EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, October 25, 1876.

NEWS NOTES.

A Pennsylvania printer, who is the father of twenty-six children, is puzzling himself to account for the hard times.
A Portland man and his wife have separated because they could not agree about who should pay the funeral expenses of a recently buried child.
Sewing has been taught in the public schools of Boston for twenty-three years, and it is just now discovered that it is illegal to spend public money for that purpose.

Remarkable stories are told of John McFarley, an Irishman, at Bradford, Mass., who, it is said, has bitten a plate clear through, lifted a barrel of pork by the iron hoop with his teeth, run sixty-four miles in twenty-four hours without food, and eaten snakes, bullfrogs, rats, and other similar delicacies with a relish.
A candidate for a vacant vicarage in England announces an invention of his, which may prove to be useful. It is a peculiar arrangement of the pulpit, with a clock to give warning. When at the end of the half hour the clock sounds an alarm, if the preacher does not conclude within three minutes, down comes the pulpit, with the parson and the rest of the appendages.
An enlightened citizen of New Hampshire gives one of the Coroners' jury in the Josie Langmaid murder case the benefit of his experience as follows: "Take up the coroner and make the man in charge, such her if she bleeds that is the man I had the same evidence with one some fifteen years ago this will show you the coroner's way of holding a coroner's jury this is as true as god is in heaven try this And you will satisfy the whole of the New England state just as I tell to help me out."

The London Globe asserts that a young lady in France has begun to keep ants for the purpose of selling ants' eggs to the breeders of pheasants—containing ants' eggs to be practically fond of that delicacy. In order to make a successful industry of it, she has had to endure the loss of the creature which her skin has been indicated by the process to the texture of parchment. The object of course being to get the ants' eggs, and not the ants, this enterprising lady keeps, as far as she can, only the good layers, but it must take a vast number of good layers to supply even one pheasant's table.
The pitcher that goes too often to the well may get bored at last. It says the proverb, the truth of which has just been exemplified in melancholy fashion in the death of M. Boule, celebrated for having saved some fifty persons at Toulouse during the late inundations. He was a powerful man and an expert swimmer, and yet he was drowned in the Seine by the upsetting of a boat in which he was enjoying a sail. To have bravely snatched so many persons from certain death, during a terrible inundation, and then to perish as a pleasure party, seems a strange mockery of Fate.

A THRIVING INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION.—There is an association of young persons at Springfield, Vt., known as the Industrial Works, which furnishes all its members with constant work at fair wages, and a pleasant home at small cost, which is meeting with a success so marked as to attract the notice of all thinking people. The members of this association are all young people who are willing to rid themselves of the evils of idleness, and to dress economically, and save a portion of their wages. No others are admitted, however, who are not required to furnish a small amount of capital and to save one-fourth of their wages, which must be invested in the capital stock of the association. Young men are not required to furnish any capital in the outset, but must save one-sixth of their wages and invest it in the business. Those who do not comply with the requirements of the association are expelled, and those who wish to leave can do so at any time, and take with them their capital by giving six months' notice. The wages paid to each member is fixed by a board of directors and is proportioned to their skill and ability. They have a large dwelling or home where the members live and enjoy many privileges and comforts not usually found in families at boarding houses. All pay a moderate price for their board from their wages. They have two new factory buildings, and a good water privilege and considerable machinery, and are engaged in the manufacture of toy and house-furnishing goods for which they find a ready sale. They commenced business a year ago with five hands, and are now working forty-five; their sales for last month were over $3,000, their pay roll for the month was over $1,300, and the savings of the month were $200. The capital of the company was more than $300.—Vermont Standard.
