

SOCIALISTS GET UNUSUALLY ACTIVE

Their Determination to Secure Direct Universal Suffrage Causes Demonstration.

KEPT BERLIN POLICE BUSY.

Halls Packed and Resolutions Passed—Movement is Widespread and Growing.

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The determination of the Socialists to secure direct universal suffrage, combined with their indignation against Chancellor von Buelow's curt declaration refusing their demands, gave rise today to an unusual scene and a monster popular demonstration, accompanied by disorder, in the streets of the Prussian capital, in which 40,000 organized Socialists participated, while 30,000 sympathizers from time to time actively joined in the manifestations. One of the most remarkable features of today's uprising was the number of women who engaged in the demonstrations, and they appeared even more earnest in their activities than the men. The authorities took the strictest measures to prevent disorders and the strictest precautions to protect the assembly and other public buildings, and Prince von Buelow's residence against the outbreak of fury. Groups in the streets were dispersed in the most vigorous manner, and collisions between processions of manifestants and the police resulted in the injury of a considerable number of the demonstrators, but, so far as known, no fatalities occurred in this city. The police refrained from making arrests, except in cases of extreme violence.

MOVEMENT WIDESPREAD
The movement extends throughout Prussia, where the Socialists are exceptionally numerous. Reports received from other cities, however, do not indicate that the demonstrations there were accompanied by violence. Notwithstanding the police commissioners' warning that repressive measures would be applied, many thousand Socialists gathered in the morning at the 600 local headquarters of the various districts of the capital, and there proceeded in groups, singing revolutionary songs, toward the eight halls in the city where mass meetings had been announced.

From 10 o'clock in the morning the entire police force had been on duty. Two hundred men, with officers, were hidden in each of the fire stations, and large bodies were held in reserve at the police stations, while public buildings were requisitioned also, where the police forces were quartered to act in any emergency.

In the gardens and outhouses of the landings, before which the demonstration on Friday occurred, heavy guards were stationed. Street cars and other vehicles were permitted to drive in front of the building, but no group of more than two pedestrians was allowed to pass on any pretext. Chancellor von Buelow's palace on Wilhelmstrasse was entirely cut off by cordons of police, as violent manifestations threatened. The palace was surrounded, while the environs of the imperial palace, with the square in front, were closed to the public. Squads of police, both on foot and mounted, patrolled the central thoroughfares.

SOCIALISTS DETERMINED.

The Socialists showed great determination in their attempts to hold processions, although the police made energetic endeavors to prevent this. Long before the hour of noon, the time fixed to begin the meetings, all the halls were completely packed, and the police drew up in force around the doors to hold the crowds in check. Those who could not get within the buildings were driven into the adjoining streets by the police. Inside the halls the greatest enthusiasm prevailed, the excitement increasing as the speakers denounced the action of the chancellor, whose name was received with loud booing and hissing. The speakers did not advise violence, but declared that if violence occurred, the responsibility would fall upon the police and the privileged classes, who refused the people their rights.

Resolutions favoring universal suffrage and a secret ballot were adopted by acclamation, after which the audiences streamed into the streets. The police immediately attempted to disperse the throngs, which showed a decided intention to march in procession towards the palace square. In most cases the processions were soon broken up, the police displaying the utmost energy. Two formidable columns, however, marched as far as Alexander Platz, within a short distance of the emperor's palace, where the police charged them, inflicting many injuries. Eventually they succeeded with the greatest difficulty in scattering the demonstrators, who retired shouting and cheering ironically towards Unter den Linden. Thousands of spectators already had gathered there from curiosity and the police followed the broken ranks of the paraders, clearing the entire thoroughfare as far as Brandenburger gate, where most of the people fled rapidly along the paths to Tiergarten. Many of them, however, escaped along the side streets, Friederichstrasse and Wilhelmstrasse.

Later some thousands of the demonstrators gathered a short distance from Chancellor von Buelow's residence and began shouting down the chancellor, who had driven through into Friederichstrasse.

CHARGED BY POLICE.

Their attitude became so threatening that both the mounted and foot police charged them fiercely, striking right and left with the flat of their sabers. Scores of the manifestants were knocked down and trampled upon, and the great crowd at length was broken up into small groups. Among them there were many injured.

Another serious collision occurred at Jungfern bridge, where many suffered severe contusions. On Moritz Platz an immense throng shouted and hooted until the police with drawn arms forced them into the side streets. Thousands attempted to reach Berlin from the suburbs after the meetings there, but found every thoroughfare barred. It was impossible to get through without contact with the police, and a great majority of the excursionists returned to their homes. Towards evening quiet was resumed in the center of the city, but several small groups marched in the outlying streets singing the "Marsellaise." The main force of the police was withdrawn at night, but patrols continued to prevent groups from forming.

In the suburbs during the day 14 other meetings that were held attracted even greater crowds of men and women than the meetings in the city. At these gatherings stirring songs were sung, set to military music, as well as the "Marsellaise."

MURDER FAILED, SUICIDED.

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 12.—John Alexander May Althoff, an Oakland clubman, aged 46 years, son of a New York banker, fater firing two shots at his wife, turned the revolver upon himself and blew out his brains tonight. Temporary insanity is given as a reason for the deed. Althoff had on previous occasions threatened to kill his wife.

THE RENT STRIKE.

Landlords Will Appeal to Legislature at Albany.

New York, Jan. 13.—A new turn was taken in the rent strike agitation yesterday when a meeting of 700 landlords was held to discuss the matter. It was decided to have introduced in the legislature a bill making it a felony for any political agitator to incite tenants to refuse to pay rental which has been agreed upon. At present it is a misdemeanor. The recent rent strike in the East Side tenements was supported by the Socialist party.

J. GILMAN CHOUTEAU DEAD.

St. Louis, Jan. 12.—J. Gilman Chouteau, aged 72 years, descendant of the founder of St. Louis, who was born in 1836 in the first house erected in the city, died here yesterday at the hotel at which he had been staying for 22 years.

EMMET R. OLCOTT DEAD.

New York, Jan. 12.—Stricken with apoplexy, Emmet R. Olcott, 62 years old, one of the best known lawyers in this country on international questions, dropped unconscious on the sidewalk near his home last night, and died before the arrival of medical aid.

Mr. Olcott was born in this city. He was associated for a time with the firm of O'Connell Brothers and later he became a member of the firm of Olcott, Mott & Gonzalez.

Immediately following the Spanish-American war, Mr. Olcott drafted the code of railroad laws in Cuba during the time that Gen. Leonard Wood was governor. Later these laws became permanent.

NEW THIRD RAIL SYSTEM.

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—A new third rail system for propelling electric cars was tested on a specially prepared track at Beverly Hills, near this city, yesterday, and proved a success. The experiment was witnessed by representatives of Los Angeles transportation companies and may be adopted here.

The inventor, Timothy Maloney, a resident of this city, propelled a car at the rate of 35 miles an hour and claims that it could have attained twice that speed.

Two parallel rails between the tracks supply the current. At intervals of about half the length of a car there is a "cut-off" or break in the rails, which takes the current into a box at the side of the track and leaves the rails over which the coach has just passed "dead." In this way the element of danger which would exist if the inner rails remained charged is completely removed.

A NEW SWINDLE.

New York, Jan. 13.—Clerks and stenographers in down town office buildings are being besieged by men and women who have found a new swindle. They sell pamphlets describing the life of Harry K. Thaw and his wife and the killing of Stanford White, claiming that they are raising a defense fund for Thaw. The pamphlets are lurid to a degree and at least one is written in English for a quarter and prospective purchasers are urged to buy, with stories of the need for a defense fund if Thaw is to have a fair trial. No arrests have yet been made, but Thaw's

GEN. CUSTER'S WIDOW

Will Build Home for Aged Literary Women as Memorial to Husband.

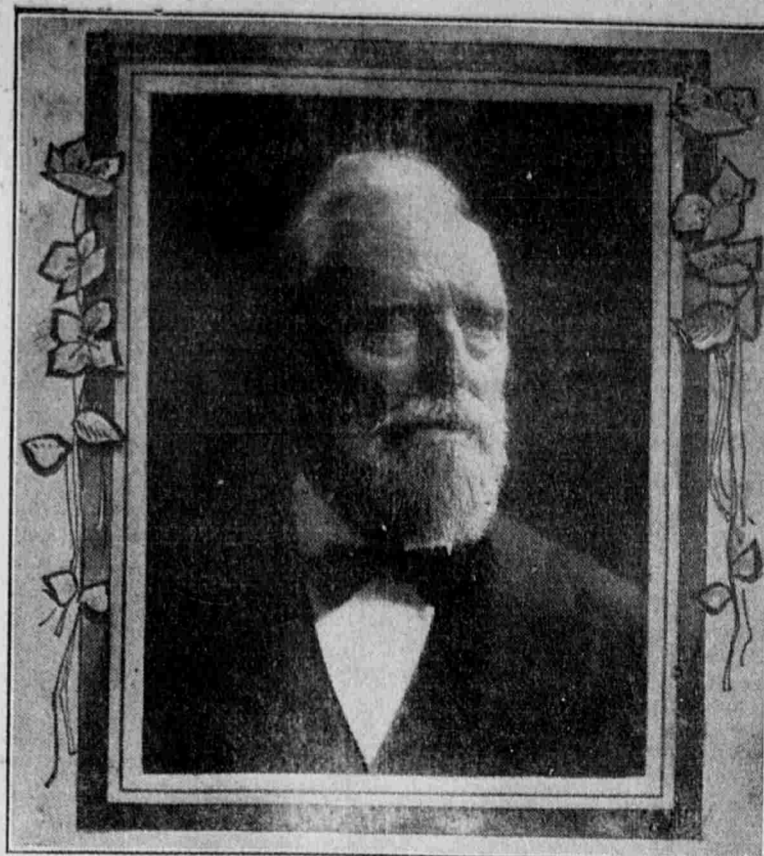

New York, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, widow of Gen. Custer, who was killed in the Indian massacre in the west in 1876, intends to erect a home for aged literary women as a memorial to her husband.

She has purchased 16 lots in Bronxville, Westchester county, and will erect the home there. Mrs. Custer has written several books and has long been interested in literary women.

MUTINY ON WHALING BARK.

San Francisco, Jan. 13.—The American Sintram, which arrived late yesterday afternoon from Sydney, Aus., brings with her a story of mutiny on the whaling bark Andrew Hicks, on the Sintram is Frank Ballinger, who was steward on the whaler, and was put ashore because of sickness, at Norfolk Island, where the Sintram picked him up.

Ballinger states that the crew of the Andrew Hicks became mutinous just before Norfolk Island was reached, and threatened to take charge of the

THE LATE WILLIAM H. WALKER.

As chronicled in Friday's Evening "News," William H. Walker, a former citizen of this county, passed away at his home in Lewistown, Idaho, Thursday, Jan. 8. He was born 8 years ago, August 28 last. He was born in Peacham, Caledonia Co., Vermont. When a boy of 15 he became a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. For five years prior to the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith he lived at the prophet's house, and was counted a member of the family. He remained true to his convictions and followed the main body of the Church in its exodus. At Council Bluffs he enlisted and became a member of the famous Mormon Battalion, crossing the great plains and deserts to the Pacific Coast. Upon being discharged he returned again to the body of the Church and assisted the people to the Salt Lake valley, arriving here in the fall of '47.

In building up of the state he assisted greatly. He established mills and other manufacturing concerns. He encouraged all kinds of enterprises and lent assistance in promoting them and was always on the progressive list. In Church duties he was identified with most of the organizations, and filled the office of patriarch, to which office he was ordained by President Joseph F. Smith, May 30, 1892. He has always been a valiant and loyal defender of Church principles. In 1892 he received a call to fill a mission to South Africa where he spent five years laboring in the Cape of Good Hope, and in the neighboring provinces on the east.

He has also spent 15 years in temple work, and with his sister, Lucy Kimball, has performed ordinances for over 10,000 people. He is the father of 23 children, 24 of whom are living; the grandfather of 133 children; the great-grandfather of 27 children, and they all bear evidence of his great and noble character.

The funeral was held yesterday at 2 p. m. from the Lewisville meeting-house.
