STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

A Seven-Year-Old Boy from Terrace Leaves Hotel in Peculiar Manner.

Weber Stake Academy Notes-Weber County Flunuces-Confessed the Burglary.

The seven-year-old son of Mrs. Hays of Terrace, Utah, who is stopping the Lincoln hotel, in this city, left hotel yesterday morning very strangely and has been missing ever The little fellow was with his nother during the early part of the torping and at about eleven o'clock he was sliding down the banister in the hotel when the landlady came into the hall and told him to stop, whereupon the boy said he would leave the hotel if he could not slide, and the landlady said, "I'll lock you up in the furnace room" The boy thereupon dashed out of the front door of the hotel, but nothing was thought of his departure, for some time. When he did not return his mather became alarmed and notithe police and school children, school, and a thorough search of the city was made but the boy could not be found. The mother went to the home Wells, on Pacific avenue, an of Mrs. Wells, to see if he had been unt of the lad, to see if he had been here. Mrs. Wells, said he had been there. Mrs. Wens, said he had been there swinging on the gate, but she did not recognize him, and told him he must not swing on the gate, when he took to his heels and ran down the ret. You feel old. A single day seems almost a year. Hour after hour, from morn till night, you can hardly drag yourself through your work. Even night brings no rest, for you toss about, too tired to sleep.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood. Get rid of these impurities at once. Put your blood in better condition. Build up your nerves.

Take a bottle or two of the only Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla you can buy—that's Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla makes old blood young.

BOULDER.

Rugged Grandeur and Beauty of Eastern Garfield County.

Special Correspondence.

Boulder, Garfield Co., May 1.-This out of the way place is located in eastern Garfield county, Utah, on Boulder Creek, a lovely clear mountain stream of several seconds feet capacity, and is made up of sand flats and white sand-stone ledges. It was used as a grazing ground, during the winter months, when first known to the white man; but in years gone by it was used as a home and fruitful field for the red man, as some of the aged ones feetily to at as some of the uged ones testify to at this time. You can, to this day, see the remains of their tumbled down dwellings, and several places the mark of their canals and ditches that has outlived their civilization. About a dozen years ago, however, a few strong and courageous men hewed their way through forests, over high mountains, down deep ravines, over sand and rocks and finally established them-selves permanently and comfortably in If the reader will take a trip with me to the top of the "Tower of Babel" we will get a "bird's eye view" of Boulder and the surrounding country. We star from the principal sand-flat and on the east is this big mountain of white sandstone, that glistens in the sun like the pyramids of Egypt. We climb up a high knoll several hundred feet higher than any of the surrounding country, and about a thousand feet high, and from its lofty peak it appears though one could almost see to the ends of the earth. That high mountain to the southeast that appears like a dim shadow towering in that is the Navajo Mt., great Colorado river, on the Indian reservation in Arizona. Those two huge mountains in the east are the Henry mountains, so clear and beautiful, and so blue you might think they had been painted; and from their appearance you would think you could almost put your hand on them, yet they are about orty miles away. and behold the great Boulder mountain, with a high black ledge surrounding the top. This big mountain was once a lively volcano. We find several craters and lava rock in abundance, in fact it has thrown its molten mess for more than forty miles around; and one can pick up chunks of lava as for down as the Escalante river. That large mountain with three white spots on its side to the southwest, is the Escalante mountain, and nestling under it on the east is the town of Escalante, distant on an air line about a dozen miles; but what a rough country between. High, rough, white sandstone ledges, one riscounts the other as though each had ng above the other, as though each had ing above the hardest to head off travel of any kind; yet there is a trail from Boulder to Escalante over these canyons and towering mountains of stone. nsafe to travel. places, would hurl both horse and rider down hundreds of feet over solid rock and to death. In the bottom of one of these deep canyons, "death hollow," is a clear crystal stream, rolling on ever to the great Pacific. Though pure and beautiful it can never be used on one acre of ground; its bed and banks for a mile high is nothing but solid rock. Yet with all this ruggedness nature has not forgotten to beautify its appearance. In crossing this stream, I noticed in a few yards of sand, some wild flowers, the tree fern though small, and even the beautiful "maiden hair" fern of Australia. A look at the lovely little valley at our feet reveals about one thousand acres of tillable land with an excellent water supply, a mild climate favorable for all the tender fruits grown in Utah. h as the grape, tomato, peach, etc. with facilities for increasing the water supply by reservoir and redeeming more of the now desert soil. It is to be hoped that ere long Boulder's population will be doubled, and that her ple though in an "out of the way" shall be prospered and blessed both spiritually and temporally, and be contented and happy, though hidden miles away from the rest of the world.

ing, and running to the tent found it had disappeared. She began screaming and attracted the other Indians. They gave pursuit, following the cries of the baby as long as they could be heard, but when these ceased, it being dark, it was futile to attempt any search. The Indians hurried to Glenwood in a state of terror and told of their misfortune, but they were not believed. The following day, however, a couple of men rode over the moun-tain, and found here and there pieces of clothing which the unfortunate mother identified as having been wrap-

As further proof of her loss she returned to Glenwood a few days later to get relief for lack of breast nursing. The squaw is a small young and has been often seen in Richfield. She spent the past winter here, and frequently brought her infant to town with her. She will readily be recalled s a woman much above the average Indian women in beauty. months old.
