The above table shows at a glance the value of a 'greenback' dollar compared with a wide margin of Wall street quotations of gold, omitting fractions of a cent as unimportant, which omission causes the intervals in the left hand column.

To find the value of a 'greenback' dollar at any given quotation, write down 1000 and divide that sum by the quotation, product is the value sought; for example: if the quotation is 250 10000 (40 is the then value of a 'greenback' dollar. Should there be a remainder, in dividing 10,000 by the quotation of gold, add ciphers to the remainder, and extend the division into fractions of a cent.

As it is designed to use the term 'greenbacks' at par, which is a term synonymous with gold, as the standard for uniform prices, or the prices that should be asked, some may be at a loss to know what they should ask to get an equivalent in currency when gold is quoted at a premium. This is an easy problem, as, for example, if the fair or uniform price for flour is $6.00 when gold is quoted at 2.60, the equivalent price in currency is 2.60 multiplied by $6.00, which equals $15.60, the amount that should be asked or paid in currency at that quotation; and if a day's labor should be $2.00 when currency is at par, then, when the quotation for instance is 2.40, the equivalent price in currency is 2.40 multiplied by $2.00, which equals $4.80. In short, in all cases, to know what amount in currency is equal in value to any given fair standard price, multiply the gold quotation at the time by such price, and the product is the corresponding equivalent in currency.
