

MRS. HENROTTIN TO THE "NEWS."

Tells of the Purpose of the Organization of Consumers' Club.
ENTIRELY HUMANITARIAN.

Something of Its Aims, Regulations and Accomplishments. Novel and Interesting Ideas.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henrottin, now in the city from California, where they have been for some time, will spend a few days visiting with their friends, M. Henrottin, who has been for some time past a resident of this city.

Mrs. Henrottin is one of America's leading women, her work in connection with her position as president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs together with her efforts along philanthropic lines having brought her into national prominence.

Presently Mrs. Henrottin may well be ranked among the best of the best, as well as the most successful of the best. No more eloquent and more convincing evidence of this is to be found than that of the consumer's club, which she has been for some time past a resident of this city.

Mrs. Henrottin's most important work has been in connection with the consumer's club, which she has been for some time past a resident of this city.

In an interview today Mrs. Henrottin stated that since the expiration of her term as president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, which occurred last June, she has been chiefly occupied with the many duties which came in the line of work with which she had been connected.

I have been doing nothing, she stated, which I do not love to do. Mrs. Henrottin declared emphatically, though the brief account which followed at request of the editor, which she had been engaged in doing, that she had been doing nothing, she stated, which I do not love to do.

The ladies being interested in the condition of the working class, and a list of questions in all the leading newspapers in New York, asking questions as to the cause of the hard conditions imposed on employees. Mrs. Henrottin, after declaring that to the consumer's club, she has been for some time past a resident of this city.

The consumer's club, she stated, is a body of women who are interested in the condition of the working class, and a list of questions in all the leading newspapers in New York, asking questions as to the cause of the hard conditions imposed on employees.

Among the novel features of the club, she stated, is the fact that it is a body of women who are interested in the condition of the working class, and a list of questions in all the leading newspapers in New York, asking questions as to the cause of the hard conditions imposed on employees.

The movement that is going on all over England for organizing and reviving village industries is one that has not yet received due consideration and recognition. But, if the small business is to be revived, the experimental stage can be developed or placed upon a permanent basis.

COLONEL WILLARD YOUNG TO BE MUSTERED OUT.

A private letter from Col. Willard Young in Cuba, just received here, states that he expected to be ordered to the United States this week and that his regiment would be mustered out at once. Col. Young, who was appointed to head the second regiment of volunteer engineers at the outbreak of the war with Spain, has been in Malatania, a suburb of Havana, for the past several months with one battalion of his regiment, the other having been detailed to duty in Honolulu.

There were three regiments of engineers in all, one having been organized in the Southern States, one in the New England States, and one, by Col. Young, in the Western and Central Eastern States, and consisting of 1,100 men. It is generally conceded that Col. Young's regiment was the crack one of the service; the other two have already been mustered out. At the time the war with Spain broke out, Col. Young was employed as state engineer in Utah, and being a West Point graduate he rendered his services to the government. He has rendered valuable aid in Havana in the waterworks department, the construction of wharves, etc. The picture above, taken from a recent photo, shows Col. Young mounted on a horse which he purchased in Florida, and the foliage in the background illustrates the character of the country in which he is employed. His headquarters are in a beautiful country villa and the house has been the scene of several notable social gatherings, among the list of guests at a recent reception given in the Havana palace being the names of Fitzhugh Lee and several Cuban officers of distinction.

Col. Young also had an extended interview with Secretary Alger during his recent visit. He had had several offers to remain in Havana, one position being tendered him at a salary of $10,000 per annum at the head of the street department of that city, and another to aid in the quartermaster's work in the erection of barracks. Col. Young declined both offers and will return home at once. It had been his hope that he might remain in the regular army, but his age being 46, and the new army bill placing the limit of age for superior officers at 44, that will now probably be out of the question. With Col. Young's release will come that of Captain Elias Kimball, who has the rank of captain, Dr. Macdonald and Dr. McKenna, all are expected home within the next month. Col. Young has enjoyed a salary of $1,000 per annum during his present service at the head of the second regiment.
