A CARD.

THE DESERET HOSPITAL, UNDER the most favorable auspices, is now open for the reception of patients, having removed to that large and commodious building lately occupied by the Deseret University. The appointments are new and of the first order. The halls and rooms are thoroughly ventilated, and warmed by a furnace and steam heating apparatus extending through the whole building. Good and capable nurses are supplied, and every attention paid to the comfort and welfare of its inmates. The medical department comprises a fine stock of drugs, and a line of some of the most valuable and elegant surgical instruments and appliances ever imported into the Territory. Arrangements have been made to secure the first medical talent the city affords for the benefit of patients. A specialty is made of the diseases of women, and correspondence is solicited from the afflicted.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS and DISORDERED LIVER.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, a feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work, and are a perfect ANTIDOTE to MALARIA.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BEES IN THE SOUTH.

ROCKVILLE,
Washington Co., U. T.,
June 7th, 1885.

Editor Deseret News:

A little more about bees in the South. At Minersville, Beaver County, only a few bees are kept, and with unusual

LOSS THIS SPRING.

The people of Beaver City have more largely extended the science of bee-keeping, and have made it quite profitable. They also complain of heavy loss, and that too since Spring has set in. At Parowan, Iron County, one of the best bee districts in this part of the country, and which has made a decided success in bee-culture, with abundant surplus, we also heard great complaints of spring deaths among them. Having a little more time to spare here than in the past, we looked into the cause more effectually, and found it to be simply starvation. One bee keeper at Summit has lost 20 swarms out of 28. Brother William Marsden has only three left out of a nice flourishing apiary. We visited one of the best and most successful keepers, possessed of 50 swarms, who has lost many, but not near so great a proportion as others. We found Cedar City in a similar condition, having lost immeely. At the fruit bloom season brooding was induced largely, and the unusually early spring brought great increase, when the honey flow ceased, leaving large families to support and the stores of honey exhausted, and not sufficient to be obtained from the vegetation to support them. In such a case the skillful bee keeper supplies their wants, which is easily done where the hives are properly constructed, and a very little expense and care will enable them to continue on until a flow of honey shall come, when they can take care of themselves and give their keepers a good and easy return. On close examination it was ascertained that so great was the starvation of the bees that that they had eaten their young brood, and driven their drones out of the hive which is often the case in time of scarcity not allowing the idler to eat the bread of the laborer. After the poor little industrious bees can find pasture they make good use of their time until their hives are completely filled up. There are times when the honey flow is more abundant than at other seasons, the scarcity being caused some times by drouth, while at other times it results from too much wet or too cool weather.

It is said that last year the honey yield was very light in this district, hence the cause of starvation this spring, which might have been prevented by care on the part of bee-keepers. A supply of combs of honey should be kept until spring to feed the starving bees, by exchanging them for empty ones, and had this been adopted hundreds of colonies of bees might have been saved that have been lost.

THE CONTRAST

In the condition of bees was remarkable when we passed over the Rim of the Basin into our Utah's Dixie. In less than half a day's drive we found bees with a surplus of honey. One swarm had cast off two swarms and twenty-five pounds of surplus honey.

We also found new potatoes and peas here on the Santa Clara river on May 30th, while the day before we left starving bees, and potatoes just emerging from the ground. In St. George Sister Annie Cannon Woodbery has fifty hives of bees, and has taken over 500 pounds of honey this year up to the first of June. Many other bee-keepers are also doing well this season in our Dixie. Washington, six miles from St. George, is wonderful for bee-keeping, and is the best honey district we have discovered during our whole journey, the surrounding pasture is so extensive. The muskeet brush is very abundant here, also the great bee plant and a great variety of flowers; and the climate is so admirably adapted to the wintering of bees that scarcely any loss occurs. We visited Brother John Rice's apiary, which are capable of securing in this climate at least 15,000 pounds of honey, with proper care. Brother Wright Lancaster has forty colonies, he being a carpenter, manufactures his own hives, which are very neat and orderly, and to add to their beauty they are neatly arranged under his beautiful vineyard, as are also Brother Price's. The honey obtained here is most excellent. The comb honey is very white and tempting, but the market in this region is not encouraging. E. STEVENSON.

THE SEPOY MUTINY.

REMINISENCES OF ONE OF THE SURVIVORS.

There is an entry in the books of the insane department at Brooklyn which reads: "February 26, 1884, admitted; transferred to insane department September 5, 1884; James E. Dockrey, aged 45 years; nativity, New York; occupation, teacher; social state, widower; diagnosis, ——" and here there is a blank, which was recently filled up by Dr. Richardson verbally with the single word "dementia." This is a species of partial or temporary insanity, which in the case of James Dockrey, takes the form of almost total oblivion regarding comparatively recent events, while his memory of circumstances which occurred prior to his present affliction seems to be nearly, if not thoroughly unimpaired.

James E. Dockrey has a history, which, without any hesitation, and with but one misstatement, he related recently as he sat in Dr. Richardson's office, on the third floor of the men's wing of the insane department. A short, broad-shouldered man, of powerful build, somewhat fallen away from protracted confinement, a very intelligent face, covered with a stubbly iron-gray beard, straight hair of the same color, brushed away from the face and cut straight around, as if in the old-fashioned nautical manner by means of a basin, and a pair of gray eyes which, but for a weakness of the lids, rendering them somewhat bloodshot, would have been very mild and intelligent.

In 1856, when the terrible mutiny of the Sepoys broke out in India," said he, "I was in Australia, near the town of Melbourne. The news came to us of the horrible deeds of the brutal blacks and my blood boiled to go and fight against them. Although I was born in America, my father was a Scotchman from the city of Aberdeen and my mother an Irishwoman, so I not only had fighting blood in me, but could almost think they were my own fellow-country people the Sepoys were massacreing. I had been in India several times and could speak one or two of the dialects quite fluently. I therefore shipped on a trader for Bombay on the condition that I should leave the ship when I arrived. As soon as I got ashore I joined the Volunteer Naval Brigade, under command of an officer named Stewart. We marched through the great peninsula towards Calcutta. But before we got there many a time we thought we never should arrive. The Volunteer Naval Brigade was part of the army under Sir Henry Havelock, and it would be no news to tell you how that army was cut to pieces and decimated long before it reached the coast.

"We literally fought our way through the country, leaving thousands of our men, women and children on the road, killed by the most cruel and cunning enemy in the world. The sights I saw during that terrible march will never be eradicated from my memory. Delicate women staked alive and their limbs torn from their bodies while still living; children tied by the feet to two animals and then torn in halves—the horrible atrocities are still fresh in the minds of many who were but children then, and it is not so long ago but that most adults remember the story. We came hand to hand several times with the black devils at Kootapoor and at Shanghai and Rodar and then at Cawnpore, until on the 17th of October, 1857, we reached Lucknow. There we were nearly overpowered, for there were only a few of us left. We had to fight our way through the streets of Lucknow, keeping together and holding our own as well as we could. You must remember that, although the Sepoys were more than half savages, they had the advantage of military training under European officers. So we had to keep our eyes very wide open when fighting against well-armed, well-trained forces for outnumbering us and combining European with Eastern war tactics. Besides, they were natives and could stand the terrible climate better than we.

"Well, we managed to fight our way through them till we reached the Residency, where we found a weary and horrible resting place for nearly a month. Men and women were there already. The place was ill-adapted for a barricade, but they had made it comparatively secure for so long as the ammunition held out. Day after day passed away and watchful sentries, carefully saving their powder and bullets, would only use them to pick off some too zealous Sepoy who seemed to be inclined to creep too near to our barricades. At night we would count our dead—for the privation and horrible atmosphere killed some nearly every day—and buried them in the yard as far from the building as possible. And each night special precautions were taken to guard against the expected incendiary of the blacks or a possible assault on our enfeebled garrison.

"I think I will never forget the joy with which we poor, starving, besieged folk heard the distant sounds of the Highland bagpipes, nor the shout which burst upon the pestilence-thickened air when the British redcoats rushed along through the streets of Lucknow, fierce with the rage of avengers, and released us from our prison. I seem to have gotten mixed up somewhere there, and I guess nearly all of us did, for we were all half-mad with starvation and constant watching. Anyhow, I was taken to Calcutta to recuperate my health, and as the mutiny was suppressed shortly after that and I was only a volunteer, I thought I'd had enough of soldiering for a time and gave up the army. I went to Bombay when my health was better and remained in business for some time, but I had a roaming spirit and had to take to my old calling—the sea—again at the end of about a year."

Mr. Dockrey, in answer to a question if he considered the sea his profession, said:

"No, sir: I am by profession a clergyman. I have been so much on the sea, though, that perhaps I know more of it than anything else."

"Do you remember how you came here?"

"No, sir. All I know is that it must have been near the Fourth of July, for I remember to have heard the booming of guns, and on inquiring what they were firing for, was told the date. After that I remember nothing till I found myself here. I have a wife living somewhere in Canada, but I cannot remember where."

Dr. Richardson said that Mr. Dockery's case was most satisfactory. He is very considerably improved since his admission. He is a Free Mason and an Odd Fellow, and his last question to the reporter before saying good-by was:

"Have you ever traveled East?"—Philadelphia Times.

Marsh Family Gathering.

The Marsh Family will hold their second family gathering and basket picnic at Lake Pleasant, Montague, Mass., July 29, 1885.

All persons by the name of Marsh and those of other names connected by marriage or descent with the family, are invited to attend and bring copies of as much as possible of their family records to aid the committee on genealogy who are constantly receiving fresh information.

Ample hotel accommodations on the ground. All who go by railroad should buy Lake Pleasant excursion tickets or with coupons for free return tickets, which will be good till September.

Please pass this to any interested parties.

By order of Committee.

Greenfield, Mass., June 5, 1885.

Meanest Sneak in Town.

Malarial gases sneaked up through the poorly constructed drains and made baby very sick with malarial fever. Baby would have died but for timely use of Brown's Iron Bitters. There is nothing meaner in its way of coming, nor worse in its effects, than this malaria from the underground regions. Mrs. McDonald, of New Haven, Conn., says, "For six years I suffered from the effects of malaria, but Brown's Iron Bitters cured me entirely." Try it when malaria steals in and undermines your constitution. It will give relief.

DANGEROUS SUBSTITUTES FOR HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

Several inferior and dangerous "substitutes" for the genuine "Horsford's Acid Phosphate" are being offered for sale; and we hereby caution the dealers and public against buying or using them, as they will not produce the same effect upon the system as the genuine "Horsford's," and the ingredients in some of them are dangerous to health.

Some of these "substitutes" or imitations are simply Dilute Phosphoric Acid, which interferes with the digestion; while the genuine "Horsford's" not only causes no trouble with the digestive organs, but materially assists in their action.

One preparation that is being offered for sale, by the gallon, contains Meta- or Pyro-Phosphoric Acid, which are declared by the highest authority to be poisonous. The same preparation also contains Chloric Acid, which is a compound of Chlorine. "Horsford's" contains neither of these ingredients.

These "substitutes" are liable to be found at soda fountains, because of their cheapness.

CALL for "HORSFORD'S," and TAKE NO OTHER. NEVER SOLD IN BULK.
