgment. There is nothing connected with this canal enterprise but is susceptible of being determined upon by a sensible and scientific basis before it is operated. It is the natural presumption that the Council took the trouble to properly advise itself in advance on the subject in question. If, when the canal has reached a point within a comparatively short distance of its proposed terminus, an abrupt and unscientific drop of about a hundred feet is made, that presumption is utterly destroyed, and the anomaly will stand as a perpetual evidence of an irresponsible and unscientific body.

The military manoeuvres of Austrian troops, which have taken place near Vienna, have been watched with interest, not merely by Austrians, but by other European nations as well. It would be difficult to come across a finer set of men than those comprised in the deputations from Syria, Carinthia, Carinthia and Salzburg, and to be a crack shot in this part is to be an ideal hero. As a consequence the Emperor and Austrian government have long been well disposed toward these hardy mountaineers.

In the American civil (or uncivil) war and in the Franco-Prussian war the Austrian military were by no means idle observers. As a consequence military science has made rapid strides. But no official visit has been paid to the capital of modern Italy for fear of wounding the susceptibilities of the Pope. By the way, it is said that considerable diplomacy was necessary before the proposed visit could be arranged. The Pope is said to be satisfied that the visit shall take place.

The government of Italy is making great preparations. Thirty thousand of Italy's finest troops will be reviewed on the famous Campidoglio. A grand reception will take place at the Capitol, also a fantastic illumination of the Colosseum, the Ancient Palace of the Caesars, and the Amphitheatre of the Emperors.

By Telegraph to the News.—Before the Council. London, Oct. 22.—The commission, appointed to investigate the charges made by the Times against the Irish members of parliament, opened this morning. Sir Charles Russell, leading counsel for the Times, applied for release from Wexford prison of William Redmond, Justice Hansen, and another member of the same commission would be adopted with Redmond as the case of John Dillon. His release must not be construed to mean that he has been granted immunity from imprisonment.

He would be free only under strict conditions. These would not allow his taking any part in public life and would compel him to hold himself strictly a prisoner on parole. Sir Charles Russell would not insist upon his application for Redmond's release. A discussion then ensued upon the merits of the case. The Times' power to furnish information to the public was discussed, and the council decided to meet every week day except Saturday, and asked counsel to expedite proceedings.

Attorney-General Webster opened the case for the Times. He promised to give the court the fullest information in the Times' power to furnish regarding the conduct of the Irish party which the Times published. He would do so with the merits of the case. He would do so with the merits of the case. He would do so with the merits of the case.
