HINTS ON TRANSPLANTING.

A Wholesale Way of Shading the Newly Set Plants From the Sun.

Every one understands that a cloudy day is the best possible time for transplanting, and all who have had experience in the matter also know that, although it may be cloudy in the morning, before night it is probable that the sun may be out and pouring hot rays upon the newly set plants. In fact, it is well to afford some shade to such plants for several days after transplanting. In this way they have a chance to send out new roots and get a foothold in the new soil.

SHADING THE PLANTS.

Protecting each plant by a separate cover calls for no little labor. American Gardening illustrates a wholesale plan of dealing with this matter, and fortunately it is both simple and inexpensive. The cheapest kind of sheet cotton cloth is brought in a strip, longer or shorter, according to one's needs. Strips of pine an inch and a half square are tacked to either end of the strip of cloth. To either end of the pine crosspieces are hinged sharpened pieces from the same wood. It is then but the work of a moment to put the whole in place. Where a long strip of cloth is used, similar supports should be placed midway where needed.

When not in use, the legs can be folded back upon the crosspieces and the whole rolled up into a small roll and laid away in a dry place.

Dressing Trees.

To save trees that are beginning to decay in the center from frostbites on the outside an English exchange recommends to empty out the water as far as practicable with a pump and then fill the holes with portland cement formed into a running consistency with water. For economy, two parts of charcoal or small gravel may be mixed with one part of cement, which is almost as quite fresh. When the holes are filled with the cement, allow it to set. Then smooth over the crown with the same material, rounded to throw off the wet, just having it level with the bark around each wound, and over this apply a coat of grafting clay so as to encourage the growth of the bark, which we have known to grow and close over the cement. The thing is to get the water out and keep it out in the future. Clay alone would not do that fact rather accelerates the decay by allowing water to enter.

Live Stock Points.

When a foal is 2 days old, turn it and its mother out into the air and sunlight.

A mare suckling a foal should never be left to grass alone for her food. She needs some grain also.

Never let a foal be left in a pasture or lot where there are older horses than its mother.

The breeders of Red Polled cattle will hold a great show in England in September.

Catch opportunity as she flies past.

Keep a sow and young pigs together in a pen by themselves until they can be put into the field.

While a sow begins to want to wean her pigs, take all the litter away from her but one. Leave that with her a week, then remove it too.

One of Director's sons, Hirster's Jay, combines in himself more fast trotting and pacing blood than any other stallion now living. He is a fine black, 15½ hands high and weighs 1,000 pounds. He has a trotting record of 2:09½.

The sooner the great grazing lands of the west are all taken up and put under private ownership the better. In some parts of the grazing domain yet left the sheep and cattle owners are having desperate and disgraceful encounters over the question which shall have the pasture?

Dark faced or Down sheep are, as a rule, more hardy than white faced mutton sheep.

San Francisco is going to hold a great horse show this coming fall. It will bring together an array of fine horses and beautiful women the like of which has never been seen anywhere.

Steel troughs and tanks for holding feed and water for live stock are coming into use and are very popular where they have been tried. Some foundry and machine companies make a specialty of the manufacture of these vessels.

THEY ARE BOUND TO GO!

WHAT? Our new men's Winter Suits and Overcoats. When? Why on to the heels of all the best dressers men in Utah. They are going there now, that's going fast. Make yourself presentable, like a check in the bank.

Whether you are or not, you certainly will be inconvenienced if attired in one's or seven overcoats. Don't delay, but do the proper thing at once and when you have bought one or two suits you will not feel like hugging the stove every time you return out of doors.
