All of the mannish tweeds, and especially those of hard finished worsted, are in high favor abroad for those wooltex costumes that are a necessity in every wardrobe. The one illustrated shows a gray mixture in light tones with some black velvet on the coat, and a crever touch of plaid introduced in the vest. The shoulder seam is broad, the fronts and backs both arranged in stitched straps, collar and revers in black velvet, throwing up the gay colorings of the plaid. Skirt is nine gored with inverted plaits in each gore, and the hem is faced with the black velveteen that not only protects the edge of the walking skirts, but likewise keeps the smart japanned shoe from rubbing white.
