THE POSTAL CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

THE existing postal convention between the United States and Great Britain. signed on June 18, 1867, and which went into effect on January 1st, 1868, contains a provision that it may be terminated by either party on a notice of one year. It appears that Great Britain has wished to avail herself of this provision. The Duke of Montrose, Postmaster General of the United Kingdom, on the 13th of last December, notified Governor Randall, the Postmaster General of the United States, that he wished the convention to terminate on the 31st of next December. He stated that such a step "had been rendered necessary by difficulties that have arisen in carrying some of its stipulations into effect, and by objections which have presented themselves to some of its details when reduced to practice." These difficulties and objections were not stated in detail; but, in April last, Mr. Anthony Trollope arrived in Washington, and presented to Postmaster General Randall a memorandum, setting forth the reasons of the British office for closing the present convention, and the propositions he had been directed to make for a new one. To those reasons Governor Randall made a lengthened reply.

From his letter we gather the idea that the objections to the practical operation of the present convention, "that no tender was received in accordance with the terms sanctioned by that convention for taking the mails from the United Kingdom every Saturday from Liverpool and Sunday from Queenstown;" and that none was received by the United States for the mail from New York on Wednesdays; that the Cunard boats hitherto running on those days, and still running on those days, are not running on the terms contemplated by the convention:" and that the "Post Office of the United States has, as an act of favor, consente to send mails by them, though not in conformity with the terms of the convention."

Governor Randall says that the sending of the mails by the Cunard boats is not to be regarded as an act of favor, as the department simply agreed to deal directly with that line, for the service which it performed, the same as with the other lines which had tendered proposals and been regularly accepted for the mail service. He thinks the article of the present convention which gives to each office the exclusive control of its. own arrangements for the dispatch of mails to the other, without any restriction, except that the vessels employed are to be"well appointed ships, sailing on stated days," both equitable and just. It will enable each office, by inviting competition, from year to year, from the rival lines, not only to secure the best attainable mail service, but on the most favorable terms. To return to the old system of special contracts, or subsidies for a term of years with particular lines of steamers to the exclusion of other lines equally efficient for mail purposes, would certainly be a retregrade movement unproductive of any beneficial result, either to the mail service or to the people of the two countries.

By an extract from a letter written from the British Post office, Postmaster-General Randall proves that that office was in entire accord with the Post Office Department of the United States with regard to the propriety and practicability of adopting the principle now in vogue with us. He also shows that the objection which the British Post Office urges against each office making itsown terms with the owners of vessels, is not an objection. By having this privilege, the United States Post Office Department is paying for the current year only fifteen cents per ounce for the ocean January then passed TAN AND THE STATE OF THE PASSED OF THE PAS transportation of letter mails, while the British office is paying for the very same service (the ships employed for each office being the same) twenty-four cents per ounce!

The committee on elections reported the credentials of Boyden and Dickey, members elect from North Caroling but the inaugural address was very brief and not explicit with regard to the

of the different mode of inviting timders adopted on each side—the British affice of the different mode of inviting tenders adopted on each side—the British office agreeing in advance to allow the full amount of sea postage as compensation for the service, while the United States Department invited competition, not tions. only in respect to speed and other rethe reductions that shall be effected from year to year in the cost of transportation. Also that the total postage on international tempapers shall be two cents in the United States, and one penny in the United Kingdom, per four ounces; and that the total postage on international book-packets and patterns United Kingdom, per four ounces, or fraction thereof.

From present appearances we may sonably conclude that we shall be favored with cheap foreign postage in wrent has been received by President Brigham Young from President F. D. Richards, under date of June 20, in which he states that 625 souls from Scandinavia and 249 from the British Isles, making an aggregate of 874 souls, which counted as 743 statute adults, embarked at Liverpool on the ship Emerald Isle. The ship was cleared on the day of his writing, and during the embarkation and clearing they had most beautiful weather, a blessing which those who have lived under the weeping skies of Britain can appreciate.

Another letter, of June 24th, states that the ship Constitution was cleared on that day with 457 of the Saints on board, under the presidency of Elders Harry H. Cluff, Joseph S. Horne and C. P. Liston. Brother Horne has charge of about 40 persons from the Swiss and German mission, which number includes some from Munich, the capital of Bavaria, and also some from the kingdom of Wurtemburg.

Brother W. C. Thomas, of Brigham City, who left here as a missionary on the evening of June 3d, arrived at Liverpool on the 24th of June.

The military authorities have been urged for some time to station troops in the violnity, but have failed to do so, and unless active measures are immediately taken to put down the Indians, an active and bloody war is anticipated.

"We learn that Gol. Dodge commanding at North Platte, had issued an order for all citizens living at the old town to remove to the new town which is located one mile lower down the course of the river, and two miles west of the stream, on a high bluff, where water sells at one dollar per barrel. The railroad company have sunk a well to the depth of twenty-seven feet, in the new town, from which a mixture of mud, water, epsom saits and sikali has been obtained, half a glass of which is a physic of the strongest character. Fights are plenty, and generally free. Shooting commences on unsettled accounts of from seventy-five cents to a dollar and a quarter. There is more whisky walking about in that community than in any other of the same size in the world. Coal, of good quality, is being found all along the road. The tunnel this side of North Platte will not be finished in less than a month; but a temporary track will less than a month; but a temporary track will be laid around it. The track is now completed to within eighteen miles of the river. Prospecting for gold is progressing on North Platte at a distance of about sixty miles above the crossing.
