GRAND There is abundant room for progress in this branch of education, in the country as well as in the city. A tour through the land will reveal, in houses of all ranks of society, cookery which is the fruitful scource of dyspepsis and fits frightful train of ills. In the houses of many farmers, particularly in the West and South, where abundance is always present however coarse the quality, how often are tough meats floated in gresses and fried to the pliancy and color of leather, and served with biscuits like bullets, and of nearly equal destructive-ness. If the Arabs permitted divorce for ignorance of bread-making, their laws were less inimical to good morals than are those of Indiana. A woman is a broken reed, who cannot, in time of need—which is emphatically the hour of servant-girl absenteeism—produce the staff of life. Few kitchengirls can bake a loaf of bread of the first quality; many are able to make only the most wretched failures. It would not be ex-travagant to say that bad bread has destroyed more life than gunpowder —certainly produced more suffering. Whatever a woman's accomplishments or fortune, she cannot be certain of having wholesome food for her family unless she can, at least, teach practically the high art of bread-making. It is a prime essential in a young woman's education, for the lack of which no cul-ture in other directions can compensate. 「風」の記』に通行「白 A Lively Business in Produce. Commercial Enterprise. Bows. GODBE Many of those who have neglected Many of those who have neglected this education in youth will be compeli-ed to acquire it under circumstances the most disagreeable and inopportune, as in the case of a friend of a well-known American authoress, (Mrs. Sigourney,) who encountered a disheartening and mortifying experience in the West, but persevering, surmounted all obstacles, and became as accomplished in domes-tic affairs as in the learning of the schools.
