GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1865.

THE WIFE TAMER.

Mrs. Morton was a widow, a young, pretty, rich widow when Dr. Charles Strahan made her acquaintance. She was poor but very handsome when Squire Morton married her, and at his death, two years after, became sole heir, put on her widow's weeds, and pocketed her husband's gold at the same time.

Madame Rumor said that poor old Mr. Morton never enjoyed a single hour after he married her; but how should Madame Rumor know? Of one thing, however, I can give my readers reliable information. Mrs. Morton had not been a widow one year ere she received with pleasure very decided attentions from Dr. Strahan.

Well, he studied medicine, and had the title of M. D. conferred upon him, which he took pleasure in attaching to his name with great flourish. But it is asserted that he never had half a dozen patients in as many years. He was of prepossing appearance, a ready talker on any subject, and was, in fact, firstrate company. He played the flute and sang-was a good dancer and an excellent partner at whist; besides, he had some literary reputation. He wrote poetry and two column sketches for the Weekly Leveller, and last, though not least, he dressed in good taste and in Groceries, and General Merchandise. the height of fashion; how he did it no one knew, but it was no one's business.

But I must be allowed to correct one rumor which had gained considerable prevalence, to the effect that he supported scribbler could hardly afford Strahan's wardrobe.

Old Squire Morton had been dead but a little over a year when Dr. Strahan, despite all that gossipers could say, married the widow and her fortune. The fact was he wanted a rich wife—as to her, she no readier way to accomplish these purposes than by marrying. When anybody spoke to the doctor about her being a shrew, he merely remarked that he should take pleasure in taming a shrew.

together, for it was in the height of the season, and between Cape May, Saratoga and the White Mountains, they were alone with each other scarce three hours out of the twenty-four; consequently it Ben Holladay. was impossible for them to disagree. But the season over they returned to their quiet home—the place of all others to study a wife or a husband. There is no unnatural excitement, no fashionable Mrs. A. to outdress, no profligate Mr. B. to outdo in squandering money; no one to please, but the "other half."

After a season of long continued gaiety, there necessarly follows one of extreme dullness, and when one is dull, one is easily displeased. Now Mr. and Mrs. Strahan were greatly displeased.

It was their third day at home upon which their first quarrel commenced. How it commenced, neither could clearly BOXES! tell. It is only known that Strahan expressed a desire to dine upon roast beef, BONNET, HAT & SHIRT BOXES, and she would have roast turkey and oyster sauce. He'd have beef or nothing. She'd have turkey, and thus commenced one door east of Wm. Pitts. the war of the Strahans. One ordered the butler to have a fowl, and the other gave strict injunctions to have beef, while Mrs. S. visited her friends, and partook of turkey.

Aftersupper Dr. S gave a wine supperin the room which he dignified by the name of study, a sort of variety store, in which he kept his library, writing desk and spittoon. Here also were two glass cases, one of them contained a giant's skeleton hung on wires, in the other was GENERAL BLACKSMITHING BUSINESS, an Egyptian mummy.

The walls were hung with curiosities; among them a cane from a tree which grew over Washington's grave, a snuffbox from the wood of the charter oak, a chip from the United States frigate Constitution, minerals, shells, and fossils of Chair and Furniture Establishment, all kinds, specimen ears of corn, enormous sized fruits and vegetables, cases of dried insects and pickled reptiles. Stuffed birds were perched about the apartment, and voluptuous French lithographs and portraits of distinguished persons were hung promiscuously on the wall; a long reading table, arm chairs, a mammoth bell-metal pestle and morter, completed the furniture of the study.

During the same evening, Mrs, S. had a whist party in the parlor,

Wine held its votaries in bondage longer than cards. Mrs. S. had dismissed her party, and retired hours before her liege lord came to his chamber, and when he did come he found the door locked, himself without and her within. In vain he called to her; she would not hear, and [Continued on page 98.]
