THERMOMETER 89 degrees F. in the shade at 1 p.m. to-day. Fine.

Going Up Again.—Thermometer up to 90 in the shade this afternoon. No frost to-night.

Cooler.— We may have warm weather yet again this month, but the last two nights were not the hottest of the season by a long way.

The Circus Coming.—We had a call this morning from Mr. Claude Williams, agent for Cooper Bailey & Co's Great International Show, which will exhibit on Washington Square on the 23rd, 24th and 25th instants. He intended leaving to-day for the west.

Frost. — There was a frost at Goshen, Utah County, on the evening of the 9th, but not sufficiently intense to injure vegetation. On the same evening there was a slight frost in this city, which also did no hurt, so far as we have learned. The mercury was up in the nineties two days before.

To Order.—When Sam asked the midwife on Tuesday what it was, she answered "A daughter". "Oh! go and get me a son," said he. "All right," responded the old lady, and in a short time she reappeared and presented the son for his paternal admiration and blessing. Sam's cup of family bliss is full to the brim.—Ogden Junction, July 10.

School Trustees. — Last evening there was a meeting of the tax-payers of the Sixth School District, at the School-house, at which Samuel L. Evans was called to occupy the chair. The object of the gathering was to elect a board of three trustees for the ensuing term of two years. The old board, James T. Snarr, Jesse West and George D. Keaton, were re-elected.

Theatre. — There is a treat for theatre-goers at that place to-night. Mr. John T. Raymond appears in his famous specialty of "Col. Mulberry Sellers," in Mark Twain's comedy of the "Gilded Age," assisted by the local dramatic company.

Mr. Raymond will also appear at a matinee to-morrow, and for the last time to-morrow evening. Don't all go for your tickets at once.

The Election in Stockton. — A Tooele correspondent writes of the scenes of the election in Stockton on Monday, which appear to have shocked him considerably. He says—

"The polls were opened in a small house, originally an ice cream saloon, with one small window in front, through which the proposed voting was to be done. The judges' table and the ballot-box (a tea-caddy) were placed about three feet from the window, thereby causing the voter to throw his body half way into the room to be enabled to deposit his vote in the judges' hand and whisper his name in the judges' ear. The People's challengers, being in the minority, were excluded from this room, and compelled to stand in the hot sun, or otherwise desert the polls altogether."

Our correspondent goes on to describe the profanity, drunkenness, ribaldry, obscenity, and illegal voting, which made the place little less than a pandemonium, also the bogus ticket pushing, the voting early and often, the persistent repeating, the voting of aliens and minors, the frauds being openly boasted of by the perpetrators.

He further says—

"Prominent men of the party publicly boasted that they would repeat the fraud as long as they could raise two hundred 'Liberals' in the county."

Many of the citizens manifested a great degree of apathy. According to our correspondent—

"About two-thirds of the legal voters of the county refused to come to the polls, thereby manifesting an apathy criminal in its object and ruinous in its results."

Our correspondent concludes thus—

"The election is won, 'stolen,' as a former 'Liberal' official termed it, and the people of this county, under their own action, have passed under the yoke. Already the dominant party have commenced to lay plans to remunerate themselves for their present outlay, by the removal of the county seat to Stockton, and the building of an expensive court house and other county buildings, which they think will, if the removal can be accomplished, be a fat thing for them."

Normal Institute.

AFTERNOON, AUGUST 10TH.

Prof. Lewis proceeded with Arithmetic, first, however, excusing himself for some remarks which might infringe upon the subject of Theory and Practice. It cannot be held that in schools or even colleges an education is completed. On the contrary it is only begun, for the teacher, in the short time allotted to him, can do no more than lay the foundation for the education to be secured only by the student himself. So in arithmetic we only teach that which by subsequent practice will be better understood. He also showed the necessity of making arithmetic practical otherwise than in name.

The difficulty of understanding decimal fractions he believed to be caused by not understanding the decimal point. He considered this merely as a mark of convenience, the unit itself being the true dividend point, as we find tens on its left and tenths on its right. Ratio and Proportion should be fully explained, in order that their difference may be fully appreciated. Cause and Effect, the true method of Proportion, according to the lecturer's experience, was not fully enough explained in our textbooks.

Miss Peery sang.

Mr. Wright commenced his lecture on Oral Arithmetic, illustrating his method by a class of the members. Some objections were made to the addition, but these the lecturer stated would probably be removed in his subsequent remarks.

Prof. Bishop, on "Civil Government in our Common Schools," would state the objects of governments; also the different kinds, modes of evading laws and of their administration; entering, finally, into a close consideration of our own government. Under the last, the duties of a citizen, nature of election, responsibility of public office, departments and powers of government, election of representatives, civil and military appointments, election of President and Vice-President, &c., should be treated. He would take up these different subjects in successive lectures. Nothing can be of more importance to every citizen.

FORENOON, Aug. 11th.

Prof. Monch entered upon the sub-division of calisthenics again, as a part of theory and practice.

Illustration was again resorted to, the lecturer drilling the volunteer class in a satisfactory manner. He illustrated a few common gestures by a number of his pupils who were present and who went through the commands very gracefully. During the fifteen minutes discussion a slight misunderstanding sometimes occurs. Every teacher should remember that, in the Institute, all personal feelings should be laid aside, and those remarks advanced which are not only of a pleasant nature, but bear upon the point at issue.

Prof. M. H. Hardy was pleased to state the subject of the Word Method would be illustrated by Miss Ida Ione Cook. The lady arose and proceeded to show her method, by words written upon the board. Experience has taught that better readers can be made by this way in less time than by the other methods. Some ideas were then given on the substitution of words and correction of errors in reading, after which Mr. Hardie resumed, giving a summary of the different methods advanced, and stating their advantages and faults concisely. The Word Method, from all this comparison, still continued to be the favorite. He showed the necessity of teaching composition at an early age, but not in such a manner as to cause a dislike for the exercise, but rather to induce pupils to express on paper those little ideas which every child has and is willing to talk about.

Miss Ida Ione Cook commenced her lecture on Object Lessons, using pictures for the purpose. The lecture must be heard to be appreciated, because of the detail only explained by illustrations.

Messrs. Parsons and Whitney sang between the lectures, each in his excellent style.

The forenoon session adjourned. The following additional members were in attendance.

The name of Mr. C. C. Shaw, from Cache County, who has been in attendance from Wednesday, was inadvertently omitted from publication on that day.

In addition, the following were present to-day—

Another Veteran Departed.—The funeral services of Father Jonathan Pugmire were held this morning in the 7th Ward New Meeting House, and were attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the deceased. Apostle John Taylor delivered a most excellent discourse, in which he showed how entirely dependent upon God are all human beings for the continuance and conditions of their every day existence. His remarks were replete with most excellent advice, the practice of which is essential to enable the living to qualify themselves for future excellence and glory. The speaker paid a just tribute to the memory of Father Pugmire, who he said was one of those simple, honest hearted souls upon whom mankind cannot look otherwise than with respect.

Elder Elias Smith followed with a few brief remarks.

Quite a large cortege followed the remains to the cemetery.
