The Salton Sink.—There will be a consultation of government and Southern Pacific engineers tomorrow at the Salton sink to see what possibly be done to divert the waters of the Colorado river back into the old channel. The salt works of the railroad company are now under 60 feet of water and the level of the river is steadily rising. Unless the river can be turned, it will cut a new channel 100 feet deep back under the diverting government dam and cause the return to arid conditions of over 200,000 acres of now cultivated soil. This will mean widespread ruin to the 50,000 acre of irrigated country devoted to raising cattle and sheep. The salt works and ranches are threatened with destruction through returning aridity.

Manager John Q. Critchlow of Credit Men's association returned morning from an Idaho business. He says politics is boiling hot north, and that it looks as the Gooding for governor and Borah
