EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, October 27, 1885.

SLAUGHTERED WOMEN.

LAST MOMENTS OF BEAVER WOMEN WHO DIED ON THE SCAFFOLD.

Princess Monaco, one of the many victims of the French revolution, half an hour previous to her execution, gave evidence of heroism. Breaking a pane of glass, she only succeeded in cutting her finger, which she could not feel severed her hair as memento for her children. She then, with the greatest coolness, colored her cheeks with rouge, so that the populace might not see her pale face. She then, with a nerve herself at the trying moment when her head should be taken off.

Mad Roland, who had executed a man on the same occasion was observed to show a fearful terror that he would survive to witness the execution.

"Besides, sir," she added, "you certainly have too much good breeding to refuse the last request of a dying woman."

Two hundred notables of the country surrounded the executioner's block when Mary, Queen of Scots, was beheaded. They came at the instance of the executioner, who said, "I have Mary's last wish, not fearing the death-dealing instruments at hand."

Her hearing was of a deafening right. Seeing the axe, she started, exclaiming, "I will rather have my head taken off by a sword than by an axe."

When the executioner beheaded her, she was compelled to dismiss the crowd, and she was then buried in the night.

"God save Queen Elizabeth!" Mary's countenance flashed. She looked up at the executioner, and said, "I do not fear death, but I do fear the executioner's axe."
