BREVITIES.

Twenty-four tons of ice are manufactured daily by a New Orleans company.

The St. Louis brewers pay $300,000 a year for hops alone, and considerably more for barley.

A French newspaper's definition of a whale—an antediluvian sardine.

Brasil, Indiana, manufactures thirty tons of superior pig iron every day.

A French Catholic church is to be built in Utica, N. Y.

Do but the half of what you can, and you will be surprised at the result of your diligence.

George Kane, of Halifax, lately sold his wife to a man named Norbury for $6, Nova Scotia currency.

Wm. B. Astor, rumor says, is going to build a magnificent hotel in New York.

The accomplished art-critic of the London Times pronounces Josef Israels the first of living Dutch painters.

Russia is anxiously looking for a pretext to wash down a slice of Turkey with a little sublime Porte.

When you speak what you admit to be plain truth, expect others to think it downright ugly.

One hundred and seventy-one German newspapers are published in the United States, of which forty-six are dailies.

There are now in London 147 building societies in active operation, erecting dwellings at the rate of six thousand annually.

English women are going to found a female university on the road between London and Cambridge, with professions, degrees and everything.

Adversity has ever been considered as the state in which a man most easily becomes acquainted with himself—particularly being free from flatterers.

Human knowledge is a proud pillar, but it is built in the midst of a desert of ignorance, and those who have ascended the highest have gained a more extended view of the waste.

"He does not know a hawk from a hand-saw. This old saw has puzzled many who were not aware that hand-saw is a perversion of harnshaw, and that harnshaw, in old English, meant a young heron. To say of any one that he could not distinguish the daring falcon from its timid prey was a lively way of characterizing stupidity at a time when falconry was in fashion.

A descendant of Nabal having put a crown-piece into "the plate" in an Edinburgh church, one Sunday morning, by mistake, instead of a penny, asked to have it back, but was refused. In once, in forever. "Aweel, aweel," granted he, "I'll get credit for it in heaven." "Na, na," said Jesus, the door-keeper, "ye'll get credit only for the penny ye meant to gi."

Years ago when the project of a route to the West through the Hoosac mountains was first started, the late Rev. Thomas Whitmore, President of the Vermont and Massachusetts Railroad, was in the western part of the State, and an enthusiastic tunnel man was urging the importance and feasibility of the enterprise. "Why," said he, "look at the route. It seems as if the finger of providence had pointed it out."

"What a pity," said the old minister, "the finger hadn't been run through the mountain!"

The tradesmen in France who supply the household of the Emperor are said to have their bills settled but once a year, and the title of purveyor to the palace is highly prized. Yet it is well paid for, as the price at which the palace is supplied is not left to the tradesman—it is imposed on him. Thus there is always a loss of twenty-five to thirty-five per cent, in furnishing the Imperial house. A leading purveyor in Paris is said to lose $10,000 per year. It is right to say that he regains that amount, because the Imperial coat of arms over his door draws customers to his shop on whom he lays a tax of more than one hundred per cent. The butter merchant also loses $10,000 or $15,000 a year, but he also regains it from the public.

A French author finding his reputation impeded by the hostility of the critics, resolved to adopt a little stratagem to assist him in gaining fame and money in spite of his enemies. He dressed himself in workman-like attire, and repaired to a distant province, where he took lodgings at a farrier's shop, in which he did a little work every day at the forge and anvil. But the greater part of his time was secretly devoted to the composing of three large volumes of poetry and essays, which he published as the works of a journeyman blacksmith. "The poems of this 'child of Nature,'" this "untutored genius," "inspired son of Vulcan," as he was now called, were immediately praised by the critics, and were soon purchased by everybody. The harmless deceit filled the pockets of the poor poet, who laughed to see the critics writing incessant praise on an author whose every former effort they made a point of abusing.

It is not tools that make the workman, but the trained skill and perseverance of the man himself. Indeed it is proverbial that the bad workman never yet had a good tool. Some one asked Ope by what wonderful process he mixed his colors, "I mix them with my brains, sir," was the reply. It is the same with every workman who would excel. Ferguson made marvelous things—such as his wooden clock, that actually measured the hours—by means of a common penknife, a tool in everybody's hand; but then every body is not a Ferguson. A pan of water and two thermometers were the tools by which Dr. Black discovered latent heat; and a prism, a lens and a sheet of pasteboard enabled Newton to unfold the composition of light and the origin of color.
