CLUB CHAT.

Club interest just now centers chiefly about the meeting of the federation on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. An excellent program has been prepared, and a special feature of the convention will be the visit of Mrs. C. A. Dennison.

President of the general Federation of Women's clubs, who will give an address at Friday's meeting. Among the interesting things planned for the entertainment of the president is a Domestic Science demonstration to take place on Saturday morning at the university. Later Mrs. Dennison will be the guest of Mrs. Kinney at luncheon, and following the afternoon session Mrs. F. S. Vincent will entertain at a 5 o'clock tea in her honor. The day's program will end with a large reception at the Ladies Literary clubhouse, given by the members of the club.

The members of individual clubs of the federation are urged to be present at all the meetings as an important feature of these will be the discussion of the papers given, and all are requested to consider the questions presented, for the future action and progress of the clubs.

The musical committee, Mrs. Wetzel chairman, with Mrs. Peabody and Miss Mackintosh, have arranged for a musical program notable enough to in itself attract a large attendance at the meetings.

Mrs. Charles Dennison will arrive on next Friday and during her stay will be the guest of Mrs. W. A. Nelden.

The Reviewers will be "at home" Monday afternoon, Sept. 28, at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Nelden. A program of music by women composers will be given by Misses Monahan, Dwyer, Mackintosh and Oliver, and Mesdames Plummer, Kate Bredwell, Anderson, Martha Boyle King, Osborne and Nelden.

The Daughters of the Pioneers met on Thursday with Mrs. Isabella Sears at her home for Waterloo and a large number were present to enjoy the interesting program. This, following out a plan upon which the year's work is arranged, consisted of reminiscences dealing with the people who first accepted the faith that brought them and their followers to Utah, incidents of early times remembered by the pioneers now living, brief sketches of the peoples and history of the early inhabitants of the continent. The evening was closed by hymns of the Latter-day Saints make up a program that is at once entertaining to the present listener, and valuable to posterity as the reminiscences and sketches given are to be preserved and printed in book form making a valuable future record. The program on Thursday consisted of the following: Opening prayer by Chaplain Margaret Pierce Young; hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet," by the society; "History of the Revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith," by Minnie Loveland Snow; "An Angel From On High," read by Mrs. C. F. Wilcox; "Reminiscences of the Followers of the Prophet Joseph Smith," read by Elizabeth Neff; a beautiful rendering of the hymn, "The Morning Breaks," by Mrs. Hazel Smet Taylor of Provo; "Reminiscences of the Visit of Joseph Smith to Pennsylvania," by Mrs. Elizabeth Nebeker; "A Short Sketch of the History of the Lamanites," by Minnie Loveland Snow; and a song, "My Rosary," by Miss Hazel Taylor, Mrs. Margaret Piper having gone to Idaho to reside Miss Phoebe Woodruff Scholes was appointed to take her place as registrar. Miss Hazel Beattie was appointed chairman of the literary program, and Miss Claire Douglis of the musical. The registrar will be at the Exponent office the first Saturday in October to receive the papers of those who desire to be registered as charter members, only those who do so on this date or before the regular October meeting, having the privilege of being counted as charter members. The society will meet in October at the home of Mrs. M. Y. Douglis, 49 north West Temple street.

A leading feature in club circles for the past week was the lecture given at the Ladies Literary club house last night by Mrs. Gilbert McGraw of Colorado. The affair took place under the combined auspices of the L. L. C. and the Commercial club, and was a delightful treat to all those fortunate enough to be present. Mrs. McGraw is one of the most noted of American authorities in her subject and treated it in the interesting manner expected from her wide knowledge thereof. She is recent wife of the club dwellers association of Colorado, and visited Provo as representative at a meeting of the archaeologists there.

The regular meeting of the Daughters of the Revolution for September took place at the home of Mrs. L. M. Sears and an interesting meeting was held. The topic being Abigail Adams, and being discussed by Mrs. E. B. Wells, Mrs. Alice M. Horne and Mrs. Lucy W. Smith. A creditable work of the club has been the presentation of a fac simile of the Declaration of Independence, handsomely framed and printed to the various large educational institutions of the state, including the U. S. U. of the A. C. and B. Y. college of Logan, the B. Y. academy of Provo, and the Salt Lake High school.

The Arkansas State Federation has undertaken to furnish and decorate a room in the Arkansas state building, at the St. Louis Exposition, to be known as the club room. The state legislature appropriated only $20,000 for a state building, and all of this sum will be needed for the principal rooms. The state commission has nevertheless promised the club women all the assistance in its power towards furnishing their room.

Mrs. Margaret L. Walker, the colored woman recently elected as president of St. Luke's Savings bank in Richmond, Va., is the only president of a colored bank in this city who has been asked to join the National Association. There are four banks for negroes in Richmond, with colored men as presidents. Mrs. Walker is the only woman, as far as known, who holds such a position.

The Baltimore American, in its memorial number, pays a tribute to one of its first editors, Miss Mary Goddard, sister of the founder of the paper, William Goddard. In 1774 Mr. Goddard went North to establish a postal system, leaving the whole responsibility of the paper, the only one in Baltimore, to his sister. She issued the paper without interruption through the stirring days of the Revolution, getting out "extras" called the "extraordinaries" in those days, containing detailed accounts of the battle of Bunker Hill, and the declaration of the Continental Congress, giving the causes and necessities for taking up arms, as well as other remarkable events. The Declaration of Independence was published by this woman editor. "It is a circumstance which has escaped the general historian that the first official publication of the Declaration with the signers' names attached, was at that time sitting in Baltimore, at Miss Goddard's, and the sheets, waiting to be distributed to the authorities of the states, bore the imprint of Mary Catherine Goddard," says the American.

The next number of the paper contained full details of the reading of the Declaration, the account stating that it was received "with universal acclamations for the prosperity of the United States." A tablet marks the place where the proclamation was read, but Miss Goddard's name is not on it, although she was the official printer of the famous document. Miss Goddard's patriotism, reflected in her writings, was of the highest. After the war she appealed through her paper to the public in behalf of the impoverished wives and children of soldiers, and raised for them the sum of $25,000, a very large amount for those days. Miss Goddard conducted the paper for ten years, and died in Baltimore in 1816.

A bust of Lucy Stone, the work of Miss Anne Whitney, has been offered to the library trustees of the Boston Public Library by the Woman Suffrage association of that city. The bust will soon be officially accepted, it is affirmed.

The growth of the Home Culture clubs of Northampton and Florence, Mass., have been remarkable since they were founded in such a modest way in 1887. Originally a circle of social and educational clubs modeled somewhat after the plan of neighborhood guilds in cities, the Home Culture club later directed its attention to the outdoor life of those whom it had heretofore endeavored to benefit in the home. George W. Cable, the novelist, was the prime mover in making their dooryards bloom with flowers and shrubs, and he interested Andrew Carnegie in the plan to the point of offering six annual prizes for a flower-garden contest. Mr. Cable has devoted a great deal of time to personally instructing the villagers in the principles of informal gardening, and also how to utilize native wild-planting, such as aucubas and elderberry bushes. The first year of the competition there were 60 contestants; the next year there were 100; at present there are 265 gardens in the contest. Mr. Cable's plan in the Home Culture clubs has resulted in a conditional gift of $50,000 for the purchase of land and the erection of additional clubhouses. The grounds will be turned into model gardens.

The present home of the Home Culture clubs is a transformed church building. Instruction is offered in a dozen branches, literary, artistic, and industrial. There is an attendance of about 900 men and boys and over 1,000 women each month. The Smith college students have given their services very generously as instructors. Several years ago Mr. Cable organized an auxiliary called the Home Culture Club Council. Over 200 men and women of Northampton and Smith college students belong to the council, which is divided into three chapters—a woman's chapter, in charge of household economy, care and training of children, domestic science, and the home; the men's chapter, comprising four citizens in charge of the men's reading room, smoking room, billiard room, etc.; and the college chapter, which includes some 50 Smith College women, who have charge of the different classrooms.
