

How to Keep Meat Fresh a Long Time.

There is no good reason why farmers and their families should eat so much salt pork, leaving all the fresh meat to the inhabitants of cities and villages, when the following method will keep meat fresh for weeks, even in the warmest weather. I know, for I have tried it for more than ten years. As soon as the animal heat is out of the meat, slice it up ready for cooking. Prepare a large jar by scalding well with hot salt water. Mix salt and pulverized saltpetre in the proportion of one tablespoonful of saltpetre to one teacupful of salt. Cover the bottom of the jar with a sprinkle of salt and pepper. Put down a layer of meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper the same as if just going to the table, and continue in this manner till the jar is full. Fold a cloth or a towel and wet it with strong salt and water, in which a little of the saltpetre is dissolved. Press the cloth closely over the meat and set it in a cool place. Be sure and press the cloth on tightly as each layer is removed, and your meat will keep for months. It is a good plan to let the meat lie over night after it is sliced, before packing. Then drain off all the blood that oozes from it. It will be necessary to change the cloth occasionally or take it off and wash it—first in cold water—then scald in salt and water as at first. In this way farmers can have fresh meat the year round. I have kept beef that was killed the 12th of February till the 21st of June. Then I packed a large jar of veal in the same way during the dog-days, and it kept six weeks. This receipt alone is worth the price of any newspaper in the land.—Ex.

HER HOP PICKING UMBRELLA.—The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh were, it is said, recently taking a drive close in the neighborhood of the Eastwell estate when, being overtaken by a heavy shower of rain, they knocked at the door of a cottage which happened to be near, and asked that an umbrella might be lent them. An old lady, of a benevolent but yet very careful disposition, to whom this application was addressed, and the persons of her illustrious visitors were unknown, replied that if they would promise to bring it back again she would lend them her hop-picking umbrella; but she could not spare the best. Their royal highnesses gave the necessary promise, and drove away to Eastwell, where, perhaps, some little amusement was created by a recital of the adventure. The next day the borrowed article was returned with the Duchess of Edinburgh's compliments, a sovereign and a pound of good tea. The old lady has since stated that had she known it was the Duchess who had called upon her, she would certainly have lent her the best umbrella.—Newark, N. Y., Advertiser.

AN EGYPTIAN MUMMY REGAINING THE APPEARANCE OF LIFE.—A gentleman of Halifax, England, being in Egypt, brought back several heads from human mummies. These heads were brought in separate small boxes, and one of them in some way got soaked in salt water on the voyage. When it was opened by Mr. Leyland, in the presence of a number of other gentlemen, they were startled—even astonished—to find that the flesh in the face had recovered its outline, the cheeks and chin were plump and rounded, the opened eyes looked upon them, and even seemed to move. The gentlemen hastened to call others from all parts of the museum to observe the wonderful phenomenon. For a few minutes they beheld an unmistakable Egyptian countenance, with pleasant, composed expression—the face of a man who lived at least 3,000 years ago. They could only conclude that the powerful aromatic gums which had been used had arrested the decay which the salt water had now rendered possible, and which speedily set in after the head was taken from the box and wrappings. But several gentlemen who saw it have assured me that they can never forget the life-likeness of the face before the swift decay of flesh which followed.

A Rhode Island woman says she would rather have the nightmare seven straight nights than to tell her husband that the flour barrel is empty.

At his residence, in Payson City, May 14, JOHN BOLLSTON FAIRBANKS.

Deceased was born in Queensbury, N. Y., April 28, 1817; was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at Mead's Basin, N. J., by Elder John Leach, March 16, 1843; gathered with the Saints at Nauvoo, Illinois, in October, 1844; with them was driven out of the State by the mob, April 25, 1846; found a temporary home at Winter Quarters, whence he started for the Rocky Mountains, as a captain of ten in J. M. Grant's company, June 17, 1847. At an early day in the history of Payson, known then as Perce, etc., he removed with his family to this, then a remote settlement, and from that date to the hour of his death was intimately and closely identified with its history and growth; February 18, 1862, was appointed bishop of Payson Ward, which office he faithfully and honorably filled until sent on a mission to England, April 26, 1871. During his absence on this mission, circumstances with which he was not in the least connected and over which he could not possibly have any control rendered the appointment of a successor to the bishopric of the Ward necessary, and Elder Joseph S. Tanner was called to that position. At our late municipal election Elder Fairbanks was elected a member of the city council of Payson city, which office he held at the time of his decease. Elder Fairbanks was known far and near for his fatherly disposition, for his kindness of heart, for his wisdom in council, and for his faithfulness to the principles of the gospel. He lived and died a consistent Latter-day Saint, and left behind him a name and character of which his descendants and friends may well be proud. The funeral services were conducted in the meeting house, and oratory addresses were delivered by President A. O. Smoot of Provo, Elder Julius F. Wells of Salt Lake City, and Bishop J. S. Tanner and Elder I. M. Coombs of Payson. Between four and five hundred persons accompanied the mourners to the cemetery, some in wagons and carriages, and others on foot, the members of the city council acting as pall bearers. All feel that another good man has gone to rest, and all feel to say, "Peace to his ashes."—Com.
