To Sugar Beet Farmers.

Most excellent news have recently been obtained to base cultivation, says the Lodi Farmer, by plowing and subsequently plowing over a grass crop, as past. It is now known by actual experiment that it is better to have the seed sown in the soil after a crop than to possible either by the use of heavy manure or through chemical salts, such as ammonium, etc. About 20 tons of beet sugar can be produced per acre by this method, far exceeded by the present method of cultivation.
