

DESERET EVENING NEWS

DESERET NEWS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, — March 15, 1894.

The DESERET EVENING NEWS is published at Salt Lake City, U. S. A., every day except Saturday and Sunday.

Price 25 cents. Superior Edition 50 cents.

Subscription price—Weekly News is issued on Tuesday and Friday of each week.

The present WANTED is magazine form is published monthly.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Per Month.	Price.
1 month.	$2.00
3 months.	$5.00
6 months.	$10.00
1 year.	$20.00
2 years.	$40.00
3 years.	$60.00
4 years.	$80.00
5 years.	$100.00

For Subscriptions or Works to Advertise.

Our Subscribers will receive 2 vols. of the "Deseret News" and one copy of the "Deseret Evening News" weekly.

Subscriptions changing their names should change their name to us before we receive them.

The NEWS Books at the present time have been sold out and are no longer available.

41: CONFIRMATION ARTICLE IN ADDITION TO DESERET NEWS PUBLISHING CO.
Telephone No.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Sixty-fourth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will convene in the Tabernacle Hall, Lake City, at 10 o'clock on Friday morning, April 10, 1894.

The officers and members of the Church generally are cordially invited to attend the meeting of the Conference.

WILFRED WOODRUFF,
Ulysses Q. Cannon,
Joseph F. Smith,
First Presidency.

THE LEGISLATURE.

While party organs had no concern with the late Legislature, individually and collectively, the News, from its non-partisan standpoint, will discharge the duty of informing the people of the Territory what kind of a body it really was, and will suggest how it may be improved upon. When another general election shall come around, freedom is but an interval apart from the election of Friday evening, so opportunity will be given for amendment that might have remained unnoticed.

Space will not permit a prolix discussion of the various measures that have been enacted and approved thus far, those of them being necessary, more or less, generally speaking, while the Legislature has suggested, submitted and they have been passed, the people will appreciate the unanimous spirit that has characterized the session, and will be pleased to carry it to their election, through a resolution that the Territory is regarded as in a condition of being apportioned.

The volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

We sincerely trust that the Legislature will be a model of good work, and will be a credit to the State.

There were some men in the Assembly who were great speakers, and would be valuable to any body were their abilities directed to disinterested efforts to benefit the public welfare. There were others whose abilities, or rather lack of it, constituted constant surprise that they should ever have landed in the Legislature. Greatness continues to turn upon individuals who were born here to it, and could never have attained it but for the throbbing pulse.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a condensed review of the more important bills that were introduced, and failed or passed. From this record it will appear that some good work, and but little that is likely to prove really bad, was accomplished. Determined efforts were made, however, to secure the passage of certain measures which, had they become law, would have resulted in immeasurable damage to the Territory.

Opposition to the financial legislation that was attempted.

In this connection a certain loss of statehood was presented to the legislature, that applied to them individually, and, in our opinion, was a fair measure of their motives.

Whether they were to correct a patent injustice in the proposed tax laws, and at the same time increase the public revenue, or would they rise to a higher and broader view of the situation, and, for the sake of the vast benefits to be gained by a frank and enterprising policy, vote with an open mind, without regard to party slight interests? The consequential influence of business men and financiers and of a territorial press that was practically united upon this question, regardless of party politics, was not overlooked upon the passing of the bill.

To pursue the water course, so to speak, it appears that the Legislature would give up a tax on stocks, and the highest financial interests of the commercial world, according to the balance, "Baptized," that danger is past.

There was an evil which existed, a marked effect upon legislation at this session, and, in fact, manifested itself in it. While it is to be hoped will never be experienced in another Utah legislative body, the example will. The Republican cause was never sustained by more than a bare majority of its members, but it did sustain the entire Legislature, and in this way a minority ruled. To this condition is due the failure to settle the higher educational institutions for which failure the late Legislature, in its judgment, was guilty.

The Legislature will always command the sympathies of the people of the whole Territory. It is a fact that the Democrats of the House were practically solid in their support of Senator's bill to unite the University and Agricultural College, and that several Republicans had prominent to vote for it. But a Republican country, including such a large majority, desired that the constitution should not take place, and members whose duty was given before them, and whose pledge had been given, arrived under the same whip, and did its master's bidding.

The record of George West, in connection with that of the Legislature, nearly comes up to the standard which he had an opportunity to display. His rule of the tax levy still perpetuates a violation of the rule that prevails in nearly all the states, under which the taxes paid by individuals are more heavily taxed, and continue a gross injustice from which Salt Lake County has long suffered. That has proposed to take from the Territorial school tax half a mill, and add it to the Territorial general tax. The amount proposed, apparently by the last mill is about $10,000. This would force most of the funds of the banks into money, and money is now carrying to advance the welfare of the outlying counties, and would have great revenue to the Territorial treasury. The Legislature, probably, was equally opposed to the adoption of a program of economy in order to provide for the poor, but, by the preceding process, a bill was especially related to prevent employment by encouraging certain manufacturers. We do not know to whom the various money bills, to which it is a Democrat, as might naturally be deemed opposed, but to the left, while most of the Republicans in the Legislature were in agreement, excepting from taxation for a term of years to certain manufacturing concerns, financial wars, etc. This measure, which will calculate to the creation of these industries without taking a dollar from the public treasury for this purpose, but it was permitted to die for lack of any action on the part of the executive, no amendment of objection being made, and consequently, as opportunity given for amendment that might have removed the objections.

Space will not permit a prolix discussion of the various measures that have been enacted and approved thus far, those of them being necessary, more or less, generally speaking, while the Legislature has suggested, submitted and they have been passed, the people will appreciate the unanimous spirit that has characterized the session, and will be pleased to carry it to their election, through a resolution that the Territory is regarded as in a condition of being apportioned.

The volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

We sincerely trust that the Legislature will be a model of good work, and will be a credit to the State.

There were some men in the Assembly who were great speakers, and would be valuable to any body were their abilities directed to disinterested efforts to benefit the public welfare. There were others whose abilities, or rather lack of it, constituted constant surprise that they should ever have landed in the Legislature. Greatness continues to turn upon individuals who were born here to it, and could never have attained it but for the throbbing pulse.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a condensed review of the more important bills that were introduced, and failed or passed. From this record it will appear that some good work, and but little that is likely to prove really bad, was accomplished. Determined efforts were made, however, to secure the passage of certain measures which, had they become law, would have resulted in immeasurable damage to the Territory.

Opposition to the financial legislation that was attempted.

In this connection a certain loss of statehood was presented to the legislature, that applied to them individually, and, in our opinion, was a fair measure of their motives.

Whether they were to correct a patent injustice in the proposed tax laws, and at the same time increase the public revenue, or would they rise to a higher and broader view of the situation, and, for the sake of the vast benefits to be gained by a frank and enterprising policy, vote with an open mind, without regard to party slight interests? The consequential influence of business men and financiers and of a territorial press that was practically united upon this question, regardless of party politics, was not overlooked upon the passing of the bill.

To pursue the water course, so to speak, it appears that the Legislature would give up a tax on stocks, and the highest financial interests of the commercial world, according to the balance, "Baptized," that danger is past.

There was an evil which existed, a marked effect upon legislation at this session, and, in fact, manifested itself in it. While it is to be hoped will never be experienced in another Utah legislative body, the example will. The Republican cause was never sustained by more than a bare majority of its members, but it did sustain the entire Legislature, and in this way a minority ruled. To this condition is due the failure to settle the higher educational institutions for which failure the late Legislature, in its judgment, was guilty.

The Legislature will always command the sympathies of the people of the whole Territory. It is a fact that the Democrats of the House were practically solid in their support of Senator's bill to unite the University and Agricultural College, and that several Republicans had prominent to vote for it. But a Republican country, including such a large majority, desired that the constitution should not take place, and members whose duty was given before them, and whose pledge had been given, arrived under the same whip, and did its master's bidding.

The record of George West, in connection with that of the Legislature, nearly comes up to the standard which he had an opportunity to display. His rule of the tax levy still perpetuates a violation of the rule that prevails in nearly all the states, under which the taxes paid by individuals are more heavily taxed, and continue a gross injustice from which Salt Lake County has long suffered. That has proposed to take from the Territorial school tax half a mill, and add it to the Territorial general tax. The amount proposed, apparently by the last mill is about $10,000. This would force most of the funds of the banks into money, and money is now carrying to advance the welfare of the outlying counties, and would have great revenue to the Territorial treasury. The Legislature, probably, was equally opposed to the adoption of a program of economy in order to provide for the poor, but, by the preceding process, a bill was especially related to prevent employment by encouraging certain manufacturers. We do not know to whom the various money bills, to which it is a Democrat, as might naturally be deemed opposed, but to the left, while most of the Republicans in the Legislature were in agreement, excepting from taxation for a term of years to certain manufacturing concerns, financial wars, etc.

This measure, which will calculate to the creation of these industries without taking a dollar from the public treasury for this purpose, but it was permitted to die for lack of any action on the part of the executive, no amendment of objection being made, and consequently, as opportunity given for amendment that might have removed the objections.

Space will not permit a prolix

discussion of the various measures that have been enacted and approved thus far, those of them being necessary, more or less, generally speaking, while the Legislature has suggested, submitted and they have been passed, the people will appreciate the unanimous spirit that has characterized the session, and will be pleased to carry it to their election, through a resolution that the Territory is regarded as in a condition of being apportioned.

The volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

We sincerely trust that the Legislature will be a model of good work, and will be a credit to the State.

There were some men in the Assembly who were great speakers, and would be valuable to any body were their abilities directed to disinterested efforts to benefit the public welfare. There were others whose abilities, or rather lack of it, constituted constant surprise that they should ever have landed in the Legislature. Greatness continues to turn upon individuals who were born here to it, and could never have attained it but for the throbbing pulse.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a condensed review of the more important bills that were introduced, and failed or passed. From this record it will appear that some good work, and but little that is likely to prove really bad, was accomplished. Determined efforts were made, however, to secure the passage of certain measures which, had they become law, would have resulted in immeasurable damage to the Territory.

Opposition to the financial legislation that was attempted.

In this connection a certain loss of statehood was presented to the legislature, that applied to them individually, and, in our opinion, was a fair measure of their motives.

Whether they were to correct a patent injustice in the proposed tax laws, and at the same time increase the public revenue, or would they rise to a higher and broader view of the situation, and, for the sake of the vast benefits to be gained by a frank and enterprising policy, vote with an open mind, without regard to party slight interests? The consequential influence of business men and financiers and of a territorial press that was practically united upon this question, regardless of party politics, was not overlooked upon the passing of the bill.

To pursue the water course, so to speak, it appears that the Legislature would give up a tax on stocks, and the highest financial interests of the commercial world, according to the balance, "Baptized," that danger is past.

There was an evil which existed, a marked effect upon legislation at this session, and, in fact, manifested itself in it. While it is to be hoped will never be experienced in another Utah legislative body, the example will. The Republican cause was never sustained by more than a bare majority of its members, but it did sustain the entire Legislature, and in this way a minority ruled. To this condition is due the failure to settle the higher educational institutions for which failure the late Legislature, in its judgment, was guilty.

The Legislature will always command the sympathies of the people of the whole Territory. It is a fact that the Democrats of the House were practically solid in their support of Senator's bill to unite the University and Agricultural College, and that several Republicans had prominent to vote for it. But a Republican country, including such a large majority, desired that the constitution should not take place, and members whose duty was given before them, and whose pledge had been given, arrived under the same whip, and did its master's bidding.

The record of George West, in connection with that of the Legislature, nearly comes up to the standard which he had an opportunity to display. His rule of the tax levy still perpetuates a violation of the rule that prevails in nearly all the states, under which the taxes paid by individuals are more heavily taxed, and continue a gross injustice from which Salt Lake County has long suffered. That has proposed to take from the Territorial school tax half a mill, and add it to the Territorial general tax. The amount proposed, apparently by the last mill is about $10,000. This would force most of the funds of the banks into money, and money is now carrying to advance the welfare of the outlying counties, and would have great revenue to the Territorial treasury. The Legislature, probably, was equally opposed to the adoption of a program of economy in order to provide for the poor, but, by the preceding process, a bill was especially related to prevent employment by encouraging certain manufacturers. We do not know to whom the various money bills, to which it is a Democrat, as might naturally be deemed opposed, but to the left, while most of the Republicans in the Legislature were in agreement, excepting from taxation for a term of years to certain manufacturing concerns, financial wars, etc.

This measure, which will calculate to the creation of these industries without taking a dollar from the public treasury for this purpose, but it was permitted to die for lack of any action on the part of the executive, no amendment of objection being made, and consequently, as opportunity given for amendment that might have removed the objections.

Space will not permit a prolix

discussion of the various measures that have been enacted and approved thus far, those of them being necessary, more or less, generally speaking, while the Legislature has suggested, submitted and they have been passed, the people will appreciate the unanimous spirit that has characterized the session, and will be pleased to carry it to their election, through a resolution that the Territory is regarded as in a condition of being apportioned.

The volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

We sincerely trust that the Legislature will be a model of good work, and will be a credit to the State.

There were some men in the Assembly who were great speakers, and would be valuable to any body were their abilities directed to disinterested efforts to benefit the public welfare. There were others whose abilities, or rather lack of it, constituted constant surprise that they should ever have landed in the Legislature. Greatness continues to turn upon individuals who were born here to it, and could never have attained it but for the throbbing pulse.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a condensed review of the more important bills that were introduced, and failed or passed. From this record it will appear that some good work, and but little that is likely to prove really bad, was accomplished. Determined efforts were made, however, to secure the passage of certain measures which, had they become law, would have resulted in immeasurable damage to the Territory.

Opposition to the financial legislation that was attempted.

In this connection a certain loss of statehood was presented to the legislature, that applied to them individually, and, in our opinion, was a fair measure of their motives.

Whether they were to correct a patent injustice in the proposed tax laws, and at the same time increase the public revenue, or would they rise to a higher and broader view of the situation, and, for the sake of the vast benefits to be gained by a frank and enterprising policy, vote with an open mind, without regard to party slight interests? The consequential influence of business men and financiers and of a territorial press that was practically united upon this question, regardless of party politics, was not overlooked upon the passing of the bill.

To pursue the water course, so to speak, it appears that the Legislature would give up a tax on stocks, and the highest financial interests of the commercial world, according to the balance, "Baptized," that danger is past.

There was an evil which existed, a marked effect upon legislation at this session, and, in fact, manifested itself in it. While it is to be hoped will never be experienced in another Utah legislative body, the example will. The Republican cause was never sustained by more than a bare majority of its members, but it did sustain the entire Legislature, and in this way a minority ruled. To this condition is due the failure to settle the higher educational institutions for which failure the late Legislature, in its judgment, was guilty.

The Legislature will always command the sympathies of the people of the whole Territory. It is a fact that the Democrats of the House were practically solid in their support of Senator's bill to unite the University and Agricultural College, and that several Republicans had prominent to vote for it. But a Republican country, including such a large majority, desired that the constitution should not take place, and members whose duty was given before them, and whose pledge had been given, arrived under the same whip, and did its master's bidding.

The record of George West, in connection with that of the Legislature, nearly comes up to the standard which he had an opportunity to display. His rule of the tax levy still perpetuates a violation of the rule that prevails in nearly all the states, under which the taxes paid by individuals are more heavily taxed, and continue a gross injustice from which Salt Lake County has long suffered. That has proposed to take from the Territorial school tax half a mill, and add it to the Territorial general tax. The amount proposed, apparently by the last mill is about $10,000. This would force most of the funds of the banks into money, and money is now carrying to advance the welfare of the outlying counties, and would have great revenue to the Territorial treasury. The Legislature, probably, was equally opposed to the adoption of a program of economy in order to provide for the poor, but, by the preceding process, a bill was especially related to prevent employment by encouraging certain manufacturers. We do not know to whom the various money bills, to which it is a Democrat, as might naturally be deemed opposed, but to the left, while most of the Republicans in the Legislature were in agreement, excepting from taxation for a term of years to certain manufacturing concerns, financial wars, etc.

This measure, which will calculate to the creation of these industries without taking a dollar from the public treasury for this purpose, but it was permitted to die for lack of any action on the part of the executive, no amendment of objection being made, and consequently, as opportunity given for amendment that might have removed the objections.

Space will not permit a prolix

discussion of the various measures that have been enacted and approved thus far, those of them being necessary, more or less, generally speaking, while the Legislature has suggested, submitted and they have been passed, the people will appreciate the unanimous spirit that has characterized the session, and will be pleased to carry it to their election, through a resolution that the Territory is regarded as in a condition of being apportioned.

The volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

Finally, we are quite prepared to believe that when next it shall become the duty of the people of Utah to choose a Legislature, they will look to the Legislature, the volume of session laws will not be very bulky, and on the whole this session will be acceptable.

We sincerely trust that the Legislature will be a model of good work, and will be a credit to the State.

There were some men in the Assembly who were great speakers, and would be valuable to any body were their abilities directed to disinterested efforts to benefit the public welfare. There were others whose abilities, or rather lack of it, constituted constant surprise that they should ever have landed in the Legislature. Greatness continues to turn upon individuals who were born here to it, and could never have attained it but for the throbbing pulse.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a condensed review of the more important bills that were introduced, and failed or passed. From this record it will appear that some good work, and but little that is likely to prove really bad, was accomplished. Determined efforts were made, however, to secure the passage of certain measures which, had they become law, would have resulted in immeasurable damage to the Territory.

Opposition to the financial legislation that was attempted.

In this connection a certain loss of statehood was presented to the legislature, that applied to them individually, and, in our opinion, was a fair measure of their motives.

Whether they were to correct a patent injustice in the proposed tax laws, and at the same time increase the public revenue, or would they rise to a higher and broader view of the situation, and, for the sake of the vast benefits to be gained by a frank and enterprising policy, vote with an open mind, without regard to party slight interests? The consequential influence of business men and financiers and of a territorial press that was practically united upon this question, regardless of party politics, was not overlooked upon the passing of the bill.

To pursue the water course, so to speak, it appears that the Legislature would give up a tax on stocks, and the highest financial interests of the commercial world, according to the balance, "Baptized," that danger is past.

There was an evil which existed, a marked effect upon legislation at this session, and, in fact, manifested itself in it. While it is to be hoped will never be experienced in another Utah legislative body, the example will. The Republican cause was never sustained by more than a bare majority of its members, but it did sustain the entire Legislature, and in this way a minority ruled. To this condition is due the failure to settle the higher educational institutions for which failure the late Legislature, in its judgment, was guilty.

The Legislature will always command the sympathies of the people of the whole Territory. It is a fact that the Democrats of the House were practically solid in their support of Senator's bill to unite the University and Agricultural College, and that several Republicans had prominent to vote for it. But a Republican country, including such a large majority, desired that the constitution should not take place, and members whose duty was given before them, and whose pledge had been given, arrived under the same whip, and did its master's bidding.

The record of George West, in connection with that of the Legislature, nearly comes up to the standard which he had an opportunity to display. His rule of the tax levy still perpetuates a violation of the rule that prevails in nearly all the states, under which the taxes paid by individuals are more heavily taxed, and continue a gross injustice from which Salt Lake County has long suffered. That has proposed to take from the Territorial school tax half a mill, and add it to the Territorial general tax. The amount proposed, apparently by the last mill is about $10,000. This would force most of the funds of the banks into money, and money is now carrying to advance the welfare of the outlying counties, and would have great revenue to the Territorial treasury. The Legislature, probably, was equally opposed to the adoption of a program of economy in order to provide for the poor, but, by the preceding process, a bill was especially related to prevent employment by encouraging certain manufacturers. We do not know to whom the various money bills, to which it is a Democrat, as might naturally be deemed opposed, but to the left, while most of the Republicans in the Legislature were in agreement, excepting from taxation for a term of years to certain manufacturing concerns, financial wars, etc.

This measure, which will calculate to the creation of these industries without taking a dollar from the public treasury for this purpose, but it was permitted to die for lack of any action on the part of the executive, no amendment of objection being made, and consequently, as opportunity given for amendment that might have removed the objections.