Elder B. W. Ashton had watched the deceased at his labors in the school-room and spoke of his success in education and of the great love the scholars bore him. The other speakers were Elders U. G. Miller, H. S. Sanders, John M. Cannon and Bishop Albert W. Cavitt.

that every reasonable precaution had been taken against trouble of every kind, and said that the small tornado which destroyed the tent came up so quickly that its onset could not have been foreseen. He states that the tent was promptly at their posts, but they were unable to raise the sides of the tent soon enough. Mr. Clifford says there was an unnecessary scare over the electric wires, and that had the current been on during the disaster no harm would have been done by them as they were carefully insulated. He thinks the accident will result in the building of a large auditorium in Denver which will not be subject to atmospheric vicissitudes. As to the apparent smallness of the attendance compared with the great Boston, San Francisco and Cincinnati conventions, Mr. Clifford calls attention to the fact that in the great cities, the tented settlements, and the throngs, which the less thickly settled west can not do, and that considering distances and populations, the Denver convention was such a success as any other ever held. He is a strong advocate of the favorable acceptance among the Methodists and Baptists of the convention for federation with Christian Endeavor of the Epworth League of the Methodist church, and the Young People's Union of the Baptist church. He does not see how it can possibly weaken the fidelity to their own denominations.

W. A. Pinkerton is in the city en route from an Asiatic trip. He says American capital is pouring into China and Japan, and tourists are there in large numbers. Mr. Pinkerton was not favorably impressed with Hongkong on account of its uncleanliness, and in Shanghai he was hospitably entertained by the "lord high executioner" who carefully explained in detail how he cut off heads. The methods of punishment of criminals in severe in the jails. Mr. Pinkerton found Mr. Colbran, formerly of the Colorado Midland and Santa Fe, and who is doing remarkably well in Korea.
