Russia's Old Resentment Against Great Britain Has Been Aroused.

St. Petersburg, July 20.-The news that Great Britain has delivered to Russia a protest against the capture of the Peninsula and Oriental steamer Malacca in terms which are believed to be almost tantamount to a demand for the immediate release of the vessel as well as a general protest against the action of the Russian volunteer fleet steamers in stopping ships in the Red sea is not generally known here tonight, but this morning's editorial broadside from the London newspapers reprinted here this afternoon was a sufficient warning of the state of the British mind and the public became greatly excited, In the hotels and restaurants the war was temporarily forgotien and nothing excepting the possibility of complica-tions with Great Britain was talked of The old resentment against Great Britain which had been much amelio-rated of late became revived at the Great mere suggestion that that country was again seeking to balk Russia, but the Official World, which is charged with the responsibility, is keeping cool and alm.

Provided a blunder had not been made by the captain of the St. Petersburg in misjaking British stores for contraband to maintain the justice of the seizure, but if a mistake has been made the government doubtless will order the Malacca to be set at liberty and pay the Bill for her illegal detention. Both powers, while standing on their rights, will, it is believed, do every-thing possible to avoid cause for a rup-ture. Whether Great Britain has folture. Whether Great Britain has fol-lowed up the step then taken here by making representations to the sultan of Turkey regarding his responsibility in allowing the volunteer steamers to pass the Dardanelles is not known in St. Petersburg, but there is the best reason for stating that such is not the case. Great Britain has no intention of re-opening the Dardanelles except possi-bly as a last resort.

The unyielding attitude on the part of Great Britain at this time, in view of the deep-seated and long-standing enmity existing in Russia against her, which is now likely to be revived with all intensity, would be exceedingly unall intensity, would be exceedingly un-fortunate. It would greatly aggravate the situation, and the diplomats with one accord deprecate the talk of serious international complications. All the embassies and legations telegraphed

St. Petersburg, July 21, 7:20 a. m. The Novoe Vremya this morning has a long editorial on the operations of the voluncer fleet steamers in the Red sea. The editorial makes no reference to the British official protest, but holds that the volunteer steamers are perfectly within their rights, according to international law, in stopping vessels of neutral powers.
