SERVITIES.

Who lives for himself alone, lives for a mean fellow.

A new version of an old verse—Loathe the poor Indian.

Reputation is what men and women think of us; character is what God knows of us.

Beecher says that a religion that isn't "mixed" with politics and the business of life, is worth about as much as yeast that is never mixed with flour. And vice versa.

A Western editor has come to the conclusion that the Devil is working in his village just as well as like St. Paul, because they pay so much attention to "things which are behind."

Mistress (to former cook)—"Well, Eliza, what are you doing now?"

Ex-Cook—"Well, ma'am, as you were giving me character, I've been obliged to marry a soldier."

When a man of 70 years of age, and an old man at Mohr's has done, or a man of 70 years old as Eliza is, there is doing, or a man of 80 as Palmerston did, and a man of 75 judge as Sir Alexander Cockburn is doing, old men are not to be disposed of.

The Christian Review believes that most people bound to obey the Ten Commandments as well as laymen, and that they have no right to work seven days in the week. As they cannot take Sunday as their day of rest, they should set apart some other day.

This is the last month that internal revenue stamps will have to be affixed to legal documents, as the new law abolishing all stamp duties imposed by schedule B, except the tax of two cents upon bank checks, drafts, or orders, takes effect on the first of October.

Spirks says that he knows just the kind of dwelling his wife wants, because she has described it to him. She wants a house large enough to accommodate a library, a drawing room, a dining room, five bedrooms, nursery, bathroom, closets in every room, basement kitchen, cement cellar, and high attics, all on the first floor.

There is something more than a daily ferry now between Europe and America. In fact the rate is something like a steamer for every twelve hours from the port of Liverpool alone. When to these are added the ships of the French and German lines, we get some idea of the prodigious increase of late in steam communication between the two continents.

An exchange says that "young men in England are now forfeiting their married engagements in consequence of the high price of coal." They shouldn't stand back on that account. They ought to know that many a man's wife makes the house hot enough for him without the use of a pound of coal, and if she doesn't, he can get another or two to help her!

A beautiful finish can, it is said, be given to articles to be starched, by taking one fourth of a pound of starch and working it over and kneading it with a little water, then placing five or six pints of water in a pan and adding to this a very small quantity of powdered borax. A small piece of soap and a fragment of white wax about the size of a hazelnut, and heating the whole sufficiently. This water is then added to the starch, stirring it continually and mixing the two together until the whole is as thick as is convenient for application. If the articles are to be made quite stiff, the strength of the starch may be increased.

Don't try to quench your sorrow in rum and narcotics. If you begin this you must keep right on with it till it leads you to ruin; or, if you pause, you must add physical punishment to the consciousness of degradation to the sorrow you seek to escape. Of all wretched men, his condition is the most painful who, having sought to drown his sorrow in drink, awakes from his debauch with shattered nerves, aching head and depressed mind, to face the same trouble again. That which was at first painful to contemplate, will after drink, seem unbearable. Ten to one the first drink will be again taken again, and right till his victim sinks a helpless, pitiful and total wreck. Work is your true remedy.

The American watch and western institutions of learning have been trying in the co-education of the sexes is attracting much attention abroad. The Englishman's Review for July contains an article on the subject of "mixed Education," in which arguments for the joint education of the sexes are enforced by reference to American colleges. The writer of the article argues, for extending to English girls and women the advantages for education now enjoyed by the other sex, but practically denied to them. In the University at Zurich, Switzerland, out of four hundred students, eighty are women. About fifty of this number, who are mostly Russians, are students of medicine. At the late examinations the women stood the tests as creditably as the men.

How A PRESIDENT IS ELECTED — The question is often asked as to how the President of the United States is elected. We will answer: Each State is entitled to as many electors for President and Vice-President as it has Senators and Representatives in Congress. Hence Pennsylvania has twenty-four electors. In each State the electors are chosen by a popular vote. That is, if there are three sets of electors voted for, those having the highest number of votes are chosen. But a candidate for President, in order to be successful, must have a majority of the electors. If there be three candidates for President, and none of them receive a majority of the electoral college, there is no choice, and the election goes to the House of Representatives. The House must contain in their choice to the three highest candidates voted for by the electors. The Representatives' vote by States, and each State has but one voter; so that the power of Delaware is as great as Pennsylvania. A candidate to be successful must receive a majority of all the States. If the delegation is divided equally the vote of the State cannot be cast, and therefore is lost.
