BREVITIES.

A whistling musician is making a sensation in Geneva, N. Y.

The greatest lady-killer of them all—coarseness.

Great names debase, instead of elevating those who cannot sustain them.

If we had no pride ourselves, we should not complain of that of others.

We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears.

The Kamschadale, who never use tooth brushes, have the finest teeth in the world.

France has given two iron-clads to Turkey and lent an officer to teach the Orientals how to use them.

Among the flowers and the trees nature takes us into her own hands, and we breathe as freely as the first man.

"German is the language of melancholy, Italian of love, French of wit, English of gallantry," said Charles the Fifth.

A Boston mechanic is about to take out a patent on a new comb to be used upon the head of navigation.

Mrs. Partington says that because some ballet girls are stars is no reason why they should be regarded as heavenly bodies.

Mrs. Smartletty says that her husband is such a blunderer that he can't even try on a new boot without putting his foot in it.

Without memory the judgment must be unemployed, and ignorance must be the consequence. Pliny says it is one of the greatest gifts of nature.

Beauty, though it is a very pretty varnish, is of a frail constitution, liable to an abundance of accidents, and is but a short-lived blessing.

Napoleon is making so many French Senators of small calibre that the French are beginning to call the Senate the "Second Hotel des Invalides."

An eccentric blackbird has astonished the good people of Leyden, Mass., by becoming a domestic fowl and roosting with the chickens.

The Royal Humane Society has published two rules for bathers: First, learn to swim; second, don't make a fool of yourself in the water.

A Hartford lady recently purchased a diamond pin as a birthday gift for her husband. He discovered that it was one which had been stolen from him seven years before.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness, and small obligations given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart, and secure comfort.

"I think I have seen you before, sir," said one gentleman to another. "Are you not Owen Smith?" "Oh, yes," said the other, "I'm Owen Smith, and Owen Jones, and Owen Brown, and Owen everybody."

A Boston cigar dealer makes the startling statement that he sells an average of 300 cigars a day for ladies' use, and thinks that at least 1000 are smoked daily by the fair ones in that city.

Passions, like wild horses, when properly trained and disciplined, are capable of being applied to the noblest purposes; but when allowed to have their own way, they become dangerous in the extreme.

Odd typographical errors are constantly occurring. A paper recently made the surprising statement that "two thousand cartloads of cats had come East over Western railroads." The editor designed to say "carts."

Our friend C., says a Southern contemporary, is a neat taper fellow, standing about four feet two in his stockings—a natural poet and a first rate fellow—but he was sold, badly sold, and that, too, by a white man. You must know that we have many a day here when not a solitary customer is about to keep the storekeepers busy.

As a consequence, in order to destroy the monotony and ennui, many a sell is got up to create an excitement. C. was ready to do anything to make dull time pass.

"Well, C., I'll give you a chance to make ten dollars."

"How?" asked C.

"Well, you're good at running; you're good bottom, and the time is just the thing. If you will run as far as Hill's warehouse, at the foot of the hill, and back again, and never stop, you shall have ten dollars."

"Good as wheat! I'm your man!" says C.

"The distance is only two hundred yards, and my wind is good for three times the distance."

"Well, pitch in, and make an honest X."

Off starts C.—at a 2.40 pace down the hill, all the clerks and storekeepers running out to see what was in the wind. The quiz soon spread, and our "little study" was encouraged on his "Who laughs last laughs best," was the racer's thoughts. Now he reaches the turning post, and back he comes. Cheers greet him on every side, but the thought of ten dollars made so easy, wreaths his face in smiles. He arrives at the starting point, stops, and claims the purse with a glow of pride and exultations.

"You haven't won it now!" says our wag.

"How's that?"

"Why, you have stopped; and the money was yours only in case you never stopped!"

"—eyes opened wide. 'Twas no use to get mad; the thing was too rich, and the laugh was against him. He took it in good part, and our wag made all things all right, stood
