

COUNCIL SITS UP AND STARTS OVER

No Applications for Liquor Licenses Were Properly Presented.

THEY MEET AGAIN TOMORROW

During Last Night's Session, Sam Godman, License Collector, Was Put on the Griddle.

The city council discovered last night, after wrangling two hours, that none of the applications for saloon liquor licenses had been presented properly to the council, so the meeting was adjourned with an understanding that the license committee would take the matter up at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in the council chamber and hear the 24 rejected applicants. The inability of the city recorder, the license assessor and the city auditor to carry out the ordinance was responsible for the mix-up and all the saloonmen will have to make new applications this week. Despite the fact that the saloons have been closed since the ordinance was passed, the council will permit all the saloons to carry on their business. It is probable that the tangle will not be straightened out for a month. The ordinance requires that the applications be made to the city recorder, addressed to the city council, accompanied with an affidavit that the applicant owns the fixtures in the saloon and a copy of the lease on the building. A duplicate of the application, affidavit and lease is also to be filed with the license assessor and the city auditor. It developed last night that this had not been required. Sam J. Godman, the license assessor, resolved any question, kept the money in his possession, sent the applications to the chief of police for approval, then they were returned to the city recorder, and referred to the license committee. No duplicates have been filed in the city auditor and license assessor. Nothing has been seen of the copy of the lease on the building either.

BEGIN OVER AGAIN.

This method worked out all right when the license committee approved the applications and sent them to the council. But in the case of the 24 saloonmen who were refused licenses last Wednesday because the "American" party wanted to punish them, the city recorder had never received them, and could not produce them.

When City Recorder J. B. Moreton made this statement, the city attorney said that the applications were not properly before the council, as the provisions of the ordinance had not been carried out. President A. J. Davis ruled that there was nothing before the council, but suggested that all the saloonmen withdraw their present applications and present them according to the ordinance before Saturday so that the rejected applicants can be heard before the license committee.

Nearly all the saloonmen affected were present and most of them were represented by counsel. S. P. Armstrong, J. E. Darmer, and Soren A. Christensen were among the attorneys who are members of the "American" party who were present to defend their clients. They have promised their clients to pull them through all right.

AFTER GODMAN, TOO.

Sam J. Godman, the license assessor, was criticized by several of the councilmen as being incompetent. The 24 applications finally turned up in his hands last night after a search was made for them with the checks for $375 pinned on them. Godman has no right to hold any of the city's money for more than a day, but he has evidently been holding it for a week at a time. When Godman produced the applications, City Recorder Moreton asked him why he had not turned the applications over to him. Godman replied that he did not have to turn over the applications to him or the money either, for that matter.

After President Davis had ruled that there was nothing before the council, Stewart moved to adjourn. Godman, who sat in L. D. Wood's chair, seconded the motion. Councilman Martin called the chairman's attention to the fact that Godman had seconded the motion, and asked if the license assessor was a member of the council. Davis reprimanded him for his officious actions. Councilman Fernstrom started the wrangle last night when he moved that the council act as a committee of the whole to consider the rejected licenses. Half an hour was spent in wrangling over this, but it was finally carried. Then it was discovered that the rejected licenses were not in the recorder's possession and could not be taken up. None of the saloonmen had been notified to be present, but nevertheless most of them were there. There was a fusillade of motions and after another half an hour the members found themselves up in the air with nothing accomplished, so they adjourned to take the matter up in the committee.

AN EXAGGERATED REPORT.

(Special to the "News.") Washington, July 2.—Chief Engineer A. P. Davis of the reclamation service, who has just returned from the Pathfinder dam in Wyoming, reports the seriousness of the situation exaggerated. The floods have been unusual this year, and the construction of a dyke has been necessary, but if the water should approach the top of the dyke a tunnel that would take the surplus water will be driven. It is not thought by the engineers in charge that this will be necessary.

"THE BOND MAN" HERE.

Ralph Smith Meets With Sure Men And Also Talks Good Roads.

Ralph W. Smith, vice president of the National Surety company of New York, but whose home is in Denver, is in Salt Lake. Mr. Smith is known throughout the west as "the bond man," and he is now on his regular tour of western and northwestern cities in the interest of the business. He represented the surety men in this city. There were 18 in attendance, and matters of interest peculiar to the surety men were gone over. Mr. Smith was enthusiastic over the spirit of optimism he found in Salt Lake and predicted a great future for this city. Mr. Smith is president of the Colorado State Automobile association, also president of the Denver Motor club, and is very enthusiastic over the project of the good roads movement in the Centennial state. He expressed the hope that the time would soon come when a speedway between Salt Lake and Denver would be one of the matters to seriously engage the attention of motorists.

PEACEMAKER LANDS BAD.

Customary Result of Trying to Make Dove Hoost on Fighters.

While assuming the role of peacemaker in an altercation between C. L. Seber and John Morgan, which took place at Salt Palace last night, Harry McLaughlin was the victim of a knife wound inflicted by Morgan. Morgan was later arrested on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon. The original trouble, it is said, arose over a bet that had been made between Seber and Morgan. When McLaughlin interfered in behalf of his friend, Seber, Morgan became enraged, and, drawing a knife, began chasing McLaughlin, and then in a scuffle plunged the knife blade into McLaughlin's left leg, below the knee. The wound, although deep, was not of a serious nature.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater—The advance sale opened this morning for the sale of seats for Monday night's rendition of "Folly of the Circus." Manager Pyper announced that his electric fans will be in full operation, and that there is no place in the city as cool as the interior of the theater at this time.

Whitney Hall—In spite of the torrid weather conditions, Whitney Hall was well filled last night on the occasion of the repetition of Miss Margaret Whitney's operetta, "The Song of the Lark." No better tribute could have been paid the charming little work, the clever performers and the authors, than the heroic way in which the audience sat through the evening, alternating in perspiring, applauding, and demanding encores; indeed, the latter were so frequent that the performance was nearly doubled in length.

The piece has already been fully reviewed by the "News," and it is only necessary to repeat what was said before, that it is an astonishing instance of the talents of the young writer, and affords an undoubted indication of what may be looked for when her musical experience and education have been developed.

The cast last night was much the same as on the previous rendition, and the new members who appeared in their roles for the first time, did excellent work throughout. Miss Whitney herself, who had one of the leading parts, received some of the heartiest applause of the evening.

BROTHERS DROWN WHILE SWIMMING

Older of the Two Met Death Trying to Rescue Younger.

FOOT CAUGHT UNDER WATER

Old Mattress Holds Heroic Boy Prisoner—Aid Came Too Late To be of Avail.

The waters of a pool, formed from the overflow of the Jordan river, last night claimed in tragic manner the lives of two brothers, Wallace, aged 10 years, and Douglas, aged 8 years, the sons of O. M. Johnson, a contractor residing at 850 west Third South street. The pathetic feature of the tragedy was that the older boy lost his life in the futile endeavor to save his little brother.

The two lads had gone to the pool, or slough, near Tenth West and Fourth South, shortly after 7 o'clock, and with several playmates prepared to go in swimming. Douglas, the 8-year-old boy, was the first undressed, and although he could not swim, he started bravely to walk out into the water. Suddenly stepping off a "chuck-off," he was left alone crying before he went down.

At the sound of his brother's cry, Wallace immediately plunged in after him. Missing the first grasp, the older boy again dove beneath the water, and while groping about for the little fellow, in some manner his foot became caught, and was held with a vise-like grip in an old bed spring that had been thrown to the bottom of the pool. Unable to extricate himself, Wallace succumbed to the drowning death, in company with his brother who lay at the bottom of the pool.

At the cry for help given by the little boy when he went down first, several of the playmates began running in various directions, screaming for assistance. Will Richardson, 14 years of age, and John Pocock, another boy, who had been swimming in the Jordan river, and Oliver Johnson, an older brother of the drowned boy, quickly answered the calls, and although mere boys, showed heroism worthy of men. Without an instant's hesitation the three boys dove into the water in the hope of being able to rescue the victims. After a desperate effort Richardson succeeded in releasing Wallace from the trap in which he had been caught, and brought him to the surface, while Oliver Johnson was successful in raising the body of his little brother.

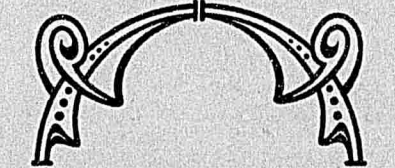

With the bodies on the bank the youthful rescuers attempted to resuscitate their former companions, and kept the work up until the arrival of the patrol wagon and physicians, but all efforts to revive life were futile. The bodies were removed to the home in the patrol wagon.

FINDS CONDITIONS ALARMING.

Medical Inspector Deane Advises Prosecution of Slaughter Houses.

Medical Inspector Herbert Deane returned last evening from an inspection of the slaughterhouse at Scaddell, whose investigation was demanded by telegram by Dr. D. V. Melickjohn of that town. Dr. Deane found conditions at the slaughterhouse shameful. Piles of refuse and offal were lying unburned, exposed to the sun where they were breeding germ disease carrying flies in proximity to the meats. Then the walls of the slaughterhouse were decorated with rotting pieces of meats and waste tissues, horrible to look at, and most offensive to the smell. These slaughterhouses are close to the habitations of 2,000 people, where not a few have been suffering from diseases said to be traceable to the unsanitary condition of the slaughterhouses which are operated by Italians who refuse to observe the law. Local sentiment is strong against them. The state board of health will act in the matter.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharp Meet Large Gathering at Their Home.

The celebration of the golden wedding of Charles Sharp and wife of East Jordan, which took place last Sunday at their home, was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Mr. Sharp was born in Northampton, England, in 1832. In 1850 he became a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in 1856 crossed the Atlantic. After staying in New York for 15 months he came west to Florence in Jesse Martin's company. He there engaged as teamster and came to Salt Lake City, walking all the distance. He endured many of the hardships of the early days in Utah, and enlisted in the Echo canyon war. Later he went to Union, and after staying there four years he moved to his present home.

Mr. Sharp is the daughter of Thomas Mallin and Mary Russ Mallin and a great-granddaughter of William Penn. Mallin, born at Hartford, Warwickshire, England, in 1832, and identified herself with the Mormon Church in 1850. In 1856 she left Liverpool with nearly 1,000 others who were gathering to the west. She journeyed to the Iowa camping grounds, where after waiting some time, she engaged as cook in John Hunt's wagon company, which left late in September. Many hardships were endured before the company reached Salt Lake City, which they did Dec. 2. Mr. and Mrs. Sharp have now living one son and five daughters. Also 47 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren.

OFFICIALS ARE ACQUITTED.

(Special to the "News.") Golden, Nev., July 2.—The jury failed to agree in the so-called conspiracy case in which County Commissioner Warden, Deputy County Physician Cowan, Druggist Briggs, of Rawhide, were charged with defrauding the county. It was alleged that by peddling and selling fraudulent bills for hospital maintenance, they had secured funds from the county. Eleven jurors voted for acquittal, and one juror for conviction. The case attracted much attention and was bitterly fought during the whole week.

The Wizard of the Wasatch Whispers to Captain Harris

That mysterious though benign personage, the Wizard of the Wasatch, has condescended again to pay Salt Lake a visit. This statement so fraught with interest to all loyal Salt Laker was vouchsafed to Fisher Harris, a particular friend of the Wizard's late yesterday evening. Fisher at once told B. F. Redman, who told it in turn to Steve Love, J. C. Leary and George W. Goddard, and the result was that these good boosters determined to prepare the way of the Wizard, so that he might be properly welcomed upon his arrival in Salt Lake.

SALT LAKE IS PRAISED.

Chicago Assn. of Commerce Appreciative of the Local Outlook.

Fisher Harris, secretary of the Commercial club, is in receipt of a letter from Edward M. Skinner, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, thanking the Salt Lake Commercial club for the hospitable manner in which the Chicago association was entertained upon the occasion of its recent visit to this city. The letter says that in the judgment of the Chicago business men, Salt Lake is destined to become one of the greatest commercial and financial centers in America. The letter also contains the signatures of Edward Clifford, who was in charge of the party in this city, and of H. A. Wheeler and Hugo Hartmann, officials of the association.
