

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1893, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

NO. 187.

AMONG THE RUINS.

Dead Bodies Found, Charred and Impossible to Recognize.

TEN THOUSAND SPECTATORS.

The Burned Gold Storage Building the Chief Point of Attraction at the Fair.

Chicago, July 11.—The center of attraction at the World's Fair today is something not shown in the gold building. It is the ruins of the gold storage building, which was burned yesterday with such terrible results and loss of life. Ten thousand people gathered around the debris this morning watching the search which is going on for the bodies of the victims.

Early this morning the remains of three more unfortunate were recovered from the ruins, so barely charred as to make recognition impossible though it is not believed that they are the bodies of German, owing to the locality in which they were found being some distance from the deadly smokestack around which the impeded flames bubbled on the cupola canopy, and covered with glass, iron, and other materials from above. From the fact that one of the bodies had an leather belt carrying a pair of pliers, it is believed the victim is an electrician.

This discovery opens the question how many persons were buried in the iron-enclosed building. The total of dead bodies so far recovered number fifteen, but the search in the ruins has not been very diligent in account of the heat and confusion, and there is an idea that there may be still more.

The German government is also interested in the fire because it was conducted by the Germans, who were caught in the building at the time the fire broke out. It has therefore been decided to make a minute examination of the ruins, but by fast, as rapidly as possible.

The electric light company had a number of men in the lower part of the building starting wire when the fire broke out and several of these are still missing. Four Columbian guards are still unaccounted for.

There are about a hundred people who have been or are still missing, and the search continues to identify the bodies discovered. In numerous instances these are World's Fair visitors, whose friends do not even know that they were in the neighborhood of the building, and it is therefore probable that most of them will turn up.

Many inquiries came from Springfield, Ill., as to the condition of Lieutenant John H. Freeman of his company. There is no word yet from him, but he was one of the first to reach the top of the burning shaft consequently one of the first victims of the fire. His charred body has been recovered and is now being identified by the coroner.

Through the features of the man, he was recognized as Freeman, who only entered the World's Fair department a few weeks ago. He was for many years chief fire marshal at Springfield, but recently had been promoted through change of altitude to the rank of captain. He has been a favorite among the women of Springfield, and they are all anxious to know if he is still alive.

Many inquiries came from Springfield, Ill., as to the condition of Lieutenant John H. Freeman of his company. There is no word yet from him, but he was one of the first to reach the top of the burning shaft consequently one of the first victims of the fire. His charred body has been recovered and is now being identified by the coroner.

The coroner has issued a general order forbidding the removal of any portion of the building.

General Murphy, electrician, manager of the World's Fair, says that the bodies recovered thus far have been identified as follows:

Norman N. Sherman, electrician, manager of the World's Fair, says that the bodies recovered thus far have been identified as follows:

Henry Olsonson, police officer.

Bennie Murphy, police officer.

John L. Smith, electrician.

John L. Smith, electrician.