EASTERN NOTES.

There seems to be a good deal of complaint at the manner with the representatives of the press were treated yesterday at the White House. Being compelled by the police to occupy positions where they could see nothing; and some of the lady correspondents indignantly left the building. We doubt if the General Babcock was responsible for this inconsiderate treatment. It was the work of some officious understrappers. — Washington Star, Jan. 2.

Conductors on the Boston horse railroad have been compelled for some time past to use a wonderful little punch wherewith they perforate the tickets taken from passengers. We have not been able to comprehend the mysteries of this little implement, but its defective nature is such that the receipts of the Metropolitan railway have increased thirty-five per cent. since it has been in use. This fact is rather startling in view of the superior character of the Boston conductors were supposed to have. — Ex.

The Mantoville (Minn.) Express says Judge Lord of the District Court of that place, recently decided that, in Minnesota, "the owner of cattle is liable for damages committed by them upon the lands of another, notwithstanding there may be no fence what-so-ever and that the statute which provides that no damages shall be recovered for depredations done by beasts, in the daytime, unless it first be proved that the premises damaged were protected on the side where the breach was made, by a lawful fence, is unconstitutional and void." An appeal has been taken to the Supreme Court of the State.

White steam railway companies who might heat their cars with steam from the boilers, continue to roast passengers to death by the use of stoves, and smash up on the least provocation, horse railway companies who might safely use stoves, persist in freezing their passengers. Quicker isn't it? Stoves are used in the street cars at Albany, and while they keep the passengers comfortably warm, occupy no more room than would be required by two sitting and two standing passengers. If the companies are too greedy, however, to sacrifice the space which represents twenty cents fare, they might use hot water pipes along the floor beneath the seats, which practically take no room. A fresh supply of hot water every trip would ensure the comfort of the passengers in very severe weather, if there could be some means devised at the same time to keep the front doors of the cars from being continually opened, causing by the draft innumerable colds and rheumatisms. — Ex.

The new army uniform, worn for the first time by the officers yesterday, at the President's reception, attracted much attention. It is very showy, and the plumes of the various branches of the service are designated by different colors. The coat is of dark blue cloth, double breasted, with a skirt extending from one-half to three-quarters of the distance between the hip and the knee. Staff officers wear pants of dark blue cloth without stripe; other officers wear light blue pants, with stripe of similar color to that of the facings of their respective arms, except for infantry officers, where the stripe is of dark blue. Gen. Sherman wore two rows of buttons on the breast of his coat, placed in fours. He wore epaulettes, and his plume consisted of three white ostrich feathers. Other general and staff officers wore three black ostrich feathers, and regimental officers wore plumes of horse hair or cock's feathers of a color similar to the trimmings of their coats. Gen. Sherman and the general and staff officers wore chapeaus, light artillery and cavalry officers, black felt helmets with gold cords and tassels and gilt trimmings; other officers dark blue cloth hats. Generals Babcock and Dent were attired in full dress suits, and not in uniform, as heretofore. — Washington Star, Jan. 2.
