CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 4.—Bills were introduced to provide for the families of deceased pensioners.

By Harris—To punish rape with death.

Also the following joint resolution by Morgan:

Whereas, It is declared in the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution that all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside, and that no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction equal protection of law;

Resolved, That Indians born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are persons within the meaning of the Constitution, and such persons are citizens of the United States and States wherein they reside, and are subject to the jurisdiction of the Government of the United States.

Morgan wanted the resolution placed on the calendar, that the relations between the Government and these tribes might be determined. Finally it was referred to the judiciary committee.

Davis, from the appropriation committee, reported back the House joint resolution to amend an act appropriating for sundry civil expenses.

The House bill making an additional appropriation of $135,000 for certain Indian tribes for the current fiscal year passed.

After the morning hour Logan resumed his speech on the Fitzjohn Porter bill.

Logan proceeded to review the evidence presented before the Court martial by which Porter was tried, to support and prove his assertion that it proved the charges Porter disobeyed orders in the face of the enemy. When Porter got Pope's order to start at 1 o'clock that night, and be at Bristol by daylight, it was not his duty to inquire as to the nature of the night, but to immediately issue orders to his Adjutant General to be ready to start at 1 o'clock at night. Instead of this it is evident that he said to those standing by when he read the dispatch, "There's a chance for a short nap," and that afterwards he consulted his officers not as to how the order could be carried out, but as to how it could be evaded, and in fact he did not start until 3 a.m. Two hours' delay makes a great difference in the march of an army. Drake, Dekay, who brought the order, told General Porter that the road was good, though there were a good many wagons in the way as far as Catlett's, But General Porter said: "Well, we will start at 3 o'clock. Get ready." Excuses for this are that it was dark, and that the wagons obstructed the road. General Meyers swore on the trial that the wagons did not begin to move until daylight, and that the road was in excellent condition. Yet Porter did not attempt to learn the condition of the roads except by sending two aids to Pope to ask him to clear the way. Logan said the wagons in the road were no impediment to him who wanted to fight. If he had wanted to fight he would have burned the wagons. Logan did not claim to be a great commander, but he had marched men through the woods in the darkest nights, and so could any man who did not want an excuse to shirk. Another of Porter's excuses was, the artillery could not be got along the road, but artillery was not regimental. The infantry could at least have been got through. The evidence showed that Porter did not read or explain the order to his officers so that they did not know that an engagement had taken place, or that there was an urgent necessity for the presence of the troops at Bristol by daylight. Porter concluded to call a council of war, said Logan, every night, and if they never fight they never march in a dark night.

Porter's mind seemed continually turned away from the field and toward Washington and Alexandria. In a letter to Burnside he said his lucky star was in the ascendent about his birthday, the 31st. He hoped "Mac's" was also. "You will hear from us soon by way of Alexandria."

Logan wondered what that meant. Porter's principal occupation was writing letters of discouragement and preparing to retreat when he should have been preparing to fight. It is true Porter was not needed on the morning of the 28th, but he could not know beforehand that he would not be. The fact is, he disobeyed positive orders, and the court martial could not fail to find it to that effect.

Logan continued describing and relating events showing delinquency on the part of Porter. He accused him of sneering at Pope in all his letters of disrespect to a superior officer. Had he been commanding that army there would be no Gen. Fitzjohn Porter knocking at the portals of Congress to-day.

Porter's movements were so enigmatical that Pope could not fathom them. Porter made an attempt to balk and counteract the wisdom of McDowell and Pope. Mr. Logan cited some instances. It was necessary sometimes to sacrifice the whole of a division to save an army, and Porter might be obeying orders on the 31st of August. It was in evidence that the confederates, understanding that Porter didn't want to fight, had dragged a lot of brush up and down the road, and seeing this dust, Porter informed Pope that it was raised by a large army of the enemy. He quoted Pope's peremptory order to Porter commanding him to appear on the field in three hours, and said no such order had ever before been issued by a commanding general, because before never necessary. Porter, when told to place his men, said if he did so he would get into a fight. "In God's name," said Logan, "what was an army for but to fight! The man who did not know the use of 12,000 men does not know the use of an army."

He discussed the celebrated 4.30 McDowall order, and quoted extensively from testimony.

He related a story about 13 generals composing the council of war before Vicksburg. Only two of the 13 favored fighting. Gen. Grant pulled an order out of his pocket and said, "Gentlemen, you will execute that order." What was that order? It was to move on and assault the lines at 4 o'clock in the morning. [Applause in the galleries.] That was the action of a man who wanted to fight, and the fall of Vicksburg followed it. But Porter did not want to fight, and would not fight under Pope. Mr. Logan read from the evidence to show that parts of the Union command did march that night and had no difficulty on account of darkness or anything else. He also read testimony to the effect that General Jackson, of the confederate army, on the same night, having his heart in his cause, moved out of the way of Pope's troops, on the night of the 27th, from Manassas Junction around to Centreville and back between it and Groveton. If the Confederate General could do that, why not the Union General? General Jubal Early also moved his command that night. If the orders had been issued by McClellan, probably Porter would not have found the night so dark. It was not issued by his chief, the man he admired, but by a man for whom he had contempt, and for that reason he determined that that man should be baffled if he could do it and escape the clutches of the law.

Logan went on to show that Porter did not leave his tent until after sunrise the next morning. He quoted Porter's letter to Burnside expressing his distaste for the army of the Virginia, and his wish that he could get into the Army of the Potomac, picturing the prospects in a dismal way, and commenting on it as proving Porter's disaffection towards Pope. It is a matter of history, continued Logan, that some of the greatest battles ever fought were won by men who had just made long, forced, night marches. In illustrating this point he cited Washington's passage of the ice-gorged Delaware and the running of the blockade at Vicksburg in which he himself took part, marching his men 22 miles before going to battle. "But we loved our country. That was why we did it," [Applause.] and marched 18 miles back over the road he had just traversed, and his men entered the battle of Baker's Creek after that march singing "Old John Brown."

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 4.—The Speaker announced the regular order to be the consideration of the bill regulating the removal of causes from State to Federal courts. The question was on the amendment offered by Mr. Culberson, and it was agreed to without division. It amends section two of an act to determine the jurisdiction of United States courts so as to read:

Section 2. That any suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, arising under the constitutional laws of the United States, or treaties made or which shall be made under their authority, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given original jurisdiction by the preceding section, which may now be pending or may hereafter be brought in any State court, may be removed by the defendant or defendants therein, to a circuit court of the United States for the proper district whenever it is made to appear from the application of such defendant or defendants that his or their defense depends in whole or in part on the correct construction of some provision of the Constitution or laws of the United States or a treaty made by their authority; and any other suit at law or in equity in which the circuit courts of the United States are given jurisdiction by the preceding section, which are now pending or may hereafter be brought in any State court, may be removed to a circuit court of the United States for the proper district by defendant or defendants when residents of the State in which the suits are pending.

Amendments were offered by the minority as follows:

United States Circuit Courts, to take original cognizance of any suit of a civil nature arising under patent and copyright laws between a corporation and any citizen of a State in which the corporation was carrying on its business; agreed to without division.

The minority amendments striking out the clause prohibiting United States Circuit Courts from taking original cognizance of any suit between corporations of a State, except in cases arising under the patents and copyright laws, and in like cases in which said courts are authorized to take original cognizance of suits between citizens of the same State, was rejected; yeas 68, nays 167.

A minority amendment was adopted providing that the act shall not affect jurisdiction over a disposition of any suit removed from a court of any State or a suit commenced before the passage hereof.

The bill then passed by a vote of 160 to 75.

Committee reports were then called.

The House refused to take up the political assessments bill, the republicans voting nay with a number of democrats. The House went into a committee of the whole and F. Wood made an address on the funding bill when the committee arose.

Gillett asked to have printed a bill to provide for the payment of the public debt, being a substitute for the Wood's funding bill.

AMERICAN.

A Batch of Political News.

ST. LOUIS, 4.—Upon the reassembling of the Union Greenback convention, the committee on credentials not being ready, speeches were made. Hugh Proyor stated that this wing of the party has nearly 10,000 clubs in working order and 2,000,000 greenback voters in the country.

The committee on credentials reported 212 delegates present.

Brick Pomeroy addressed the convention and produced a sensation by bringing out a finely executed oil painting of the American Flag with a greenback printed across it and pierced by a bayonet. He narrated the history of the greenback, and after alluding to the progress and growth of the greenbacks, tendered his resignation as secretary of the party.

Thanks were voted to Dennis Kearney, Pomeroy and Proyor and to Representative Weaver, and other greenback Congressmen.

New York, 4.—The Evening Post sent a reporter to Tilden's house this morning, who learned positively that no such meeting as that described in the Washington Post this morning, in which he declared himself a candidate for the presidential nomination, has taken place.

Chinese, Capitalists and Kearney.

NEW YORK, 4.—The Tribune puts two facts into juxtaposition thus: "A number of capitalists of San Francisco have come to New York, and now some of the Chinese are coming also. If Kearney should follow in their footsteps, what then?"

A Chinese Delegation to Washington.

CHICAGO, 4.—The Tribune's Washington special says: It is reported that a delegation from the Chinese Six Companies will soon arrive in Washington to ask, through the Chinese legation, whether the United States proposes to recognize the Burlingame treaty and protect peaceful citizens of China resident in this country and engaged in legitimate business. This is a new phase of the Chinese question, which will probably give the cabinet some trouble. The Burlingame treaty, of course, very broadly guarantees protection by the United States to every Chinaman landed in America. Secretary Evarts is understood to have said that the mission was an unnecessary one, as there have been no disturbances in San Francisco, and if there are any, the local authorities will be quite able to suppress them.

The Possession of the Kirtland Temple.

The Court of Common Pleas of Lake County, Ohio, in a decision just rendered, confirms the title of the Reorganized Church of Latter-day Saints, the non-polygamist or Josephite branch of Mormons, whose headquarters are at Plano, Illinois, and of which Joseph Smith is president, to the old Mormon Temple at Kirtland, Ohio. The decision recognizes the Josephites as the true Mormons and the Utah Mormons are declared impostors.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Foreign Notes.

LONDON, 4.—Moditsky, Melikoff's would-be assassin, said at his trial that Gen. Melikoff would be killed by some of his comrades; that although his own attempt had failed, a second or, if necessary, a third attempt would be made.

Extraordinary precaution was taken on the anniversary of the Czar's accession to preserve order. Every possible point of vantage was guarded against explosion or conspiracy.

Moditsky, who fired on General Melikoff yesterday, has been tried, sentenced, and will be hanged tomorrow. He is said to be a student and feigns lunacy.

The Paris Temps says: Emperor William on arriving at the French Embassy at Berlin on Monday last, expressed to Count De Saintvallen his great pleasure at being there. The Emperor added: "Convey to Premier De Freycinet assurance of my heartiest respect for his ability and firmness." The Emperor said there was not a word of truth in the rumors of disagreement between himself and Prince Bismarck, and added that the latter, like himself, wished for peace.

The British Consul at Salonica telegraphs Sir Austin Layard that he has received a letter from Colonel Syne, saying that himself and wife are well treated. The chief of the brigands has disappeared and negotiations for their release are constantly interrupted.
