HAND EMBROIDERY MAKES AN IDEAL TRIMMING.

Simply itself, yet richly distinguished in character, is this charming gown of pale peach colored cloth, on which the hand trimmings in shades of rose are simulated by embroidery. The embroidery, which is done in the loose, "lazy daisy" chain stitch and in close French knots encircled by buttoned rings, might be executed by any clever home needlewoman with perfect success.

McCormick, C. S. McDonald, J. T. Good, Wm. Mr. Stinson and Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Newhouse was also host at a small party at the Center on Thursday night, followed by a supper at the Louvre, his guests including Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ferry, Mrs. Walter C. THE TOUCH OF JET.

Black is "it." Not a bit of doubt about that; but it is the touch of black, not the all black costume—the "suspicion" of somber color which the French woman will assure you, makes more striking the whole color scheme. With brown—a color heretofore not associated with black—is black considered especially chic. The big hat pictured, in one of the warm cedar brown shades, is made quite striking by two huge cabochons of sparkling cut jet.
