IMPORTANT DON'TS.

A little volume with the above expressive title has recently been published, in the interest of good deportment; but the book don't exhaust the subject by a good deal, and the following "don'ts," relative to street manners, jotted down as they come to mind, will prove interesting to gentlemen:

Don't keep to the right when walking upon the sidewalk. Should you do so ten chances to one you will attract no notice from those you meet. Keep to the left if you would make a sensation.

Don't hide your umbrella under your coat as though you were afraid people would think you had stolen it. Make a Greek cross of yourself by carrying it under your arm at right angles with your body. Besides this is the safest way to carry an umbrella. If any eyes are punched out with it, you may be certain they won't be yours.

Don't carry your cane as though it was a third leg. Let it drag after you in a manner which shall trip up everybody which shall come too near. How can you know that the man behind you is not a pickpocket, with designs on your wallet and watch?

Don't apologize if you chance to step upon a gentleman's foot. It might make him feel awkward. But turn the matter off jocularly by reminding him that you must step somewhere, or advising him to keep his feet in his pocket. He cannot but admire your presence of mind and your ready wit.

Don't take any especial pains to point out the way to the stranger who asks to be directed. Just as like as not he won't remember aright. Tell him to follow his nose and he will find it, or push by without seeming to notice him.

Don't walk at one monotonous pace all the time. If you are in company walk slowly, two or three abreast. This will prove a trial of patience to people behind you — but patience is a virtue and should be exercised. When you are alone go at railroad speed, elbowing your way vigorously through the crowd. Everybody admires activity and energy.

Don't when two or three of you get together for a little chat, consider that you are blocking the sidewalk. The sidewalk was made for man, not man for the sidewalk, and it is your province to enjoy it to the full.

Don't forget to stare at the women folks. Your eyes were given to you to stare with, and if the women don't like it let them remain indoors.

Don't pass by a lady without turning around to peer into her face. If you don't do this, she might think you were not a jackass, and it would be cruel to create a false impression in her mind.

Don't talk in a low tone of voice as you walk along, unless you have something really worth hearing. If your conversation is of your achievements in guzzling beer or mashing the girls—as, no doubt, it is—the more people who hear you the greater the number of those who will know you to be a superior being.

Don't miss the opportunity of exhibiting your fine clothing and refined manners in front of the liquor saloons, theatres and other places where your prominence will be effective.

Don't care for anybody but yourself. Remember that Providence helps those who help themselves.—Boston Transcript.

CHARACTER IN HAND-SHAKING.

The different modes of shaking hands will delineate human character better than any other single act can do, and many peculiarities of different persons may be noted in the performance of this social custom.

Who would expect to get a handsome donation—or any donation at all—from a man who will give two fingers to be shaken, and keeps the others tent as upon an "itching palm?"

The hand coldly held out to be shaken and drawn away again as soon as it decently may be, indicates a cold, selfish character, while the hand which seeks yours cordially, and unwillingly relinquishes its warm clasp, gives token of a genial disposition, and of a heart full of sympathy for humanity.

How much that is in the heart can be made to express itself through the agency of the fin ers! Who, having once experienced it, has ever forgotten the feeling conveyed by the eloquent pressure of the hand from a dying friend when the tongue has ceased to speak?

A right hearty grasp of the hand indicates warmth and ardor, while a soft, lax touch, without grasp, indicates the opposite characteristics. In the grasp of persons with large-hearted generous minds, there is a "whole soul" expression most refreshing and acceptable to kindred spirits.

But when a man presents you with a few cold, clammy, lifeless fingers, feeling very much like a dead fish, and expects you to do all the shaking, it will naturally make you think of the hospital, and other cheerful things.

Contrary to this style, there is a habit among a rude class, of giving your hand a crushing grasp, which is often most painful. In these case there may be great kindness and a "strong" affection, but it is as crude as it is hearty.

If the grasp is warm, ardent, and vigorous, so is the disposition. If it is cool, formal and without emotion, so is the character. If it is magnetic and animating, the disposition is the same. As we shake hands, so we feel, so we are.

But why do we shake hands at all? It is a very old-fashioned way of indicating friendship. We read in the Bible that Jehu said to Jonadab:

"Is thy heart right, as my heart is with thine heart? If it be, give me thine hand."

And it is not merely an old-fashioned custom. It is the contact of sensitive and magnetic surfaces through which there is, in something more than merely a figurative sense, an interchange of feeling. The same principle is illustrated in another of our modes of greeting. When we wish to reciprocate the warmer feelings we see not content with the contact of hands, we bring the lips into service.—Ex.

A DOG'S ARCTIC CRUISE.

A shabby coated Newfoundland dog was held by a strong chain on the deck of the United States sloop-of-war Yantic, in the upper bay, yesterday. He jumped about and tugged at his chain, but wagged his tail good naturedly all the time. He thought more of a pat on the head than a bone. The sailors said he had to be kept chained or he would jump overboard and swim ashore. He was Rover, the dog which was on the Greely relief ship Proteus, which vessel was crushed in the ice off Cape Sabine, while trying to reach Lady Franklin Bay. Rover was bought by Lieut. E.A. Garlington, the commander of the expedition, at St. John, Newfoundland, whence the Proteus sailed.

When the members of the expedition took to the open boats after the sides of the Proteus were broken in, Rover curled up in the bow of one of them to take his chances of reaching a place of safety with the party. There was another dog called Rover on the Proteus. He was a cross between a setter and a Newfoundland, with a smooth body and long ears, and belonging to Captain Pike, the commander of the Proteus. There were also twenty-one Esquimaux dogs on the ship. They could not be taken along and Captain Pike did not think it worth while to take his Rover. The Esquimaux dogs were a cowardly, treacherous set. Lieutenant Garlingford's Rover would whip three or four of them at a time and would not let them come aft. When the timbers of the Proteus yielded they were seized with terror. They ran about but would no leave the ship. The sailors took them by the tail and back of the neck and threw them, yelping, out upon the ice, where they ran into nooks, and set up a dismal howling. Dr. J. S Harrison, the surgeon of the expedition, said that when one of the Esquimaux dogs was down the other would pounce on him. He supposed they set upon Captain Pike's Rover when the party sailed away, and ate him. Then they began to devour each other. In going from Smith Sound some rough weather was encountered. Lieut. Garlington's Rover was taken seasick. He put his head over the side of the boat and paid tribute to the deep in a very human way. Rover is a young dog, but very intelligent.—N. Y. Times.

LOSING AND FORGETTING.

A successful business man said there were two things he learned when he was eighteen, which were ever afterwards of great use to him, namely: "Never to lose anything, and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it.

"But," inquired the young man, "Suppose I lose it, what shall I do then?"

"You must not lose it."

"I don't mean to." said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?"

"But I say you must not happen to; I shall make no provisions for such an occurrence; you must not lose it!"

This put a new train of thought in the young man's mind, and he found that if he was determined to do anything, he could do it. He made such a provision against every contingency that he never lost anything. He found this equally true about forgetting. If a certain matter of importance was to be remembered, he pinned it down in his mind, fastened it there, and made it stay. He used to say: "When a man tells me I forgot to do something I tell him he might as well say, 'I do not think enough of my business to take the trouble to think of it again.'"

I once had a young man in my emply, said another gentleman, who deemed it sufficient excuse for neglecting any important task to say, "I forgot." I told him that would not answer. If he was sufficiently interested he would be careful to remember. It was because he did not care enough that he forgot. I drilled him with this truth. He worked for me three years, and during the last of the three years he was utterly changed in that respect.

SPICKS OF SPICE.

What time is it and where's the pitaty puddin? It's 8.

The man who was kicked out of a seaside resort was caught by the under toe.

It is doubtless owing to our being made of clay that we are so easily "broke."

From the elevator boy: "Why does Mr. Keene get so tired when he plays Richard III? Because he has to hump himself."

A gentleman the other evening objected to playing cards with a lady, because, he said, she had such a winning way about her.

Too much study is said to affect the mind, and we know a number of cases where it would affect it very favorably, too.—Burlington Free Press.

We represent our fictions as though they were realities, while you preach your realities as though they were fictions.—The Actor to the Minister.

A New Yorker calls Chicago an "outlying town." The title may be deserved, but there are a number of towns in the West that can outlie it. Let us hope it is not so.

Even a deacon don't say grace when he steps into a railway eating house. He knows that it would be asking too much to request that he be made thankful for anything he will get there.—Boston Post.

Old soying: "I have divided my subject," began the parson, "into two heads." "Two heads with but a single thought," whispered Fogg to Mrs. F., and then he closed his eyes for his usual nap.—Second Century.

Bartholdi's statue of "Liberty" will be put up in New York harbor early next spring. To give it a national interest it will wear a pair of David Davis' pants and one of Senator Tabor's night shirts.—Chicago News.

A New York widower, aged 80, and a widow, aged 75, were married the other day. We suppose this is a fair illustration of what is meant when persons are spoken of as living to a green old age.—Hartford Post.

It must be nice to be a farmer, with nothing to do all winter but lie back in the chimney corner and drink cider and tell lies about the tough storms of his boyhood, when he used to walk seven miles to school.—Rockland Courier.

Bertie had half a biscuit buttered, and a whole one unbuttered. He gave Gracie the whole one and kept the buttered one. A remark being made about his giving away the larger piece, Gracie said: "Yes, he gave the biggerest, but he kept the butterest himself."

Uncle, to nephew, who has lately taken an interest in dancing: "As I hear, you have been taking dancing lessons. How do you like waltzing?"

Nephew: "Waltzing! Ah, I like the waltz very much, but the girl is always in the way."—German Fun.

A boy was going up Sycamore Street yesterday with a glass inkstand to fill. Every few steps he would toss it into the air and catch it again. He did it successfully until the last time, when it landed gracefully on the pavement in a thousand pieces. He looked at it about a minute, and then said: "It serves the old man right. I told him before I started that I couldn't carry that thing up street."

"One who expects an offer" writes to a New York paper thus: "When a young lady receives a proposition of marriage which is agreeable to her, ought she to accept promptly? Or is it a better policy to hang off a little?" Oh, yes, by all means don't be too anxious. Hang off a little and perhaps the young man may leave and never look for another girl. You don't know how much you may benefit him by "hanging off a little."—Oil City Derrick.

NOTICE.

Territory of Utah, County of Salt Lake, in the Probate Court of said County.

In the matter of the Estate and Guardianship of Elizabeth Smith, Priscilla Smith and Emma Pearl Smith, Minors.

Order to show cause on application of Guardian for Order of Sale of Real Estate.

It appearing to this Court from the petition herein filed by Susan E. Smith, the guardian of the persons and estates of Elizabeth Smith, Priscilla Smith, and Emma Pearl Smith, minors, praying for an order of sale of certain real estate belonging to her said wards, that it is necessary and would be beneficial to said minors that such real estate should be sold.

It is hereby ordered that the next of kin of the said wards, and all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court on Friday, the 21st day of December, 1883, at ten o'clock a.m., at the Court Room of this Court, at the County Court House, in the city and county of Salt Lake, then and there to show cause why an order should not be made for the sale of such estate.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published at least three successive weeks before the said day of hearing in the DESERET EVENING NEWS, a newspaper printed and published in said City and County of Salt Lake.

Dated November 27th, 1883.

P. SMITH, Probate Judge.
