PRICE OF GOLD.

Corrected daily by Deseret National Bank.
SALT LAKE CITY, October 12, 1876.
Buying at $1.07½. Selling at $1.09.

Local and Other Matters.

THERMOMETER 62 degrees F. in the shade at 1 p.m. to-day. Cloudy, slightly breezy.

First Snow.— The surrounding mountains are covered with the first snow of the season.

Stormy.—Thunder and lightning last night, and nice showers this morning.

Attractive Reading.—A gentleman remarked this morning that reading the election returns from the east reminded him somewhat of reading the first half of the first chapter of Matthew.

Down! Down!—The thermometer among the fifties, as it is to day, is quite a change from its being among the eighties and nineties, and rather agreeable than otherwise.

Chatterers. — A firm on Main Street keeps a couple of parrots perched in front of its establishment, which by their chattering and boistercus laughter generally keep a crowd in the vicinity. They have all the volubility of, and perhaps tell more truth than, the average stump speaker.

The Shower.—It is too late for an equinoctial shower, but that of last evening and this morning resembles one so closely that it might as well be called that as anything else. The brief pluvial period was of sufficient duration to cool the air and moisture the dust nicely.

Tearing Down. — Workmen are buisily engaged tearing down what is left of the White House, the scene of the late conflagration. We understand that the house will be rebuilt, in a very short space of time, of brick and rendered otherwise more substantial and less inflammable than formerly.

Another Scrimmage.—Yesterday evening an altercation took place between Dr. Hamilton and Mr. Vivian, which resulted, as such things usually do, in blows. They were to have appeared before Alderman Pyper to-day, but the Doctor having pressing professional business, the case was continued till to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Absconded.—The Beaver Enterprise contains a long account of a lawyer who took up his quarters in that place some months ago, and and by his good address and general appearance gained the confidence of a large portion of the community. This he took advantage of to run into debt to a considerable extent in various places, and when the creditors commenced to crowd him, he picked up his carpet-bag, and, like the Arab, quietly stole away to return no more. There is a moral conveyed by this little incident, and the wonder is that the Beaver people had not learned it before.

Business.—If the streets are any indication of the state of trade hereabout, we are forced to the conclusion that business affairs are looking decidedly up. Probably the continued cry of "hard times" caused many of us to believe that we were much worse off than we really are, after all.

Musical and Humorous.—On Friday evening, Oct. 13th, there will be a musical entertainment at the 11th Ward School-house. Prof. Thomas will be musical conductor, and an extensive and goodly programme has been prepared.

The proceeds will be devoted to the benefit of the Sunday school.

Accident.—This morning, near the 9th Ward Schoolhouse, Dr. E. L. Plant's horse took fright and cut some powerful capers, causing the Doctor and his son to be thrown out of the vehicle and planted unceremoniously upon the ground. The lad escaped without injury, but the Doctor's head and face were considerably bruised.

Third District Court.—The case of Chambers vs. Pitts, an important mining lawsuit, which has been occupying the attention of the Court for some days past, was resumed this morning.

It is expected that Judge Schaeffer will decide the Wells vs. Patton matter on Saturday.

South-eastern Nevada.—A gentleman just in from Bullionville, Nevada, informs us that Pioche has reached a very low ebb in point of population and business, and there are but little prospects of the town ever regaining anything like its former activity. Bullionville is very flat, and a majority of the former residents of both places have either settled in or are looking for new fields. Our informant has located some apparently rich copper lodes not far from there, and showed us a specimen of the copper produced therefrom.

Deseret Museum.—The very fine collection of petrifactions now exhibited at the Museum has been still further increased in interest by a large piece of petrified tree, weighing about 150 pounds, in which the organic structure is well represented. This heavy donation was brought up by the liberality of A. M. Musser, Esq., of this city, from the giver, A. F. Macdonald, Esq., of St. George. This is by far the handsomest specimen of petrified wood that has reached this city from our Southern settlements.

Vienna Ladies' Orchestra.—The Vienna Ladies, in their farewell concert on Monday night, proved once more to be a fairly selected troupe of eminent talented musicians. Each number of their rich programme was duly appreciated by the very numerous and fine audience and freely applauded; the solos performed by Miss B. Neuber, Miss E. Korn, Miss T. Hamann, and Miss M. Brandl were stormily requested to be encored. It was remarkable that these ladies, in all their concerts they gave here, in our city, did not care much about ostensible theatrical coquetry. They only had trust in their own talent to acquire the esteem of the public, and they were right, for all their concerts were the highest musical feature of the season.—New Orleans Picayune.

Home from England. — This morning we had the pleasure of meeting with Bishop Thomas Callister, of Fillmore, who returned from a mission to England on Tuesday evening. He left here for England on the 25th of October, 1875, and on arriving there he was appointed to labor in the Liverpool Conference, with the privilege of traveling in and visiting any of the other Conferences of the British Isles. He visited the Isle of Man, where there had not been an organization of the Church for about fifteen years, and he succeeded in baptizing four persons, and finding a few scattered members. He organized a branch in the town of Douglas. A number of his relatives reside on the Island. He also visited the Conferences of London, Nottingham, Leeds, Manchester, and Scotland.

He traveled with the last company of emigrants as far as New York, whence he went to New Orleans and visited some of his relatives, by whom he was received with great kindness, and also visited some other relatives in Nebraska.

While on the Isle of Man, Elder Callister, aided by Elder J. H. Parry, searched the records of six parishes, and copied no less than twelve hundred names of his progenitors. He enjoyed his mission very much, and returns in good health and spirits.

Theatre.— The Vienna Ladies' Orchestra appeared before an appreciative audience at the Theatre last night. They consist of eight ladies and three gentlemen, as they appeared on the stage last evening, their instruments consisting of three violins, a clarionet, a flute, a violoncello, a double bass, large and snare drums, a cottage piano, and a cottage organ. Mr. Mark Croxall assisted with his cornet.

The members of the Orchestra are able and accomplished players, and the character of their performance is up to a high mark. They are held to be the best orchestra or band ever heard in this city, Gilmore's alone excepted. They play with much precision and energy, and in a manner that last night drew forth repeated and hearty applause, and several vigorous encores.

The Ladies' Orchestra play again this evening, with an entire change of programme.

They will also give a Grand Matinee on Saturday.

That Sentence.

SALT LAKE CITY,
October 12th, 1876.

Editor Deseret News:

The sentence recently passed upon J. D. Lee by Judge Boreman is, in my opinion, so full of misstatements, exaggerations, inuendoes, and breaches of judicial procedure that common justice requires a few words by way of review and reply. In the early part of the harangue (for I can call it nothing else) his Honor takes a sudden and precipitous lurch from the matter before him, and, like a comet, pursues an orbit varying from that of all other luminaries, until the exigency of the case requires him to return to his perihelion, and do that which other judges would have kept in view throughout. But Judge Boreman has, among other ingredients composing his anatomy, a certain amount of venom, which, at the very mention of the word "Mormon," permeates his system so thoroughly that all other objective points are for the time disregarded, and all his Honor's vindictiveness is poured out upon the people of Utah. A person would naturally suppose that pronouncing the solemn words which seal the doom of a fellow being would create a situation of a grave and impressive character, such as would give rise to feelings the reverse of those which prompt a Judge to vent his personal spite upon and belabor the people with whom he differs in religious sentiment. How would such language as Judge Boreman made use of on that occasion sound if incorporated into a funeral sermon? And if it would be disgraceful in a funeral sermon, it is outrageous when coupled with the dismal, dreadful formality which consigns a mortal to death. If the Judge had spoken the first and last few lines only to the prisoner at the bar, and then, dismissing the unfortunate man, proceeded to deliver the intermediate portion of his diatribe to the spectators, it would not have been less dignified and would have been much more consistent.

The Judge says, "At your former trial the evidences of your guilt were plain, and yet three-fourths of the jury, for some cause, were for your acquittal." At this he affects astonishment; I say affects, because he knows as well as any one can know the cause of the failure of the verdict on the former trial. If he had told the whole story, and not condensed a portion of it into those significant words "for some cause," he would also have enlightened every one who reads his death-lecture as to why there was no previous conviction of Lee; for he would then have stated that the prosecution, on the first trial, were apparently indifferent upon the subject of the prisoner's conviction, the chief object being evidently to fasten guilt, or at least throw a cloud of suspicion, upon the whole "Mormon" church, using Lee merely as a figure-head. The writer hereof heard more than one of the prosecuting attorneys on that occasion make the barefaced, shameful assertion that the "Mormon" church was on trial, one of them even attempting a justification of this unblushing piece of knavery by claiming the analogy of such a proceeding with the Dred Scott case, which was tried before the United States Supreme Court some years ago, the attorney asserting that while the fugitive slave was the ostensible object of the trial, a great cause really hung quivering in the balances. He overlooked the fact that the "cause" referred to was not brought into Court, but was created, fermented, and perfected in the public mind after the trial, whereas, in the Lee case, according to the prosecution's own admissions, the cause was on trial and the man was merely an auxiliary in the background.

Furthermore, in the closing speech to the jury, this matter was pressed upon them, and couched in such insolent and violent language that, when they retired to the jury room for deliberation, manifestly the only issue which presented itself to them was this—"Is the 'Mormon' church guilty or not guilty of the Mountain Meadow Massacre?"

Lee was not convicted, because, in my opinion, Lee was not on trial. Judge Boreman is aware of this, and yet he says "for some cause," as if it were a profound mystery to him! Consistency, where art thou? One of the leading lights of a political ring in Utah ignorant of a matter which the organ of the ring boldly announced and attempted to defend some time previous to the declaration of ignorance! It won't do.

Having set judicial usage aside for the purpose of unloading his wrath, the Judge concludes to make a complete job of it while he is at it, and to this end dismisses the facts from his councils as well. The statement that the slaughtered emigrants were robbed all along the road from Salt Lake City to the Meadows, is a fabrication which must have originated in the brain of the judge himself; even if the people refused to sell them provisions, as was stated, but not proved, this does not constitute robbery. And whoever informed his honor that Judge Cradlebaugh was persecuted for attempting to investigate the massacre must have been egregiously mistaken.

Taking it as a whole, and viewing it as a legal, a literary or an ecclesiastical effort, I regard Judge Boreman's sentence of John D. Lee as standing alone, unrivalled as an abortion; it was too malignant for a judge, too ungrammatical for a litterateur, and too prolific of falsehood for a religious denunciation. Instead of dispassionately reviewing the evidence by which the jury were led to a verdict of guilty, and announcing his duty in connection therewith, by crystallizing all the tangled threads of law and fact into a distinct focus, and then resorting to such diction of rhetoric as the solemnity of the occasion would admit of, the Judge went entirely outside the record to collect remote, scattered and incoherent materials for a diatribe unbecoming, shocking, and unprecedented. Political partisanship in religion, fanaticism on the bench, and venality at the bar, are the culminating achievements of the Utah ring.
