CAMPUR MASSACRE SCENE

The massacre of Chong, is still well enough remembered to cause much interest to be taken in the accompanying photograph of the scene of that disastrous affair, where in one of a body of 14 Englishmen were murdered by native insurgents. Following is a description of the affair by one of the survivors. The trees in the picture showing where the temple once stood.

A FIRE COMPANY OF TURKEY.

The citizens of Constantinople are not altogether up to date in the matter of municipal fire protection. The accompanying illustration will give a very good idea of how the Turks fight fires, and it has been a matter of experience that the first to react to a house on fire are the Turks. This unique fire-fighting system has already proved its worth in a fire with the barrel of water above the discharge of an alarm call from a watch tower announces the outbreak of a conflagration. These Turkish firemen possess the unique record of never having been killed in any fire.
