

POLICE SCOURING THE UNDERWORLD

With a Late Start They Try for Clues in Diamond Robbery Case.

SHEETS GIVEN EMPLOYMENT.

Boyd Park Thought Former Chief's Knowledge of Back Alleys Would Help in the Matter.

By detectives and members of the Salt Lake police force the city's underworld is receiving a more thorough overhauling than it has had for years past. Pinkerton men acquainted with criminals the country over have materially helped in the overhauling and their ways of working. Over a score of well known crooks were recognized last night, but no arrests were made in the case of the Park diamond robbery, which occurred Saturday afternoon last.

On that date a tray of mounted diamonds and pearls, totalling in value $2,250, was taken from the front show case on the south side of the store. Yesterday morning former Chief of Police George A. Sheets was called in a private capacity to assist in the search for the robbers. Boyd Park, in giving the details to Chief Pitt, having pledged him to secrecy as it was not desired to have the story published. A few minutes after former Chief Sheets was given the facts and asked to use his knowledge of the local underworld to help in the search, newspaper men were in possession of the story, and arrived at Park's store to make inquiries.

Enmity to the police department is considered to be the cause for the "leak" in the case, and no one connected with Boyd Park's store would this morning talk with confidence visitors and the throng of crooks that are attracted wherever crowds congregate, gave outside operators a chance to move on before being detected. Detectives of the Pinkerton force were not called in until after the police had been notified, with a request that secrecy be preserved, so that no start was made until Monday evening to run down the case.

A reward of $500 has been offered, $250 for the recovery of the stolen goods and $250 for the detection of the thief. It is not likely that any of the jewelry will be offered for sale even through a pawnbroker, who would serve as a "fence." The usual procedure in such cases is to melt up the gold mountings and dispose of them, while the unmounted gems are sold by themselves, so that detection is almost impossible.

The fact that the police were not notified until Monday, while the robbery was discovered on Saturday when the city was filled with confidence visitors and the throng of crooks that are attracted wherever crowds congregate, gave outside operators a chance to move on before being detected. Detectives of the Pinkerton force were not called in until after the police had been notified, with a request that secrecy be preserved, so that no start was made until Monday evening to run down the case.

Boyd Park stated this morning that the store had no clues as to the thieves that were at all definite, that they may have been men or may have been women. Three women who looked somewhat suspicious to Alex Thomas, who was in the store at the time, were not notified, with a request that secrecy be preserved, so that no start was made until Monday evening to run down the case.

The robbery occurred about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the front show case on the south side of the store, many customers were in the store and in the presence of the manager of the store and eight clerks.

MINGLED WITH CUSTOMERS. Mingling with the customers two women, supposed to be professional thieves, took positions at the south front show case which contained a large quantity of valuable jewelry and gems. A third woman then took a position at the west end of the showcase.

Alex Thomas, son of Postmaster Thomas, and a clerk in the store, approached the pair to wait on them. One of them nodded in the direction of a woman who was making a purchase and said they were merely waiting for her.

ROBBERY DISCOVERED. During the afternoon Mr. Park decided to check the contents of a tray of mounted diamonds and pearls, but to his amazement the tray was gone and so were the three women. Word was at once sent to police headquarters and Chief Pitt detailed Detective Frank Wheeling on the case. After working on the case from Saturday to today the police have made the startling discovery that the gems were stolen, and that the thieves had not been apprehended. Had the story of the robbery not been suppressed the detectives would probably have learned more about the affair.

The police managed to get a sort of description of the supposed thieves. The one who is supposed to have deftly snatched the tray from the case is described as being about 25 years of age, weighs 125 pounds, is about 5 feet and 8 inches in height. She is dark and was dressed in brown.

The woman nearest her, thought to be her confederate, appeared to be a

REWARDS OFFERED.

In the tray there were 12 diamond studs and six pearl studs. The diamonds were valued at $1,500 and the pearls at $700. With one or two exceptions the diamonds were all mounted on each mounting. A reward of $250 is offered for the recovery of the goods and a like amount for the arrest and conviction of the thieves. The work of trying to locate the property and punish the thieves is not only in the hands of the local police, but the Pinkerton's are at work on the case. "Doc" Londoner, the detective who has been engaged in the Utah National bank robbery, was called in by Mr. Park and given all the information possible. The firm is a member of the National Pinkerton Association and therefore have the advantage of the Pinkerton system.

CHIEF PITT'S STATEMENT.

With reference to the diamond robbery at Boyd Park's on Saturday last, Chief of Police Tom D. Pitt this morning made the following statement to the "News":

"On Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock, Mr. Park telephoned to me and asked me to send over a plain clothes man. I told him that Wheeling was the only one here at the time, and asked if I should send him over. Mr. Park said to send him over. When Wheeling returned he brought a list of the stolen goods, and he also brought word from Mr. Park requesting me to keep the robbery quiet. He said under no circumstances to say anything whatever about the affair and his request was granted. Every available man is now at work on the case. There are no developments that I know of but the detectives will keep at work on the case, and we will do all in our power to recover the goods and apprehend the thieves."

PROTECTION FOR JEWELRY STORES

Speaking of the robbery of a local jewelry store, particulars of which have just come to light, Vice President and General Manager C. R. Pearson of the J. H. Leyson company said today:

"Few if any jewelry establishments are financially protected in robberies that occur during the day. The Jewellers' Security Alliance to which the majority belong, insures for night burglaries only. Notice that sign," said Mr. Pearson, pointing to a blue and white tablet nailed beneath the oval plate glass on the front door. "That innocent looking inscription is a terror to the thief who casts longing eyes into the windows and interior of a jewelry store, as most of the thieves fear it. I know very well that an attempt to rob such a place would in a few hours result in a track up the sharpest detectives in all America."

"The Jewellers' Security Alliance," continued Mr. Pearson, "is a very wealthy New York concern, and its membership is composed of large manufacturing jewelers, who while affording protection to others are protecting themselves just as much. It is offered by men who are unsalaried, so far as their labors in the alliance are concerned. When the establishment of one of its patrons is robbed, Pinkerton men are at once put upon the trail of the thief and a letup is never known until he is captured. From time to time the society issues circulars, telling of new methods of purloining diamonds and other jewelry, and sounding warning notes to patrons."

"The trade journals of the country also do much good along these lines," said Mr. Pearson. "The columns of such periodicals of late have been filled with accounts of the practices employed by crooks to beat jewelers. The system known as 'short changing' is one of the most frequent and most successful. A purchase will be made, and a sum of money not quite enough to pay the bill proffered by the purchaser. The latter himself discovers the shortage, and proceeds to hand out other bills and change until the clerk becomes bewildered and before he recovers himself the customer is gone, taking with him goods only partly paid for. Window smashing and the grabbing of a tray the contents of which are valued at a fortune is another trick of the profession that the trade journals constantly warn against."

"Locally, we are amply protected," said Mr. Pearson in conclusion. "Every display of valuables is under lock and key. The old saying that every man should be considered honest until he is proven otherwise, will hardly hold good in a jewelry establishment, where the successful thief would render the successful thief wealthy. When showing goods I never permit my eyes to wander from customer of the day. And at night, why, you should see the quarters occupied by our watchman; the place resembles an arsenal, with its array of guns, knives and cutlasses."

TO PAVE WEST SIDE WALKS.

Residents of the west side will receive notice today from the city recorder's office of the intention of the city to construct cement sidewalks in districts No. 20, 21 and 27. The cost of these walks is estimated at $28,000.57. About 2,000 letters are required to notify all the people interested.

FUNERAL OF LESTER HEDGER.

The funeral services of Lester Hedger were held in the First ward meeting-house on Wednesday last at 2 p. m. The bishopric of the ward conducting the exercises and the singing being beautifully rendered by the University of Utah choir in two numbers—"Abide With Me" and "Some Happy Morning"; also a duet—"Some Happy Day." By ladies of the ward. The speakers were Elders C. S. Martin, T. A. Hooper, Bert Williams and Bishop Robert Morris of the Episcopal church. The service was given to the young man's worth and to the useful life which seemed to be marked out for him from infancy. The floral tributes were profuse and very beautiful, covering the pulpit and overflowing the tables and railings at the side. Many friends and relatives were in attendance, comfortably filling the hall. The grave was dedicated by Elder John H. Kelson.

GOES TO UNIVERSITY.

Unclaimed Body of Drowned Man May Be Dissected.

The body of Richard Parker, who was drowned at Garfield last Sunday, which has been lying at the undertaking parlors of Undertaker Evans awaiting identification by relatives, if not claimed today, will be sent to the University medical school for dissection. The statute under which this action will be taken requires that the body be preserved in alcohol for a period of 60 days before dissection. Sheriff Emery and his assistants have used every means at their command to discover the family or other relatives of the unfortunate man, but all efforts have been unavailing. Further than the fact that deceased was last summer employed at the state industrial school at Ogden for a time, the authorities have been unable to learn anything of the man.

FOR MORE CITY PARKS.

The city board of park commissioners are holding a meeting at the joint building this afternoon, at which the matter of creating a park at the mouth of City Creek canyon is being discussed. The project has been under consideration for some time, and it is probable some definite action may be taken in the matter today. A proposition to park Main street from Fourth South to Eighth South is also among the matters to come up for consideration, as well as similar action with regard to West Temple street.

MAD DOG'S BITE PROVES SERIOUS

Symptoms of Hydrophobia Appear in Condition of Babe Hess.

DOGS FIGURE IN OTHER CASES

Ogden Police Court Scene of Amusing Controversies Started by Doodle Canines and Wagging Tongues.

(Special to the "News.")

Ogden, April 10.—Babe Hess, aged four years, was dangerously bitten by a dog last night, and as the result of the injuries she sustained, it is feared that hydrophobia may appear. The child was seized with convulsions during the night, and physicians say that her condition is alarming.

The child was playing in an alleyway adjoining her home in Grant avenue, when she saw a strange dog. She ran to it and petted it playfully. The brute sprang at her throat, tearing the flesh about her neck and face into shreds. She was rescued by neighbors and taken to her home, to which place physicians were summoned. Several stitches were required to close the wound, and at the time the medical examination was made, her condition was serious. During the night she was seized with convulsions, and the distinct symptoms of hydrophobia appeared, and it is feared that she cannot be spared the dread malady.

Meanwhile the dog has disappeared. No one will acknowledge its ownership. The police, however, are looking for the animal, but have found no trace of it.

OTHER DOGS BRING TROUBLE.

Neighbors in Amusing Controversy Before Police Judge.

(Special to the "News.")

Ogden, April 10.—Ogden surely had its dog day today. In police court this morning two rather amusing incidents occurred. In both, a dog had done a doubtful deed, and the owners were brought upon their owners' small amount of official wrath.

In the first case, that of William Eliaz, charged with the dog, Browning had disturbed the general peace and quiet of the neighborhood in which they lived by talking about him and his dog. The Wintle dog, or rather the dog owned by Wintle, appeared in his own behalf, protesting by his appearance his docility. A. P. Miller, at this point, entered the case with a complaint charging Wintle with keeping a vicious dog. It appeared that the viciousness of the dog was confined to his trait of barking at Miller's wagon when passing along the thoroughfare of the city.

The canine showed to have manifested belligerent tendencies. Then, as a final turn of affairs, Mrs. Browning entered a complaint against Wintle, charging him with disturbing the peace, all growing out of his possession of the docile brute involved in the case. Meanwhile the dog was trotting about court wagging his tail in a most bewitching fashion, making friends with all the penitents transients summoned to defend themselves on vagrancy and other charges. He was particularly friendly toward the police officers in court.

At the conclusion of all the recitals of grief and alleged wrong-doing, the city attorney moved the dismissal of the various actions, and roundly scolded the persons involved for having brought such an affair into court. The court acted favorably upon the motion and the parties left the court looking like proverbial dazed cats at each other. The dog was the only unperturbed member of the party, and he followed obediently in the path of his master.

CHIEF LEE DEAD.

(Special to the "News.")

Ogden, April 10.—David L. Lee, assistant chief of the Ogden fire department, died at his home today as the result of the ravages of a cancer upon him. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. George L. Snyder, and a step-daughter, Mrs. J. L. Blosser. Chief Lee has been with the department since 1881. In 1902 he was promoted to captain, and in 1907 was appointed to the position he held at the time of his death. The arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

ROAD TO WASATCH

J. G. Jacobs, who built the Salt Lake & Mercur railroad, has leased the Rio Grande's right-of-way from Bingham Junction and Sandy to Wasatch, and has secured terminal rights and traffic arrangements. Mr. Jacobs says he will have the line covered with steel and otherwise put into shape without delay. He expects to have trains moving within 60 days. Alta will thus be offered much needed shipping facilities, and Wasatch will have the opportunity to become one of the great summer resorts in the state. Mr. Jacobs says he has been figuring out the project for a year or longer and is now prepared to go right ahead with it.

DEMON RUM IN THE COAL CASES

The Difference Between "Being Drunk" and "Having One's Tank Full" is the Point.

EXPERT LEGAL AUTHORITIES.

Evidence of John A. Williams of Scofield Precipitates Lively Debate in Fraud Hearing.

(Special to the "News.")

What is the difference between "being drunk" and "having one's tank full"? This was a point which came up during this morning's session of the coal land fraud hearing. Lawyers for the government and Utah Fuel company seemed unable to define the difference and John A. Williams, whose remarks brought up the debate, held that "having one's tank full" is not "being drunk." This was but one of the features of this morning's session.

The usual half hourly "liff" between Atty. Zane and Judge Maynard came regularly. When Judge Maynard interrupted Atty. Allison, for the defendant, in order to tell the witness not to answer a question until he fully understood it, Atty. Allison accused Judge Maynard of attempting to warn the witness.

"Certainly," answered Judge Maynard, "I know what he is up against. 'So does he,' responded Atty. Allison. 'He knows he is up against a lying affidavit with his signature attached to it.'"

"Showing what government agents will do," chimed in Atty. Zane.

"There is no inclination upon the government's part to bring out anything but the truth. This land fraud will be unraveled; that's all we are trying to do."

"I doubt it," came from counsel for the defense.

WILLIAMS AFFIDAVIT.

Witness Williams had the chair during the major portion of the forenoon. Williams is a resident of Scofield and an affidavit, bearing his signature, was read into the evidence.

This explained that in 1901 the witness came up to Salt Lake, accompanied by James A. Pittman, a saloon-keeper at Clear Creek, Utah. Both came to the Dooly block, signed cash coal entry blanks and other papers, and a few days later got $50 or $60 from the fuel company, according to the statement.

Counsel for the defense seemed to have "inside" information about the trip Williams and Pittman made to Salt Lake. "Coming down you had a drink or two, didn't you?" asked Atty. Zane.

HAD SEVERAL DRINKS.

"Yes," confessed the witness with a smile. "Several, in fact," continued Atty. Zane. "Yes, I had a big bottle and we hit it pretty often." "And you don't remember anything of anything that went on, do you?" "I remember it, I signed papers but didn't read them. I didn't know I was doing wrong. I knew I could make $50 for signing coal land papers, but didn't understand what I was doing. It was all proper and straight."

"It was not until a government agent came to Scofield in the fall of 1907 that I knew there was any fraud."

"Did you and the agent have much of a conversation? Did you have a few drinks together?"

"None."

"Did he pay for them?"

"No, I paid the father of both; he took soda water and I took whiskey."

NOTE DISTINCTION.

"Oh, then he took soda water and you took a drink," added Judge Zane. The nice distinction brought out a laugh from all hands. Another laugh was enjoyed when the witness said, "I always tell the truth—nearly," and again when he said, "The government man was a perfect gentleman; I've known perfect gentlemen to be adept liars, however."

Attorneys for the defense brought out statements from Williams which were in direct contradiction to some statements in the affidavit introduced by the government. On several points Williams denied he had ever told any government man or anyone else what he was quoted as saying in the affidavit. When he was excused, Pittman was called and at noon had got up to a point where he was about to tell of the trip he and Williams made to Salt Lake. Both sides are confident they can establish, clearly, a difference between "being drunk" and "having a tank full," as each side has much at stake in showing just what Williams' condition was when he signed the entry slips in 1901. The same is applicable in Pittman's case.

THE NEW UTAH MAP.

The Salt Lake Mining Review has just received its first shipment of its new industrial map of Utah, which has been compiled and published by the Clason Map company of Denver. This map is by long odds the finest product in the way of an industrial map of the state that has yet been placed on the market and has many features not shown on any other. It is an industrial map in its true sense, as well as geographical, showing the farm lands, mining camps and their several products, coal and asphaltum deposits, as well as iron and other minerals. The forest reserves are plainly shown in separate colors and the telephone lines as well as plainly marked. The distance between each railroad station is plainly shown. The map is lithographed in colors and will mount on cloth, size 22x44 inches; price, $3.50.

They are expected to arrive in Salt Lake within the next two months. He comes home greatly improved, the well earned rest having restored him to his wonted vigor.

TIP BELCHER'S CASE.

Prominent Witness in Sullivan Case May Be Set Free.

"Tip" Belcher, formerly bartender at the Jubilee saloon, and who subsequently has been much in notice from the fact that he was placed under bonds as a witness in the Sullivan murder case, and was subsequently arrested on several charges of receiving stolen property, will be arraigned in a day or two before Justice of the Peace F. M. Bishop. The belief is that he will be released, as he has been in the county jail since almost the beginning of the year, not being able to furnish the necessary bonds on the criminal charges. Belcher and his wife were two principal witnesses whose testimony convicted Joe Sullivan of complicity in the murder of Police Officer Ford and the robbery of the Albany saloon.
