

JEFFRIES IS STILL THE CHAMPION.

Knocks Corbett Out in the Twenty-third Round.

THE FIGHT WAS SCIENTIFIC

When the End Came Thousands Rushed to Corbett's Corner With Soliloquies.

Seaside Club, Coney Island, May 11.—In the latest, prettiest and closest heavy-weight ring battle ever fought in New York, James J. Jeffries has retained his right to the championship in the arena of the Seaside Sporting Club tonight he decisively defeated Jim Corbett, once champion of the world himself, after twenty-two rounds of scientific fighting.

It was a clean knockout, that came so quickly that it dazed the thousands of men, women, and children who were present to witness the fight. It was a knockout that was delivered. It was a knockout that was a left-hand jolt to the jaw, but Jeffries himself and referee Charles White, who stood at his side, saw it was a right-hand swing. There is credit for the victor and credit for the vanquished in this cleverest of ring battles. Jeffries must be awarded the laurels of victory, yet his opponent is entitled to all honor for his most wonderful fight. That feature of the contest stands out in relief as the most striking one of the battles.

CORBETT FAST AND CLEVER.

Corbett emerged from a year's retirement from the ring rejuvenated and fresh. He was fast and clever as back in the days when people marveled at his skill. His footwork was wonderful and his defense perfect. He outboxed his man on both long and short range, and if he had had the strength necessary, would have gained an easy victory. A hundred times he ducked under left swings that would have ended him just as did the punch that knocked him out. At times he made the massive Jim look like a beginner in the art of offense and defense with his hands. His strategy was to jab and get away, and when Jeffries stood over his quivering form his face showed the marks of the punishment that he had inflicted.

Corbett went down to defeat that was regarded by the vast majority of the men who filled the hall. The money was against him, but he had a wealth of sympathy. It was probably his natural heritage as the short-ender, but before the battle began he won more support by his display of speed and skill. Jeffries won with his strength, but that strength that lies in the power of massive muscle and that strength which is the essence of vitality. He made the pace for most of the distance, and at the end was still strong and effective.

QUIET AND ORDERLY.

At first glance the battle may seem to have been a trifle from his reputation, for it showed that a fast man could mean him and get away without a return. If that fighter of the future happens to be strong and rugged in addition to being fast, he will take the honors of the man who tonight left the ring exultant in victory. It is improbable that there was ever more orderly affair under the Horton rule. There was order in the assembly and handling of the great crowd and order in the contest. The small army of police present was taskless and the contestants themselves neither sought nor required protection. The crowd gathered slowly at 6 p. m. scarcely 3,000 persons had gathered at the arena. It was late before there was color or life in the crowd.

There was little betting on the outcome of the battle. In the small sums placed, Jeffries was a clear favorite at odds of 2 to 1. These odds veered at different times and different places during the evening, but were to two was probably the highest and to three the lowest offered. A favorite bet was that Corbett would last ten rounds, and the man who had a true line on the former champion's condition reaped well for his knowledge. There was a decided more Jeffries than Corbett money offered, but there never was at any time any activity in the betting.

JEFFRIES RUGGED AND STRONG.

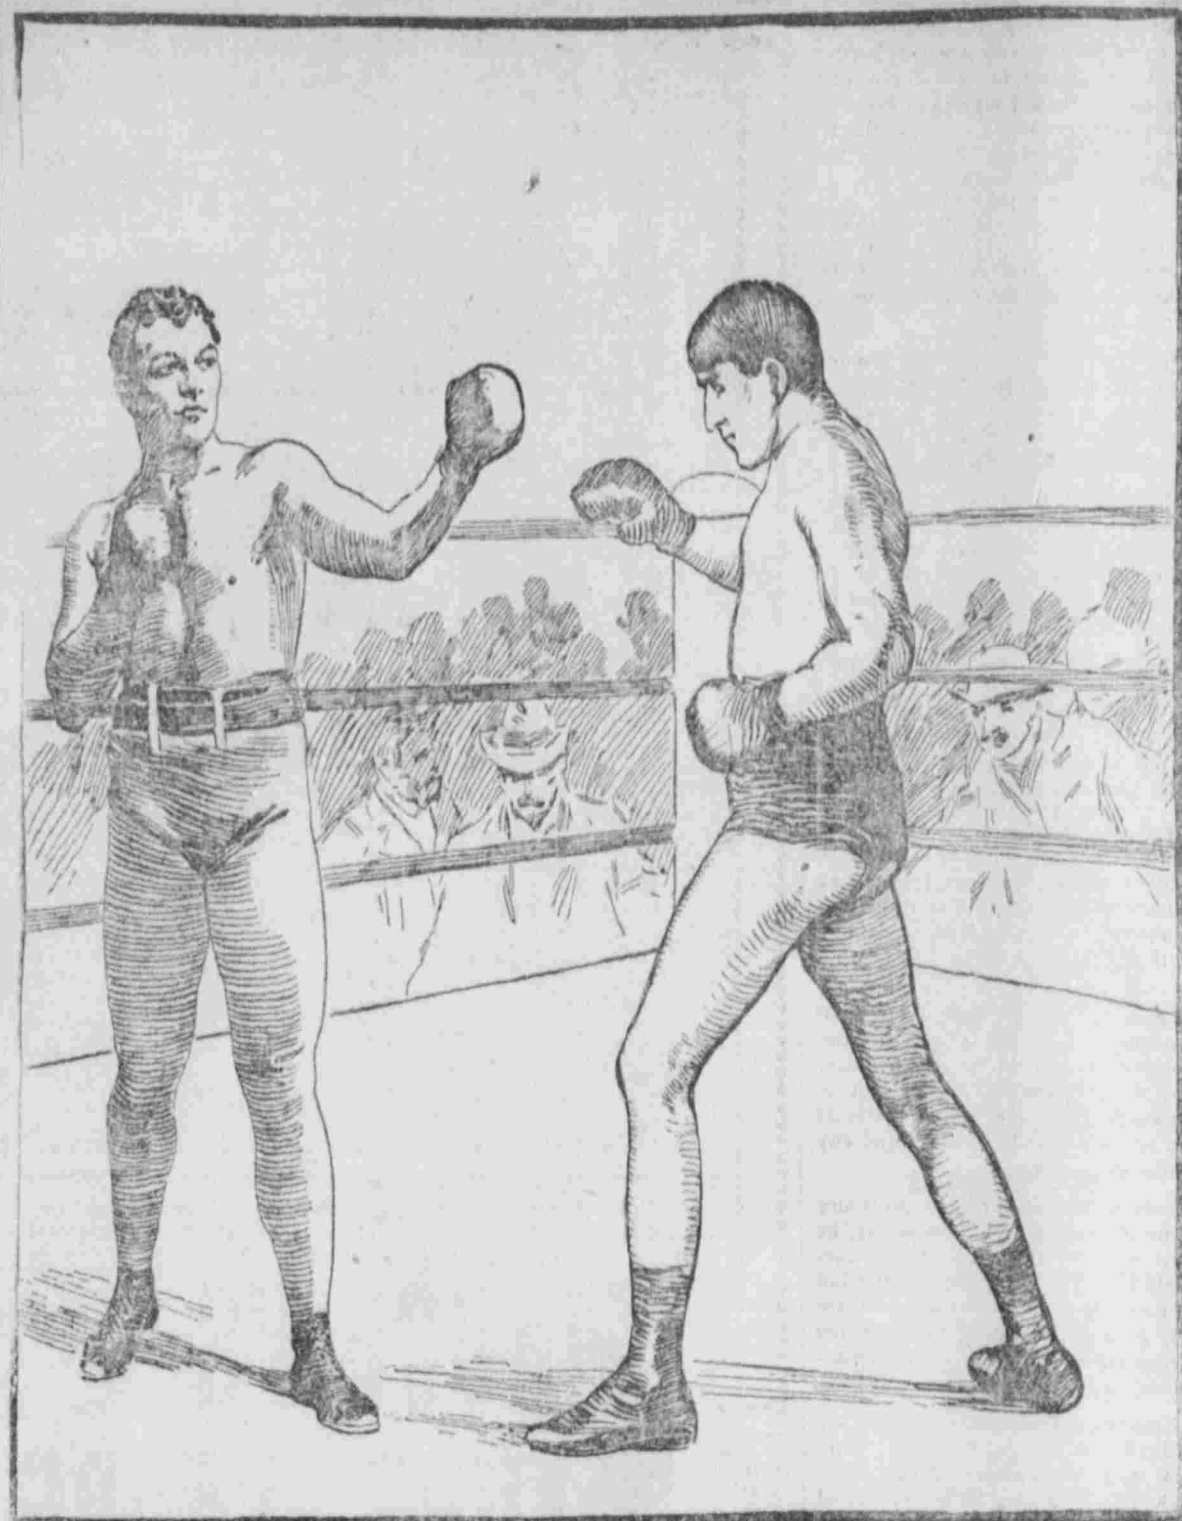

The reception of the men at the ring-side was warm, but not demonstrative. The men came along together, and they and Jeffries exchanged handshakes and strong. He had an occasional recognition to a friend in the crowd, but for the most part seemed serious. He looked busy in his new sweater. Corbett was clean, white and trim. He said he weighed more than on the day he fought Sullivan, when he defeated Sullivan, but he did not look it. He was in splendid condition.

The crowd showed its first enthusiasm over the announcement that Charley White would referee the fight. There was a roar of applause when he entered the ring. There was a brief struggle over the bandages on Corbett's hands, but he was finally allowed to slip them on, and in a moment the ring changed out loud and clear. As the men sprang forward the spectators were still to silence that was broken only by the rattle and clatter of the telegraph instruments.

In the preliminary sparring Corbett showed a wonderful advantage. He was rather like on his feet, and darted in and out with confusing speed. He was inside of Jeffries face, and was either inside or away from the punch. Jeffries kept going in, however, but he seemed awkward. The pace made by the champion was fast, and there was a yell of satisfaction from the admiring spectators when the pug ended the round.

CORBETT WAS A SURPRISE.

Jeffries kept on making the pace when they were at it again, but Corbett slipped away from him. Jeffries would try his left in a rush, but Corbett was almost invariably away from it. It was a superb exhibition, and there were thousands of applause that at times broadened into cheers. Corbett was outboxing his man and outpointing him with his left to the face. They were both fighting carefully, for while Corbett had the speed and cleverness, he found Jeffries hard to get to. Jeffries fought in his crouching attitude, which proved so hard to solve to Fitzsimmons.

Jeffries quickly began to use his strength, and in the clinches threw a little of his strength upon his opponent. Corbett showed surprising ability against him, and it was long before the strength of the champion began to tell. When Corbett had saved the round money there was a strong condition in the sentiment toward him, and the men who had their money on Jeffries to win began to be somewhat dubious. Jeffries was grim and resolute and kept at his man. He knew that at that stage of the game he had been outpointed, and his only chance was to rush in and mix it. Corbett kept his wits and strength and avoided him.

SOME DESPERATE RUSHES.

To the man who loves strength and the play of the giant athlete it made a splendid picture. Here was youth and strength, with a fair measure of skill, pitted against the master of the sport. There were cries of youth would win, but the parsimonious of the man who possessed it had their grave doubts. The pace was one that would have told against any man not perfectly prepared.

In the seventeenth round Jeffries, maddened by the danger of marring his reputation, began a series of desperate rushes, in which he mixed it fiercely with Corbett. He seemed angered by the jabbing at his face, and wanted to end it all with a swing from left or right. Corbett had begun to show the pace, but while his punches lacked force, he was still speedy on his feet. He contented himself with avoiding punishment. It became simply a question of how long that sort of desperate game could be kept up. At the twentieth round it looked as if Corbett would stay the limit, and popular judgment awarded him a victory. He had up to that time avoided any serious punishment. His face was unmarked, and the scratches on his shoulders and arms were more the result of clinches than blows. His defense was still perfect, and he was smiling and confident. He either side-stepped from Jeffries' terrible rushes or ducked into clinches. Jeffries was hammering away, however, and was strong and game.

THE END CAME SUDDENLY.

The end came with the suddenness of a shock. The men had had two fierce rallies, followed each time by long-range sparring, and were in to-gether again. They were both fighting fast and hard. Suddenly there was a report of a sharp blow and Corbett dropped. It needed no count to tell that Corbett's hopes for the championship again were in vain. The excited spectators rushed to their feet, and for a moment there were roars and calls. The confusion was but momentary, however, and in a silence that was most remarkable the fallen fighter was carried to his corner. Some one called out for Jeffries, but the almost sullen crowd refused to give them.

Then a moment later, when a friend of Corbett put the question, a thousand echoes a kindly response. It was in the corner of the defeated man, too, that the crowd gathered, and there were more solicitous offers for aid for him than there were congratulations for the man who had defeated him. It was but natural, however, for Corbett had made a showing that entitled him to that consideration. His skill had made it the best fight they had ever seen, and their hopes had been with him from the moment the battle shaped itself.

THE LAST TWO ROUNDS.

Twenty-second Round—Jeff rushed madly, putting left to head and right to body. Corbett backed away without returning a blow. Jeffries, still forcing, made Corbett go to the limit of the ring, and sent a hard left to the neck. Again Jeffries sent his left to the neck, but Corbett, in shifting, allowed Jeffries' elbow to go under his chin. Jeffries made a wild swing for the head, but Corbett threw left hand to ribs and evaded the blow. In side-stepping Corbett outgeneraled the champion, but Jeffries put a left to head and a right to the jaw, followed with a left on the body that jarred him considerably. Jeffries was very strong at the end of the round, while Corbett seemed to be weakening.

Twenty-third Round—After a couple of passes, Jeffries swung his right to Corbett's jaw, and then rushed him across the ring to the ropes to a neutral corner. At close quarters Corbett hooked left twice to the face, sending the blood spurting again from Jeffries' face. Jeffries then put two hard lefts into the body and smashed his left again on Corbett's face, sending Corbett's head back. Then Jeffries crowded him to the ropes, and with a full swinging left smash on the jaw, sent Corbett rolling down and out. Corbett's head struck the floor heavily, and he rolled over in a vain attempt to regain his feet, but he was too far gone to recuperate within the time call of ten seconds.

Corbett lay like a log, rolling over twice on the ring floor, but a moment after Referee White had counted him out he was able to regain his feet and the seconds had little difficulty in reviving him. Time of round, 2 minutes 11 seconds.

KID MCCOY'S OPINION.

New York, May 12.—"Kid" McCoy summarized the Jeffries-Corbett fight as follows: "Jim Corbett lost in his battle with Jim Jeffries tonight, but he made a magnificent struggle, leading all the way until he was suddenly dropped with a left uppercut on the jaw after two minutes and eleven seconds of fighting in the thirty-third round. He showed that he was just as speedy and as clever as ever and he made a show of Jeffries right up to the last two rounds. He was fighting the big fellow carefully and made him look like a novice for an hour and twenty minutes. What beat him was Jeffries' youth and strength and heavier weight. "If Corbett should meet Jeffries again I would not be a bit surprised to see him win, although he would always run the risk of being knocked out just as he was tonight. There is no denying the fact that Jeffries is fully entitled to his championship honors. He won them honestly and he is wonderfully clever for such a big man. He took a good deal of jolting and jabbing from Corbett, and had enough recuperative power left to finish him at last."

POST OFFICE NEWS.

The Registration of Letters by Letter Carriers.

This new system of registration of letters by carriers will be put in operation at our Salt Lake postoffice on the 15th day of this month. The postoffice department informs the public that in giving to residents of cities the advantage of having their letters registered at their own door, the provisions of the "eight-hour law," as applied to carriers, make it necessary for the department to exact certain requirements, which, though easy of fulfillment, are, nevertheless, imperative.

1. Only letters can be registered, and they must be ready in every respect when the carrier calls, for he is forbidden, on pain of dismissal, to wait even a fraction of a minute longer than is necessary to write the receipt.

2. Every letter must be enclosed in an envelope strong enough to safely carry contents, and be in perfect condition. The envelope must bear name and address of sender, name of addressee and his postoffice address; and have the postage and registry fee prepaid, either with stamps attached, or in money, the exact amount to be paid to the carrier. The writing on envelope must be plain and legible.

If you have failed to comply with any of these requirements, the carrier is obliged to refuse your letter.

Your receipt will be written by him and show the amount of money paid him for postage and fee, when stamps are not attached to your letter. If there be a surplus, it will be returned from the postoffice.

Carriers are forbidden to make oral explanations or engage in discussions with patrons, to register letters free, to advance money or stamps to pay postage, or to make change.

If it be found that your letter is unavailable for any cause when it reaches the postoffice, you will be notified direct. The registry fee for letters, foreign and domestic, is 8 cents in addition to full postage.

Postage Rates—Domestic letter rate: 2 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. This rate applies to the United States, Canada, Mexico, Porto Rico, the Philippines, and the Island of Guam.

Foreign letter rate: 5 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. This rate applies to letters for Cuba and Hawaii; but letters addressed to persons in the service of the United States at those places, which show the branch of the service to which the addressee is attached, require the domestic letter postage only.

The registration of a letter insures its safe transmission in the mail and its proper delivery.

GUEST MAKES TROUBLE.

St. Elmo Boarder Runs Wild and is Hauled In.

Last night E. B. Clinton proprietor of the St. Elmo, had an exciting encounter with a whiskey crazed guest. Hearing loud cries for help interlarded with vile epithets, issuing from one of the rooms, Mr. Clinton made haste to ascertain the trouble. Hardly had he opened the door when the blatant guest rushed at him in a murderous fashion. Clinton knocked the fellow down and sent for the police. Officer Hemple was soon on the scene and placed the belligerent stranger under arrest. He gave his name as John McCaddon and was booked for disturbing the peace.

ALLEGED BURGLAR HELD.

"Razor Jack" Held to the District Court for Burglary.

The preliminary hearing of Jack Richardson before Judge Timmony on the charge of burglary was concluded late yesterday afternoon. The evidence introduced by the prosecution was so conclusive as to admit of no doubt in the mind of the court of the guilt of "Razor Jack," as the defendant is called. Accordingly he was held to answer to the district court.

In default of $500 bonds he took up his abode in hotel de Thomas.

AN IMPORTANT SALE.

The County's Long List of Property to be Offered on the 22nd Inst.

The auction sale of some eighteen hundred pieces of real estate which Salt Lake county holds by tax deed and which have been published in the Saturday issue of the "News" for the past three weeks, will take place at the front door of the joint city and county building commencing Tuesday, May 22nd, at noon.

These properties, which are situated in nearly all parts of the city and county, were acquired by the county through the failure of former owners to redeem from delinquent tax sales. After their sale for delinquent taxes, as provided by law, the period of redemption was permitted to run, thereby forfeiting the title to the county where it is shown by the records to stand by virtue of the lawful deeds of the county auditor covering the title. The county having settled with the State, city and the several school districts for their respective interests, now claim the sole ownership.

The law provides that at any time prior to the sale, as advertised, the owners, or parties interested, may be permitted to redeem upon the payment of the original purchase interest, but after the properties have been knocked down to the highest bidder there will remain no opportunity for the former owners to save their property from going into the hands of those who become the purchasers at the auction sale, because if the law has been complied with strictly by the county officials as it is presumed it has, the title of the county is a good one. The county commissioners have assigned to the county clerk the work of selling and conveying those properties and from all indications there will be a throng of expectant bidders present at the opening day of the sale.

A PROFESSIONAL WOMAN.

Experiments Made with Food.

A certain professional woman in New York, connected with one of the large institutions there, has had a curious experience with an experiment in using a certain kind of food. It seems that in October last, she had a serious illness and was at the point of death, the brain and body in the last stages of exhaustion. Her remarkable experience with the food was brought to the attention of the makers by some of her friends, and in reply to a letter, she wrote as follows:

"I have no objection to the public knowing of my experience with this food, my system has undergone by the use of Grape-Nuts since November, 1899. I began using the food when convalescing and when in an exceedingly low condition. And used a small quantity and became so fascinated with the flavor that I gradually discontinued nearly all other food, including tea and coffee."

Up to now I have consumed about 150 packages and have gained 26 pounds in flesh. Am a marvel to all my friends who are aware of my former state of health. There are about fifty families who have adopted the use of Grape-Nuts because of my experience. You can give my name and home address, but do not mention my professional connection." Mrs. E. N. Wood, 832 Amsterdam Ave., New York City.

There is a reason. The makers of Grape-Nuts select certain parts of the grains of the field that contain delicate particles of phosphate of potash and aluminum. These elements, when combined in the human body, go directly to rebuild the gray matter of the brain and nerve centers of the body. This is a demonstrated fact and can be proven by any one who cares to make the test. When one nourishes and builds up the brain and nerve centers, that is practically the keynote to the whole health proposition, for when the nervous system is in perfect poise, all parts of the body respond.

Grape-Nuts are for sale at all the large grocery stores in the country and can be found in use in practically all of the best families in America.
