The tendency of mine managers to exclude people from the properties under their charge and deny the public knowledge of underground condi-tions that they and their friends may benefit by using their exclusive knowl-edge in dealing in the securities of the company, should be opposed and, if necessary legislated against. The humblest should be apposed antitla humblest that may affect the value of his stock, and, will be sustained by the courts in his efforts to gain this information. There are one or two properties in Tintic from which stockholders are excluded and no accurate information will be furnished. One of these is the Tetro, in which several hundred people have invested their money and paid their proportion of the monthly assess-ments that have kept the treasury supplied with the sinews of war. These people are entitled to know in what condition their property is.—Tin-
