Seven thousand women belong to the Belgian Internationals.

Who pays the highest price for a home? The woman who marries for one.

A Michigan doctor was arrested on the death of a patient but was promptly discharged upon the plea that he had prescribed all the medicines he knew.

In Iowa if a man borrows a quarter from his wife and gets drunk on it, the woman can sue him and recover the money, that is, if he has so much money left.

It is said that the three hardest words of the English language to pronounce, consecutively, are, "I am mistaken." An exchange suggests that it is much harder to say, "I deliberately lied."

The great leaders of modern literature have been hearty eaters, if not bon vivants: Goethe, Schiller, Milton, Byron, Lamb, Scott, Shakespeare himself, Thackeray, Dickens, have left on record their penchant for good dinners.

The manufacturers of St. Lawrence, Mass., have nipped a strike in the bud by agreeing to pay their hands hereafter by the hour instead of the day, leaving it with the operatives whether they will work six or ten hours per day.

A proposition to light the streets of Mount Vernon, Indiana, was opposed in the City Council of that burg on the ground that if the streets were lighted thieves would be enabled to see when they were watched and consequently it would be impossible to catch them.

A woman of Breslau, in Germany, has been sentenced to four years' imprisonment for obtaining money under false pretenses, in sending to this country three young ladies under the false pretext of securing positions for them as governesses in good families.

An Indiana editor gives this to the world as an argument that the women of his state are prepared for the duties of a voting citizen: "A Harrison county girl recently knocked her mother down with a rolling pin, and in turn was choked by her father until her tongue hung out of her mouth. In a short time mother and daughter recovered, and pitched into the old man with rolling pin and table forks, nearly ruining his arm with the latter. The daughter then threw all the dishes out of the window."

The New York Tribune says: The police estimate that, on an average fully 500 persons—men, women and children—go into the streets every pleasant day with the intention of stealing anything they can, with any prospect of safety, lay their hands on. These marauders particularly infest the hotels, public offices, and crowded shops, and carry off whatever they can steal, from a bundle of dry goods, an umbrella, or a cane, to a sheet of paper or a daily newspaper. Many of them are well dressed, have good manners, and would never be suspected by the uninitiated.

Florence, the comedian, tells a capital story of a waiter at one of the London taverns, who was sadly given to drink. A party of young men determined to reform him, and one day they read an imaginary paragraph from a paper, relating a terrible accident, in which an inebriate on blowing out a candle, was killed by the flames igniting with the fumes of his breath. Jerry pricked up his ears at this, and went in search of the prayer-book. Returning with this, he expressed a desire to take a solemn oath upon it, bemoaned the fact that he had been a sorry tippler, and was bringing himself to ruin, and then swore that never again so long as he lived, would he attempt to blow out a candle!

Some of the women lace-dressers in Nottingham, England, have struck for an advance in their wages of 25 per cent., and a lessening in the hours of labor to 51 per week. The master-dressers agreed to offer the work people an advance of 12 1/2 per cent. on their wages, and make the working hours 54 a week. The hands of most of the firms accepted the offer. In two large concerns, however, the women refused to resume work unless their terms were agreed to, and during the day proceeded to some of the other houses in the trade in order to attempt to induce the hands to leave work. In two large silk and cotton doubling mills in the town the hands have struck for the nine hours' system.

Here is a new story about Dean Richmond:

A modest printer's devil in Albany entered the manager's office, fearing that he would be rudely rebuffed when he made his mission known. After a moment's hesitation, he said, falteringly:

"Mr. Richmond, I believe?"

"Yes; what do you want of me?"

"I should like to get a pass from Albany to Buffalo."

"On what grounds do you ask for a pass?" (This with a rising and a very rough voice.)

"On the grounds, sir, that I don't want to pay my fare."

Richmond, without another word, wrote out a pass and handed it to the applicant. The boy took it, saying:

"Thank you, thank you, Mr. Richmond."

"You needn't thank me. I am glad to accommodate you. You are the first person I've ever known to ask for a pass on the right grounds."
