ATTEMPTED MURDER.

Bombs Thrown at King and Queen—Child and Horses Killed—One Arrested.

London, May 31, 7:02 p. m.—A dispatch to a news agency from Madrid says a bomb was thrown at King Alfonso and Queen Victoria this afternoon and both escaped unhurt.

The news agency dispatch adds that an equestrian was wounded, and that a child and two horses were killed by the explosion. A 11-year-old boy was arrested. It is further stated that the king and queen behaved with the greatest calmness, and that after the delay caused by the confusion they proceeded to the palace.

London, May 31, 7:20 p. m.—The Reuters Telegram company also has a dispatch from Madrid, saying that a bomb was thrown at the king and queen of Spain. This dispatch says the outrage was committed in the Calle Mayor as the king and queen were returning from the church to the palace, where they arrived safely.

Madrid, May 31.—The marriage of King Alfonso and Princess Victoria was celebrated today.

King Alfonso and his bride left the church at 12:30 p. m. The announcement of the wedding by the firing of artillery salutes was wildly acclaimed by the people.

Madrid, May 31.—The city awoke today under a cloudless sky with dazzling sunshine adding its glories to the bewildering maze of color in which the streets were enveloped. From an early hour the centers presented an aspect of extreme animation. The entire night had been passed amid the din of fireworks, singing and dancing, and thousands of provincials unable to secure shelter, spent the night in cafes, and in the streets. At 8 o'clock crowds densely packed the main thoroughfares, and the troops took up their positions, stopping all traffic, and the whole city took on an air of feverish expectancy.

IN FRONT OF ROYAL PALACE.

The expanse fronting the royal palace was occupied by regiments of the royal guards in full gala uniform, with glittering breastplates and helmets. They formed semi-circles, guarding the approaches to the palace from the crowds eager to gain points of vantage. The massive outlines of the palace were without decorations save the royal standard floating above. Detachments of halberdiers, with quaint cockades, stood with halberds crossed at the Prince's gate, leading to the palace courtyard. All along the route of the cortege hurried preparations were going on. Troops lined both sides of the street in solid ranks for miles.

A BRILLIANT SCENE.

The scene from the Puerta del Sol to the Pardo palace was one of striking brilliancy. All the buildings were resplendent with the yellow and red colors of Spain woven into streamers, huge rosettes and banners, and the hooped, from roof to roof, and arches of roses from which were suspended enormous flower baskets and training vines. Under this dazzling canopy of flags and flowers surged dense masses of people, many in festive attire, the women wearing white mantillas, and bunches of bright flowers in their black hair, and with bright colored fans whipping the air. The population of Madrid had turned out in a body and was augmented to twice its usual size by visitors from the country and neighboring towns.

PRINCESS VICTORIA ARRIVES.
Princess Victoria came from the Pardo palace to Madrid early in the morning, accompanied by her mother, Princess Henry of Battenberg, and her ladies of honor and escorted by a regiment of the royal guards. The bride's party was installed in the ministry of marine, which had been sumptuously prepared for her. The princess put on her wedding dress, and Queen Christina greeted the bride after which the ladies breakfasted together in the blue salon of the ministry.

WEDDING CORTEGE.
The wedding cortege started from the royal palace at 9:30 a. m., amid the ringing of church bells, the firing of artillery salutes and the clamorous enthusiasm of the crowds massed along the route. Ahead rode trumpeters in crimson velvet suits of the time of Philip II, sounding the approach of the royal party. Following them came the personnel of the royal household, the heralds mounted on stallions from the royal stud and caparisoned in oriental style, each led by a cadet of the royal riding academy, and the eunuchs and grooms from the royal stables, leading the king's favorite horses with gold embroidered saddles, cloths and colored plumes, accompanied by pages and riding masters, and all the whithering equipment of a luxurious court.

SPANISH GRANDEES.
Next came a long line of gala coaches of the Spanish grandees, each of a distinctive color, with panels richly painted, guided and jockeyed and driven by magnificent horses, in silver harness, adorned with tall plumes, matching the livery. Within rode the nobility of Spain, the men with their beards covered with orders and the women in wedding attire.

ROYAL GALA COACHES.
But the brilliancy of this part of the cortege was far surpassed when the famous royal gala coaches came into view, each drawn by eight superb white horses, with golden and silver harnesses and lofty colored plumes, looking like the coaches depicted on some illuminated page of a fairybook. These coaches formed one of the most striking features of the wedding cortege. They were marvels of luxury, some of tortoise shell, others of mahogany, set with panels painted by famous artists, all ornamented with precious metals and emblazoned with the royal insignia. They were relics of bygone days, when kings and queens rode in golden velvet clogs, but they had been renovated in all their original splendor for this occasion. The most interesting coaches were the Amaranth coach for the court ladies; the Cypher coach, for the lords in waiting; the Coach of the Dual Crown, for the Infanta, and the Shell coach for the queen mother.

All the magnificent and surroundings of these magnificent vehicles were in keeping. They were drawn by teams of six and eight white horses, well matched and of the finest breeds. About these glittering vehicles circled retinues of grooms, pages, heralds and others in the showy uniforms of Louis XIV.

The coaches of the Spanish grandees were hardly less remarkable than those of royalty, the main difference being that they were drawn by only two horses, according to rigid rule.

SOME NOTABLE COACHES.

Some of the most notable of these coaches were as follows:
The Duke of Alba's coach of yellow with red wheels and plumes of the Marquis of Viana, a seventeenth century coach adorned with precious paintings by Vicente Lopez, that of the Marquis de Miraflores, distinguished by its whiteness, all the plumes, harnesses and livery being of white; those of the Duke of Botomayor and the Marquis de Toros, each of blue with red wheels and plumes of the same colors; that of the Duke of Tamames, brown, and of the count of Heredia green. There were some 25 of these historic coaches of the grandees, each having its own peculiar brilliancy and all forming a singularly dazzling pageant.

VISITING PRINCES.
Following the coaches of the Spanish princess and Infantas were those of the visiting princes, including the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Archduke and Archduchess Francis Ferdinand of Austria, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Vladimir of Russia; Prince Albrecht of Prussia, and Prince Albert of Belgium, and representatives of all the royal houses of Europe.

KING ALFONSO'S COACH.
Closing this dazzling array of princes appeared a coach bearing the royal crown in which were seated King Alfonso, his witness, Prince Carlos, and the king's little nephew, Prince Alfonso, the actual heir to the throne of Spain.

As the king's coach appeared it was greeted by a great roar while the multitude wildly waved handkerchiefs, fans and parasols. His majesty could plainly be seen smiling and bowing to the popular greetings. He wore the uniform of a field marshal, his hat surmounted by a sweeping white plume. Around his coach was a cavalcade of royal guards, heralds, squires and pages, holding back the enthusiastic populace.

Immediately following the royal coach came the bride's party, forming another magnificent cavalcade. The bride, Princess Victoria, was seated in the coach of the Duke of Alba, and was accompanied by her mother, Queen Christina, and her ladies of honor.

ST. JERONIMO EL REAL.
On reaching the church of St. Jeronimo el Real, which was magnificently adorned for the ceremony, over the entrance was suspended an immense canopy of red and yellow velvet, embroidered with Spanish escutcheons and supported on gold tipped lances. Awaiting the bridal party stood lines of halberdiers and palace guards.

PRINCESS CHEERED.
The appearance of the princess, who was about to become their queen, aroused the people to the highest pitch of emotion, men and women cheered and shouted friendly salutations, while others from the balconies of the houses along the route showed flowers on the princess and let loose hundreds of pigeons carrying long bright streamers. The bride looked most charming and graciously acknowledged the continued ovations.

As the cortege entered the Puerta del Sol the picture presented was strikingly beautiful, with buildings ablaze with color, the streets packed by a dense mass of humanity, the balconies crowded with people, the swarming windows, house tops and trees, and in contrast, the stately royal cavalcade defiling slowly amid the enthusiastic clamor of the populace.

INTERIOR OF CHURCH.
The interior of the church presented a scene of rare beauty as the royal couple entered. The great arches and nave, usually sombre, were lighted up by thousands of electric lights which lined the cornices and framed the marble altar with an aureole of light. At the left of the altar arose a throne upon a dais, over which hung a majestic canopy of light silk exquisitely wrought with gold embroideries. At the back of the throne flared the arms of Spain. Two richly gilded arm chairs of marvelous workmanship occupied the dais, on which also rested two soft silken cushions upon which the bridal couple knelt. Immediately facing the throne were gilded divans on which were seated Queen Christina, Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Infanta, the prince and the members of the Battenberg and other royal families. Beside them were the foreign princesses, archduchesses and grand dukes in their richest court uniforms with the princesses and duchesses in their velvety court gowns with trains four yards long, corsages and hair blazing with jewels and with filmy white mantillas floating brightly over their heads and shoulders, mantillas being rigidly required.

AMERICAN ENVOY.
Mr. Whitridge, the American special envoy, who was in evening dress, sat among the other envoys and Minister Collier and Mrs. Collier were seated with the resident diplomats. The wife of the American minister, who was the only American woman present, wore a Persian court gown of white lace over white satin, embroidered with silver roses. Mr. Whitridge and Mr.

PART OF DAM SLID INTO THE RIVER LAST NIGHT.

President James A. Melville of Ellipton who is still in Salt Lake looking after the interests of the Sevier river bridge reservoir which has been in such imminent danger for the past two or three weeks, received a telephone message today to the effect that a part of the dam slipped into the river last night and caused a lot of excitement among the workmen. However, he adds that he was informed that 125 men and teams were thrown into the break, and that it was soon repaired. A message came to the "News" this afternoon from Bishop Pratt, one of the officials in charge, saying that the slip-away must not be regarded as serious, and that the dam in its entirety may be considered as sound and safe with little likelihood of disastrous consequences at this time. The weather is good and the cold spell that came on a few days ago played a most important part in the saving of the dam. It absolutely stopped for the time being the melting of snow. As a result the swollen streams were greatly reduced and the volume of water was not as difficult to cope with as a few days previous. Even with the diminution the volume that pours into the reservoir is much greater than that disgorged through the tunnel, but a new one will be completed in a few days.

Collier were conspicuous owing to the fact that they did not wear uniforms. The ministers of the crown and the highest officers of state sat further back and then came the nobility, the grandees, the knights of the Golden Fleece and the field marshals, each in their distinctive uniforms, the breasts scintillating with high orders, the silken vestments of the envoys of China, Persia, Siam and Morocco lending the scene additional touch of oriental color.

ROYAL COUPLE ENTER.

As the royal couple entered the assemblage arose and 200 choristers intoned a processional hymn. The king looked calm, happy and slightly pale, as usual. Across the breast of his field marshal's uniform was the blue and white sash of the order of Charles III, and on his breast sparkled the orders of the Garter and of the Golden Fleece.

BRIDE ENTERS.

The bride entered with her mother, brother and queen Christina, the silver embroidered robes of her wedding dress being reflected by myriad of lights until the bride seemed to be robed in jewels. The veil, slightly drawn aside, revealed her clear fine features with cheeks full of youthful color.

CEREMONY PERFORMED.

The king advanced to meet the bride and they stood together as the marriage service began. The ceremony was performed with all the impressive, mass of the Roman ritual, Cardinal Saischa, archbishop of Toledo, robed in crimson silk, officiating, assisted by a special nuncio of the pope, and the highest dignitaries of the church, with scores of acolytes and incense burners. The ceremony, which lasted nearly an hour, terminated with the nuncio pronouncing the pope's benediction on the newly married couple, and the chanting of the Ite missa.

PRONOUNCED MAN AND WIFE.

As the king and Princess Victoria were pronounced man and wife the news was signalled to the waiting crowds and all Madrid broke into frantic demonstrations of joy, while cannon boomed and church bells chimed. Entering the royal coach, the king and queen of Spain returned to the palace amid acclamations of the wildest enthusiasm, the throngs shouting, "Long live Queen Victoria."

GRANT TO PRINCESS ENA.

London, May 30.—Under the marriage treaty signed here May 7 and issued in the form of a parliamentary paper today, King Alfonso engaged to accede to Princess Victoria, as Princess Ena is now known in Spain, an annual public grant of $30,000 while both are alive and in the event of her widowhood, $125,000 annually while she remains a widow.

A private settlement is also made, but the amount is not stated. Article 3 of the treaty recognizes that the princess forfeits forever all hereditary rights of succession to the crown of Great Britain.

DRANK WOOD ALCOHOL.

Two Convicts in Wyoming Penitentiary Dead From Its Effects.

Rawlins, Wyo., May 31.—William Wardlaw and Jesse Keating, convicts, died at the state penitentiary here yesterday from the effects of drinking wood alcohol. They were workers in the prison factory, where shellac varnish is used in finishing the handles. They secured the varnish bottle and, allowing the shellac to settle, drank the wood alcohol which is used to cut the shellac. Both died in horrible convulsions, having first become totally blind from the effect of the drug. At death the entire surface of the body was as thick as shoe leather. Two other convicts drank the alcohol also, but as they had indulged less freely, were saved.

300,000 CASES OF GOODS

BURNED IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, May 31.—It is estimated that 300,000 cases of goods were burned in the factories and warehouses of the various packers during the big fire in addition to such stocks as were in the hands of the wholesale and retail grocery trade.

In the disaster the majority of the local canneries were burned out and of those that remain it would appear that only two and perhaps three will be operated this season. For this reason it is likely the pack will be materially shortened.

AUTOMOBILE RACING.

Readville, Mass., May 31.—There was some excellent racing here yesterday for the automobile enthusiasts. Basile went an exhibition mile in 54.2-5 seconds and later covered 10 miles in the first heat regular 19 mile event in 1:17.1-5.

The latter race was not finished, the finals being postponed. In the second heat between Cedrino and Marriot, the former in a gasoline car and the latter in a steamer, Cedrino, who led almost from the start broke down on the third mile and Marriot finished alone.

Unknown Would-be Assassins Attempt to Wreck Home During Night.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Joseph E. Crook, Saloonkeeper, Was the Intended Victim of Mysterious Attack.

Residence Damaged, Porch Wrecked and Windows Shattered—Sheriff in Hard at Work.

(Special to the "News.")

Payson, Utah, May 31.—At 1:30 this morning an attempt was made to murder Joseph E. Crook, a saloonkeeper, and his family, at the residence, by trying to blow up the house with dynamite. The explosion was a terrific one and was heard for blocks around. The force of it, however, did not go in the direction desired, but blew a large hole in the porch and in the side of the house. All the windows were shattered but no one was injured, although Mr. Crook and his family were much shaken up and badly frightened. Two persons are under suspicion but their names could not be learned. Mr. Crook says he does not know anyone who has a grudge against him to the extent of committing foul murder.

DYNAMITE IN CAN.

The persons who made the attempt selected a time when the town was perfectly quiet and its citizens sleeping peacefully. A large quantity of dynamite was put in a five gallon oil can and placed on the porch under a window. It was discharged by means of a "time fuse." After the explosion a neighbor stated that he saw two men hurrying away from the scene. One was in a buggy and the other was on a horse. The neighbor could not see the faces of the men and was unable to give an accurate description of them.

OFFICERS AT WORK.

Sheriff Harmon of Utah county was notified and at once began work on the case with Deputy Sheriff Strong. They hope to find the trail of the two men and locate them before many hours have passed.

Crook has been here for some time and so far as known has had no recent serious trouble with anyone. He conducted a saloon on Main street but his residence was in another part of town. Several blocks away.

The explosion was so terrific that he was almost shaken from his bed. He hurried from the house but was unable to see any one. People for many blocks were awakened and rushed from their homes, some fearing there had been an earthquake.

CAUSED GREAT EXCITEMENT.

The attempt at so horrible a crime has caused great excitement here and if the guilty persons had been captured immediately after the offense was committed they would have received no gentle treatment.

HAD TROUBLE IN '96.

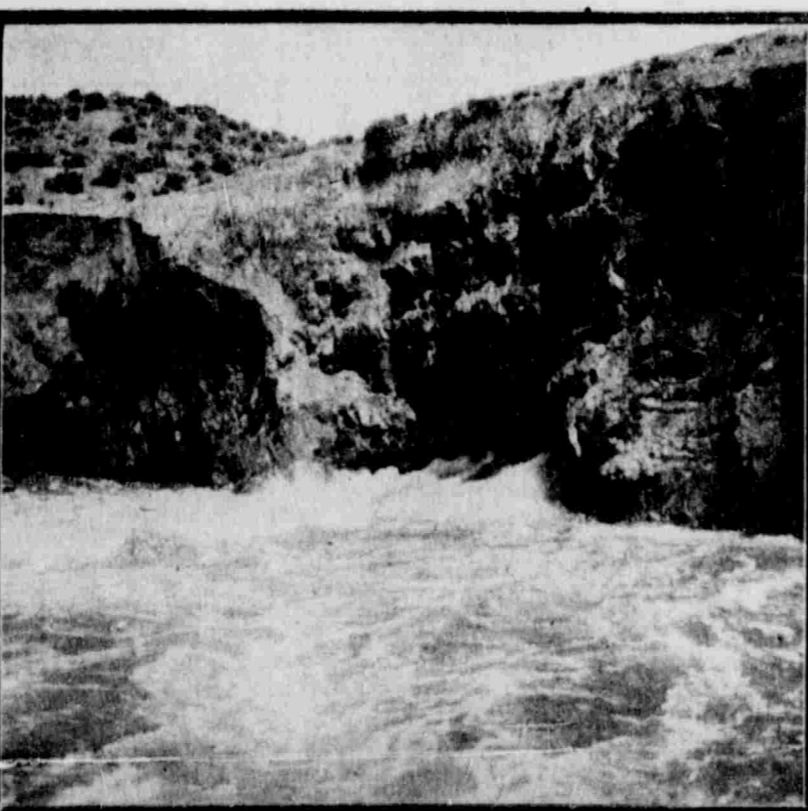

Crook, in 1896, came into considerable notoriety. At that time he was tried and convicted of a felony, but the supreme court reversed the decision of the lower court and he escaped punishment. It is not thought that this morning's attempt to murder him grew out of that affair in any way, and Crook is at a loss to account for the attack. The officers are apparently just as much mystified.

ARRESTED FOR WIFE MURDER.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31.—Early today Mrs. John Campbell was killed in the Barnes hotel, a theatrical boarding house on Pearl street, this city. Her husband is under arrest, charged with murdering her. They had quarreled and the man, it is alleged, slipped a knife into the woman's back of the ear when she lay in bed. She died in two minutes. Campbell waited for the patrolman who was called to arrest him. The woman owned the boarding house.
