

BATT'S BROTHER ON THE CHAMPION

Nelson's Early Life as It Appeared to One of the Family.

THINKS HE CAN LICK GANS

And Places the Time His Brother Will Leave the Ring on the Date He First Meets Defeat.

Fate, suffering, scarcely able to walk, and exasperated from ill-health aggravated by a severe attack of malaria, Henry M. Nelson, brother of Battling Nelson, has gone to Colorado in a last effort to regain his waning strength. A strange contrast, indeed to the youthful vigor and health with which his famous brother is blessed!

Although the mild mannered young man is far from impressing at first sight as the blood relation of a distinguished prize ring champion, still, despite the ill-health from which he suffers, he bears a marked resemblance to his pugilistic brother.

"I want to think of him as the outcome of a meeting between my brother and me," he said, in answer to a question put by the Deseret Post. "On the prize ring, I know very much about the time Batt has taken care of that sort of business for the whole family. But it is my opinion that if Gans were to train down to 125 pounds, he would be a good deal better than Batt would defeat him handily. However, much could defeat any man in the country of that weight. But, as I say, I don't know much about it. All I know is, what I see in the papers."

As to the fight here between Mike (Gans) Sullivan and Rube Smith, I should say without hesitation that Mike will lick him," then, with a smile, he added: "You see, I never heard of Rube Smith before, and I make it a rule always to stick up for people I know. I would a little rather not talk about prize fighting. My ignorance of the subject would bring the blush of shame to Batt's cheek if he should ever hear about it."

Poor in health since childhood, Henry says that he has never enjoyed it, although he is two years older than his distinguished brother, he has never even experienced the pleasure of giving the incorrigible Batt single drubbing.

"But he never needed it," affirmed Henry. "He was a good brother, always. He was needed by his mother, and by the other boys; that is, until he had the fight with him, then he was as nice as pie. He used to have a neighbor boy about Batt's age that I have always considered deserved credit for making my brother what he is. He used to pummel the life out of Batt. Why, that kid got so he couldn't eat his breakfast in the morning without coming over and giving Batt a licking just for fun. But after a year or two it would surprise you what a meal that boy could get away with without laying an eye on Batt."

"I never helped my brother in but one of his youthful fights; that was when a big Polack jumped on him. I think Henry's brother was destined for a most beautiful polishing off at that occasion, for that Polack hit him down and was going on in a good way when I jumped in and pulled him off and helped my brother on top. Well, would you believe it, after Batt taking advantage of my mistake, he had punched that kid right in his heart's content, he waded into me and gave me a good drubbing, and after that I just sunk into an unconscious state. I made up my mind then and there that I'd never help him again, not if I told him so. He said that was the wise course for me to pursue, and I guess it was, because he has never needed my assistance, and well, I couldn't help him much now, if he did need it."

"I don't know when he will quit, that's what I told him last February that he would quit when he gets licked. But I know him well enough to say that when Batt gets licked once he will have just begun to scrap. That's his kind."

Although Henry Nelson is very proud of his brother and the reputation he has made, it is more than evident that he loves Batt chiefly because of the manliness that has marked the latter's private and above all, his public life. Henry has always shown for his aged father and mother.

He has paid off the mortgage on the old place in Chicago and he keeps his father and mother in all the money they need. That is better than any champion's purse, and above all, he keeps his father and mother in the care of his money in Chicago, but when Batt began to make money in the ring he insisted on the old man quitting work.

"My father was very much provoked when Batt began fighting. You see, he went to a good job in the car works, and when Batt quit the job he was about the worst old man you ever saw. But he'll all over that now, and so is my mother."

"My father is a very quiet man and doesn't say much of any kind. He never saw Batt in one fight. That was when he met Britt in San Francisco. Just before the fight Batt wrote him to come on and he'd pay the expenses, and show him what the Nelson blood was like when it got good and warmed up. Well, I guess you'll guess my father. He was a real fighter, and I reckon he saw the time of his life. But when he got back home all we could get out of him was a few words. 'All right,' then he got out of his old pipe and began to smoke."

"Last time Batt came home he bought a trotting mare and a yellow-whipped buggy for my father and mother, one of those two-horse affairs, and high-topped, smooth soles, and all that kind of thing. He told me to death to see my father and mother get out for a drive. They would not let that thoroughbred go faster than a dog trot. But I have sometimes suspected that my father occasionally gets out in the country, where no one is watching, and stirs up the dust."

Henry Nelson is somewhat exercised over his fighting brother's matrimonial affairs, too, and he is particularly anxious to see the little Italian girl in San Francisco who is to be his sister-in-law.

"I haven't seen Batt since last February. He isn't much of a hand with his pen, but just after the earthquake he wrote me a letter, saying that he was going to hurry to San Francisco to take care of his little Italian girl, and I know Batt well enough to bet that he wouldn't hurry very fast to look after a girl he is not in love with. There'll be a wedding there some day and I hope he gets a good wife, and that she'll be the way of a husband, and I bet he will, too."

There is one other thing I wish you would say for me. That is that Battling is my brother's real name, not a nickname. Oscar Battling Matthew Nelson is

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Y. M. C. A. Courts Will See Series Begin This Afternoon for Trophy.

The championship in tennis of the Y. M. C. A. involved a series of games scheduled to begin this afternoon at 4 o'clock. While most of the players listed are only beginners they are developing fast, and victory and defeat is expected to be shown before the finals are reached. A tennis racket donated by the Western Arms company will be given to each of those in the singles finals, and a second racket will be played off to determine the winner among those counted out in the first round.

BIKE RACES TOMORROW

Kramer Will Ride Unpaced Half Mile Against Time.

Tomorrow night the bike fans will have a chance to see Kramer in action again, and to those who have followed the game long enough to tell the finer points of summer cycling, the thing will be well worth while. Kramer rides with a good deal of his own, and an ease of manner that suggests an easy killing if he should ever really steam up.

The season's Kramer is after this time, according to the press agent, is the half-mile unpaced, but according to his own plan, it will probably be a case of just spinning around to get used to the audience and the crowd. He won't break any records just yet, as the psychological moment has not arrived, and besides he has lost the prize money last night. Kramer was out at Saltair with Handy Davidson, who was out in the water in a gay riding suit that made the waves sit up and take notice.

Besides the Kramer exhibition there are also some races. The first is a half-mile open and an Australian pursuit race and half-mile handicap. A motor paced race between Evening, Moore and Sam Wilson is on, depending on the favor of the chug-chug wheels.

NEW LEAGUE SCHEDULE

Utah Baseball Will Get a New Start Next Week With Three Teams.

The State league baseball schedule will begin Sunday next with a game at Park City and Salt Lake. Eureka may not be able to play on that day as the new league is a three-day game and all the teams can do is to meet terms of the commercial leagues. The Occidental team has been asked to play Eureka Sunday, and the game may possibly be arranged. The forfeit of $100 which came from Ogden when the team quit the league is to be divided among the three teams, all three getting something out of it.

New York, Aug. 8.—Everything passed off quietly at the Polo grounds today, and Chicago beat the New York team by 3 to 2. It was learned early in the afternoon that the local club would not prohibit the entrance of any umpire assigned by President Pulliam to the grounds. When Umpires Johnston and Emile reached the gate they were accompanied by President Pulliam, who had come hastily from Saratoga, and as soon as he had seen the pair gain admittance without interference he hurried away in an automobile without going inside the turnstile. Neither Manager McGraw nor Umpire Emile were to be seen today, as each had incurred the penalty of suspension for a few days.

KING'S CUP

Trophy Goes to Effort in Yacht Races At Newport.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 8.—F. M. Smith's little sloop Effort won today's race for the king's cup. The new challenger Queen, owned by J. Rogers Maxwell, led the fleet at the finish, but lost the race by nine seconds on time allowance.

The race was sailed in a fine club-toppled breeze from the east over a 27½-mile course, 11 miles of which was to windward in a smooth sea. The Queen led nearly the entire distance, but the Effort reached for the finish very fast and just clinched the race.

Nine yachts started, five schooners, three sloops and a kawl, and seven finished, the sloop Rainbow and the schooner Effort meeting with accidents.

The name of the Effort's owner will be the first to be inscribed on the trophy presented to the New York Yacht club by King Edward VII.

The finish was a beautiful picture, and the hundreds ashore and aloft who saw the spectacle were well rewarded, although few knew that the little Effort twenty minutes late had won the cup.

On coming ashore Commodore Vanderbilt sent a telegram to King Edward announcing the Effort as the winner of the race and thanking him for his generosity. The sloop Effort was built this year for F. M. Smith from designs by H. J. C. and he won quite a number of minor events this season. Mr. Smith lives in New York and San Francisco.
