Detective Sheets and Chris Diehl were dining at the European restaurant today, and proprietor Louis Berets informed Sheets that a valuable skirt had been stolen from Mrs. Berets and it was suspected that the servant girl was guilty of the theft. Hardly had they left the restaurant ten minutes, when the officer spied three girls walking toward State street. The girls were taken to the city hall, where the skirt was removed from Emily Parsons who was wearing it.

Gentle and kind, she was devoted to religion and was considered one of the best informed of women on subjects pertaining to the Bible, knowing that book thoroughly and making a careful study of its teachings.

County Wicklow, Ireland, was the birthplace of Mrs. Malone. Had she she lived until her next birthday, in March, she would have been 77 years of age. At an early age she came to the United States and settled with her relatives in New York State.

The husband of the deceased was John Malone. He was a soldier in the Rebellion, in the Third New York light artillery. John Malone was killed at Newburgh, in 1865, dying the death of a soldier. At that time the family lived in Waterloo, N. Y. Fourteen years ago Mrs. Malone came to Denver and has since lived with her son and daughter.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed. Services will be held at St. Joseph's church at 10 o'clock Monday morning, but the disposition of the remains has not yet been definitely decided.

DR. LEYDS IN BERLIN.

Says the Boers Have No Occasion to Ask for Mediation.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—The North German Gazette this afternoon says that Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, who has arrived here for the celebration of the emperor's birthday, was received by Count Von Buelow, the minister of foreign affairs today.

The Lokal Anzeiger publishes a report of an interview with Dr. Leyds, in which he is quoted as saying his presence in Berlin has nothing to do with politics, but is due merely to the invitation to the diplomatic dinner which he had received from the imperial chancellery. He proposed to remain some days but had no political designs.

Regarding mediation, Dr. Leyds said the Boers had no occasion to appeal to any one. Everything was going splendidly. As to the conclusion of peace, his personal opinion was that Great Britain would have to return a large portion of the territory she had seized from the Boers and the federal republic would of course obtain every guarantee that not a hair of the heads of their kinsmen would suffer. No words, he continued, need be wasted on the absolute independence of the two republics.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

How and By Whom the National Capital is Governed.

CONGRESS PASSES THE LAWS

Representatives Not Interested in Washington Local Affairs—Republican National Convention.

Special Correspondence. Washington, Jan. 22.—Two days in each month the House of Representatives becomes the board of aldermen or the common council of the city of Washington, or rather, for the District of Columbia, that tract ten miles square, carved out of Maryland and lying on the north bank of the Potomac river.

What are ordinances in other cities are the laws of the United States, as Congress must pass every law for the government of the city or to regulate any of its affairs. The easy method of doing business in the Senate, the privilege which a Senator has of calling up any bill at any time, enables the legislation for Washington to be considered in the upper branch of Congress without any difficulty.

In the House it has been found necessary to set apart two days of each month for the consideration of legislation relating to the city of Washington and its environs. All the franchises for railroads, for logging alleys, cutting streets, and, in fact, everything that a municipal assembly performs for a city must be done for the national capital by Congress. As a rule, but small number of representatives take any interest in such legislation. Days devoted to District of Columbia legislation almost always finds but a thin attendance upon the floor of the House.

Those who are not interested in themselves, but who are interested in to their committee rooms and offices and dispose of correspondence. Sometimes the House is left without a quorum on these occasions, and a member who desires to defeat some bill can do so by simply making a vote which will disclose that fact.

A CONVENTION OF ORATORY.

The Republican national convention according to present arrangements, will be devoted largely to oratory. It is expected that the convention will ring and echo to the tones of the best speakers of the Republican party. As it is a foregone conclusion that President McKinley will be renominated unanimously and the general impression is that the convention will be practically settled by that time, together with the fact that the platform will have been substantially framed, it will make the meeting little less than a great ratification meeting, and speech-making will largely take the place of the business which engrosses the attention of the delegates to most conventions. It is more than likely that when President McKinley is nominated there will be a second speech from nearly every State in the Union, and each State delegation will put forth its best speaker, who will endeavor to outdo all other efforts in the way of political phase-making and eloquent encomium of the President and of the grand old party.

Something like this occurred when Grover Cleveland was renominated by acclamation in the convention of 1888 at St. Louis, when the States were all heard in seconding speeches. Nearly every State in the Union took up its delegates to swell the mighty voice that was singing the praises of Mr. Cleveland and the Democratic party.

AN ALABAMA EPISODE.

Representative Underwood relates an interesting experience he once had in Alabama. It was at the time when the Populist party was making its great fight to control the State. Mr. Underwood was directed by the Democratic committee to make a speech in one of the mountain hamlets of the State where the Populists had made great headway. So bitter was the feeling that the Populists would not come out to hear the Democratic orators, who were advocating the re-election of Governor Jones, and Mr. Underwood was sure that he would not get an audience.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT

ON Grape-Nuts.

"I do not know exactly what internal improvement is going on, but something makes me feel stronger and better since I have been steadily eating Grape-Nuts."

"They make a most delicious breakfast, and I would not like to do without this food. Is there any of the company stock for sale? If so, at what price? It should be a good investment for your products are very popular and sold everywhere. The food Grape-Nuts, is the finest thing in the world in its use, and will hold friends whenever it is tried."

The writer is one of the silversmiths on Broadway, N. Y. His name will be given on request to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., makers of Grape-Nuts.

If your Grape-Nuts ever get soft or punky from being in a damp place, dry out in a pie pan in the oven before serving.
