

A MANAGING WIFE.

[CONCLUDED.]

He added, "As I before allowed you one-half of my income for household expenses, it is no more than fair that I should do so now. That will give you a better chance to save up a part of it than before. Indeed I don't know how you have succeeded in saving anything thus far."

As before, Mrs. Newton merely said she had succeeded in saving something, without specifying the sum. Her allowance was increased to six hundred dollars, but her expenses were not proportionally increased at all, so that her saving in the year swelled the aggregate sum to the saving bank to six hundred dollars.

Mr. Newton on the contrary, in spite of his increased salary, was no better off at the end of the year than before. His expenses had increased by a hundred dollars, though he would have found it difficult to tell in what way his comfort or happiness had been increased thereby.

In spite of his blindness in respect to his own affairs, Mr. Newton was an excellent man in regard to business, and his services were valuable to his employers. They accordingly increased his salary from time to time till it reached sixteen hundred dollars. He had steadily preserved the custom of assigning one-half to his wife for the same purpose as heretofore, and he never thought to inquire whether she found it necessary to employ the whole or not.

Thus ten years rolled away. During that time Mr. Newton lived in the same hired house, for which he had paid an annual rent of one hundred and fifty dollars. Latterly, however, he had become disaffected with it. It had passed into the hands of a new landlord who was not disposed to keep it in repair which he considered desirable.

About this time a block of excellent houses were erected by capitalists, who designed to sell or let them as they had opportunity. They were more modern and much better arranged than the one in which Mr. Newton now lived, and he felt a strong desire to move into one of them. He mentioned it to his wife one morning.

"What is the rent, Ezra?" inquired his wife.

"$25 for the corner house; $300 for either of the others."

"The corner one would be preferable on account of the side windows."

"Yes, as they have a large yard besides. I think we must hire one of them. I guess I'll engage one next week."

"Please wait, Ezra, till to-morrow before engaging one."

"For what reason?"

"I shall like to examine the house."

"Very well, I suppose to-morrow will be sufficiently early."

Soon after breakfast Mrs. Newton called on Squire Bent, the owner of the new block and intimated her desire to be shown the corner house. The request he readily complied with; Mrs. Newton was quite delighted with all the arrangements, and expressed her satisfaction.

"Are those houses for sale, or to let?" she enquired. "Either," said the owner.

"The rent is I understand $25."

"Yes, I consider the corner house worth at least $25 more than the rest."

"And what do you charge for the house, to a cash purchaser?" asked Mrs. Newton, with subdued eagerness.

"$4,000 cash," was the reply; and that is but a small advance from the cost.

"Very well, I will buy it of you," added Mrs. Newton.

Understand you to say," asked the squire, scarcely believing his ears.

"I repeat that I will buy this house of you at your price and pay you the money within a week."

Then the house is yours. But your husband said nothing of his intention, and in fact I did not know."

"That he had the money to invest, I suppose you would say. Neither does he know it, and I must ask you to keep it from him for the present."

The next morning Mrs. Newton invited her husband to take a walk, but without specifying the direction.

"They soon stood in front of the house he desired to live in. "Wouldn't you like to go in," she inquired.

"Yes, it's a pity we haven't got the key."

"I have the key," said his wife and forthwith walked up the steps and proceeded to open the door.

"When did you get the key of Squire Bent?" asked her husband.

"Yesterday when I bought the house," said his wife quietly.

Mr. Newton gazed at his wife in profound astonishment.

"What on earth do you mean, Elizabeth," he enquired.

"Just what I say. The house is mine, and what is mine is thine. So the house is yours, Ezra."

"Where in the name of goodness did you raise the money?" asked her husband, in amazement still as great as ever.

"I haven't been a managing wife for ten years for nothing," said Mrs. Newton smiling.

With some difficulty Mrs. Newton persuaded her husband that the price of the house was really the result of her savings. He felt when he surveyed the commodious arrangements of the new house that he had reason to be grateful for the prudence of his managing wife.
