DANGEROUS SPORT.

HOW A YOUNG MAN GOT OUT OF A BAD SCRAPE.

Any one brought up in a country newspaper office knows there is about as much fun and incident there to the square inch as it is possible to crowd into it. Scores of queer things transpired at the office in question which would be entertaining to relate. I have just time hurriedly to refer to one.

A young man in the place answered an advertisement for a wife published in a New York daily. A reply promptly came, and the advertiser proved to be a wealthy druggist, a Cuban by birth, and earnest in his intentions. Letters were rapidly exchanged, and the correspondence increased in tenderness. Photographs were exchanged, the young man sending that of the prettiest girl in the town. Next came from New York by express a handsome set of jewelry, worth at leas $75. The pretended lady exhibited the letters and the jewelry, and the matter became the talk of the town; but with the talk came a day of retribution.

One morning the young man walked into the editor's office looking very woe-begone. "Do you know that I am in an awful tight place?" he said, with justifiable symptoms of alarm. "That Cuban is coming to town on Wednesday. Why, I'll be pointed out to him the minute he steps from the train. I don't want to run away and I don't want to be killed. You know how fiery these Cubans are." The young editor smiled, debated a minute, and then said: "For $5 I will get you out of this scrape." Five dollars! I'll give you $25." The editor wrote as follows:

"It is with great sorrow that we record the sudden death yesterday morning of our talented young contributor, Miss Jennie Jardine of Willow Crook Farm, etc., etc." The names looked real, and were the ones the young man had used. "Well, what then?" he asked. "The regular edition of the paper has been printed; the forms are still on the press; I'll have this set up, remove a local item of the same size, put this in place of it and print one copy. Get your sister to mark it and mail it to the honest fellow you have been deceiving." It was so managed and accomplished its purpose. The broken-hearted lover never visited the place. He wrote a touching letter of condolence to the pretended sister, and the incident was forgotten.—Philadelphia Call.

PROMINENT COLORED MEN.

CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHO HOLD THEIR HEADS UP WITH THE BEST.

Senator Bruce, though he still holds on to his estate in Mississippi, lives at Washington during the winter, and John Lynch, who was one of the presidents of the last National Republican Convention, leaves his cotton plantations near Natchez in the fall and does not return to them again until the spring.

Mr. Lynch was prosecuting the study of law in Washington during the past winter, and the booksellers tell me that he bought many books. He is well educated and cultured, and is worth, I'm told, about $100,000.

Bruce is also rich, and his little boy, Roscoe Conkling Bruce, will have a fortune should his father die.

Fred Douglass does not live in Washington, but his home is so near it that he can reach it by the street cars. He owns a very pleasant residence on the hills above Uniontown, one of the suburbs of Washington. It is worth perhaps $12,000. From his windows he can see the Capitol and the whole city spread out before him, and his home is a part of the Van Hook estate, which was divided into lots and sold on the condition that no colored man should be ever allowed to purchase them.

Representative Harris, the colored Congressman from North Carolina, lives in a three-story brick house in the fashionable northwest portion of the city. His house is in the same block as that of Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, and it is not a stone's throw from the Pendleton mansion, in which Secretary Endicott lives.

Representative Smalls, of South Carolina, boards here in Washington, but I understand he is wealthy and that his daughters have been educated in the seminaries of Massachusetts.

John E. Cooke, the tax collector of the District of Columbia, is said to be worth $200,000, and he has held his present office for 15 years.

John M. Langston, the ex-Minister to Hayti, is rich, and there are a large number of the Washington colored men who own fine houses and valuable lands. I went to buy a lot on the hills above Washington the other day and I found that some of the best property of Washington city was in the hands of a colored real estate agent. Among his property I found a house which I considered a bargain, and upon asking for the owner I was told that he was a colored barber.

George W. Williams, the first colored member who ever sat in the Ohio Legislature, and the man whom Arthur appointed Minister to Hayti, and Bayard refused to confirm, tells me that there are a hundred negroes in Washington worth $20,000, at least fifty worth $10,00, and nearly a thousand worth $5,000 a piece.

A Race of Pigmies.

The adventurous narrator has been wandering for some time in the Arizona mountains, hunting, fishing and exploring. He came at last to that portion of the terrific chasm of the Colorado now known as the Marble Cañon. Here, seduced by the wild and grand beauty of the surroundings, he pitched his adventurous camp for some time. One day while on the trail of a deer he noticed some singular indentations in a lofty cliff of marble that overhung the chasm. These indentations presented such a curious appearauce to the naked eye that he ceased the pursuit of his game to examine them through his field glasses. What was his astonishment when the glasses revealed regular paths cut deep in the face of the solid marble. These paths, though deep, were very narrow, having more the look of trenches. All thought of his deer were now forgotten, the hunter turned his eager attention to the investigation of his singular discovery.

He had noticed that the paths or branches all tended towards a deep recess situated high up on the face of the cliff. Accordingly he began the ascent of the cliff from the land side, and after an hour's severe toil stood upon the summit of the dizzy eminence. He had marked well the position of the recess in the face of the cliff, and was delighted to find that the descent from the summit was less perpendicular in the direction of the locality he sought than elsewhere. He could even discern a species of platform which seemed to be situated exactly at the mouth of the recess. Scrambling back by the way he had ascended he proceeded to his camp, and returned with a long and stout rope. Fastening this to the trunk of a storm-beaten pine which stood upon the summit of the cliff, he carefully knotted it a distance of 12 to 15 inches, lowered it over the edge of the precipice and trusted himself to its strength. Hand under hand down he went, swinging over the dizzy and perilous depths of the terrific marble canyon. At last his foot touched the rocky platform in front of the recess and he found himself at his goal. And now indeed a singular sight presented itself. In front of him was a miniature dwelling embedded in the recess. This dwelling was perfect in all its appointments, though these appointments were of the rudest kind. It had certainly been fashioned by human hands, and those hands, though small, had evidently been industrious and guided by intelligence. The marble dwelling boasted doors scarcely 15 inches high, and the tiny windows which lighted up the front were scarcely the span of a baby's hand. These doors and windows were nothing more than holes in the walls of the dwelling and through them the various apartments could be seen. There were accommodations, apparently, for some 8 or 10 little persons, and scattered about were many utensils of use and ornament. These things were fashioned from the clear-veined marble and bore the look of children's toys rather than the household goods of grown folks. The paths which converged to the entrance of the dwelling from all parts of the cliff face were some 10 to 12 inches in depth, and must have been cut with enormous labor by men whose stature could not have exceeded a foot.]

Our adventurer, after concluding his observations, grasped his rope, and after a perilous ascent again stood on the summit of the mighty cliff, in whose face the pigmy race of old had hollowed and hewn their dwelling place. Who these little folks were, how they lived and how they died, are secrets buried forever in the mighty tombs of the past. They may have died one by one in the course of nature, or the race, like their prototypes of old, may have been raided and devoured collectively by cranes, a great number of which birds frequent the locality.—San Francisco Call.

Talmage's Mishap.

One of the wet days recently the Rev. Dr. De Witt Talmage, Brooklyn's noted preacher, received a visit from a wealthy old lady who is one of his staunchest friends and admirers. When she rose to go the doctor, with his usual courtesy, accompanied her to the door, and noticing that the stone steps were slippery, said: "Be careful, madam. You had better take my arm." The old lady took his arm, and instantly was seized with passionate regret, for the doctor's feet flew from under him and he and his companion tobogganed down the flight like lightning, bumping their bustles on every step with merciless emphasis. When they reached the sidewalk they rolled over and over each other in what looked like a Graeco-Roman wrestling match. The doctor was first on his feet, and he helped the old lady up as best he could; but he has a keen sense of the ludicrous, and, having seen that the partner of his flight was unharmed, he had gone off into fits of laughter. The old lady didn't laugh at all. She walked to her carriage as best she could and drove sadly away. Half an hour later one of her iservants brought the following note to the doctor: "Mrs. —— presents her compliments to Mr. Talmage, and desires to know if he was injured. She herself is unhurt," The answer was this; "Dr. Talmage presents his compliments to Mrs. ——, and is pleased to learn that she is uninjured. He himself hurt nothing but his dignity."

When She Spoke.

She was a sweet-faced, blue-eyed young girl, with great waves of golden hair brushed carelessly back from a noble-looking, snow-white brow. Her ruby lips were full and sweet. Innocence itself was in her great blue eyes. Fair and sweet was she in all the purity and guilelessness of her fresh young womanhood.

Two young men had long been watching her with eager interest. Her glorious beauty had enthralled them.

"What a superb girl!" said one. "Never was lily fairer!"

"How I would love to hear her speak!" said the other. "No 'sweet bells jangled' could be like the words she must utter with such lips as those, and a face like that!"

She spoke. A friend came down the aisle, and said carelessly,—

"A cold day, Miss D——."

The full red lips parted slowly, the beautiful head turned with superb grace, a smile of seraphic sweetness illuminating the noble features; soft and sweet was her artless answer—

"Well, I should smirk to twitter! Cold ain't no name for it!"

Airing Their New Titles.

Chase and Wiggin, both of them famous stutterers, belonged to the militia in the old days when everybody in New Hampshire was in the militia, and the organization was mainly fictitious. Chase and Wiggin happened to be ranking captains in one of these paper regiments at a time when the colonel of the regiment died and the major moved out of the State. In the due course of official red-tape, Wiggin received his commission as colonel of the regiment, and Chase as major. Both men were considerably "set up" by their new titles, and naturally felt like apprising the whole village of the promotion; but they were dignified men, and of course didn't care to go around telling everybody. So Chase started out, and went from one store to another, poking in his head just far enough into each door to say:

"H-h-h-hev you seen C-c-c-colonel J-j-j ack Wiggin?"

Nobody had seen him, but everybody caught the new title.

And presently Wiggin started in a similar pilgrimage through the town. Thrusting his head through the door of the first grocery store he came to, he stuttered out:

"H-h-h have you seen M-m-major Jim Ch ch-ch-chase?"

Of course they had seen Maj. Jim Chase, and so informed him, and by the time he overtook the major at the end of the village and congratulated him warmly, the appointments had been, so to speak, officially gazetted throughout the town of Exeter.—Boston Record.

Swine are not treated fairly. They are hung first and tried afterward.—Haverhill Gazette. So is a door.

There is a very common belief among some young people that they must, immediately after an introduction, begin a discussion of books and literary matters generally. Here is a specimen conversation, accidentally and unintentionally overheard by me a day or two ago:

"Do you like Shakspeare?"

"Yes. Do you?"

"Yes. I think Shakspeare is grand."

"So do I. I think he is grand."

I think myself that a book about which 10,000 other books have been written, must be somewhat "grand."

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown.

A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.

All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.
