

occupants out, Mrs. Stevenson striking the ground first and her daughter on top of her. The latter was uninjured. Mrs. Stevenson was taken to her home and Dr. Scott was sent for. It is thought that no permanent injury will result but the patient will be kept in her bed for a few days.

After throwing the occupants from the buggy the horse ran across the street through a grove of trees and completely wrecked the buggy then dashed into a barbed wire fence and broke its leg. Officer Parry was informed of this and he relieved the beast suffering by shooting it.

A driver in the employ of the Sears Paint company, who refused to give his name, but the first part of whose patronymic is said to be "Tom," had a rather lively experience on Fourth South street just east of State at noon Tuesday.

He was seated in a heavy delivery wagon drawn by two horses. A third horse was tied at the rear of the vehicle and taking fright at some object in front of a blacksmith shop, it ran around the side of the wagon, completely overturning it. The driver was pinned beneath. Several persons who witnessed it feared that he was seriously hurt. Then the team started to run, dragging him along under the bed of the wagon. At this there was increased concern as to his safety. Fortunately one of the wheels of the conveyance struck a tree and brought the outfit to a standstill and "Tom" was pulled from his perilous position by a blacksmith without being badly injured.

John Peoman, an old and well known citizen of Bountiful, committed suicide at that place by hanging himself on Sunday morning last.

His son Richard, with whom the old gentleman had been sleeping, noticed his father acting strangely when he arose, but took no notice of it as he remarked he was going out for a morning walk. No more was seen of him until 9 o'clock, when his son was out sweeping a path through the snow to the barn. The first thing that met Richard's eyes in the blinding storm was the form of his father hanging from the cross beam on the hay shed.

It seems that the old gentleman had been worrying of late over financial troubles and during a temporary fit of insanity committed the rash act. These words were found in a Book of Mormon found by his side "Give my books to John (his son). I have been too much after getting money."

A chain was firmly attached to the cross piece by winding it several times around the beam and then hooking it. The ring end of the chain formed a loop into which the old man placed his neck and then swinging from a step-ladder found near by.

In the quo warranto case of E. D. R. Thompson vs LeGrande Young the defendant filed an answer late Wednesday afternoon in the Supreme court to the bills of information and particulars of the plaintiff.

The answer denies that at any of the voting places mentioned in the complaint any votes offered or cast by duly qualified electors for the relator, were by mistake or otherwise deposited in the wrong ballot boxes or that the judges illegally or otherwise threw out or did not count the said ballots; on the contrary it is alleged that all votes were correctly canvassed and it was ascertained that the defendant was elected to the office of district judge.

By way of cross information it is also alleged that at several precincts within the Third judicial district, there were cast about thirty-five votes for the defendant which were by inadvertence of the electors delivered to the judges having control of the territorial ballot boxes for municipal and county officers and said votes were not counted in his favor or included in the total votes canvassed by the Utah commission for the defendant. It is also alleged that at several polling places about one hundred votes for the defendant were wrongfully and illegally rejected by the judges of election and same were not counted for the defendant.

The daily program at the gymnasium of the Mutual Improvement League indicates that the directors in charge are in earnest in their efforts to establish a gymnasium and baths for M. I. members, and reading rooms for the public.

Mr. George D. Pyper has taken hold of the management, and for some time will continue to look after its interests. Classes for women are held at 10:30 and 4 p. m. and 6 p. m., and for men at 8 o'clock p. m. Much interest prevails and the members enjoy the advantages offered by the reading room and baths. A telephone message from Bingham Saturday to Mr. P. A. H. Franklin, president of the New Tintic Mining and Milling company bore the lamentable information of the total loss by fire of the Revere mill a few miles out of the Old Reliable camp.

The mill which treated the ores from the Yosemite mines, was recently remodelled and put in splendid working order, and was valued at about $15,000. About two months ago, the company took out two $5,000 insurance policies in the firms represented locally by W. E. Snedley & Company—one on the mill the other on the bolting works—but on account of Mr. Franklin's inability to get remittances from C. E. Benedict of New York who owns a controlling interest in the Yosemite mines, he had to return the policies, which he did on the 10th inst, thus leaving the properties without a cent of insurance, and causing this morn-ing's conflagration to net them a total loss.

The misfortune is sadly regretted by the company officials, who leave for Bingham tonight to investigate the matter. The origin of the fire could not be learned, as the information received this morning simply stated that the mill had been burned to the ground. Dr. Harry Hunter is manager of the property.

Miss Sarah Hutchings, of Salt Lake City, was in Provo Friday for the purpose of learning the names and residences of the jurors who convicted Tom Williams in September, 1883. Williams was tried in the First district court on a charge of murdering Joseph E. Hutchings at Mammoth, Juab county, in February, 1883, and was found guilty of murder in the first degree, with recommendation of imprisonment for life, and is now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary.

Williams was shot dead in the Mammoth mine and Hutchings was one of the miners working under him. The two men met on a trail from the mine to the town of Eureka, and Williams pulled his pistol and shot Hutchings, giving as a reason that Hutchings had threatened his life. Williams claimed as a defense that threats of Hutchings had been communicated to him and that he believed his life was in danger. A story was given some prominence during the trial to the effect that Hutchings was, or was believed to be, put to work in the mine to watch Williams and others, who were suspected of stealing ore and that this was the cause of his being shot. Several efforts have been made to have Williams pardoned, but they have been thwarted by the efforts of Mrs. Hutchings. Williams's friends are again endeavoring to secure his release and have presented petitions to the Governor for clemency, bearing the names of some of the jurors who convicted him. Mrs. Hutchings claims that some of the jurors whose names appear on the petition have told her that they had not placed their names there nor authorized them to be appended to that instrument, and she will now see all of the jurors who are alive and learn if others have had their names placed on the petition without authority, and if possible get them to sign a counter petition, as she is determined her brother's slayer shall suffer the penalty of his crime.

Williams has been a model prisoner and is the penitentiary barber. His eyesight is falling and he is aging rapidly under his enforced confinement. He was 28 years of age at the time of the murder and his victim was 32.

Paul Bauder, who was struck by a San Francisco street car on February 26th, died at the hospital Saturday night. His leg was injured so that amputation was necessary, but he refused to allow the surgeons to operate.

George Willey, aged 21, residing with his parents near Algerine, Cal., was found dead in his sleeping apartments in the barn Saturday morning. He had placed the muzzle of a 22-caliber pistol in his mouth and sent the leaden bullet into his brain. At times the boy was subject to spells of deep melancholia, and was thus afflicted when he took his life.
